IMPORTANT BOOKS AT REDUCED PRICES.

OFFICIAL DESCRIPTIVE AND ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE OF THE GREAT EXHIBITION of 1851, embellished with many hundred beautiful wood-engravings of the choicest works of Art and Industry; with the SUPPLEMENTAL VOLUME, containing additional Illustrations; together 4 large vols. imperial 8vo. elegantly bound in gilt cloth, gilt leaves, new, only £1. 15s (pub. at £4. 4s)

••• The attention of the public is respectfully called to the above splendid record of the Great Exhibition of 1851, which is filled with the most valuable and interesting information on every subject connected with the Wonders of Nature and Art. This is the first time the work has been offered at a reduced price; as the number of copies for sale is very limited, early application is desirable.

"We predict for the Illustrated Catalogue of the Great Exhibition a standard reputation. An extensive series of illustrations is made to embrace every object worthy of elucidation by the artists' power, and in order that the instructive character of the work may be fully sustained, annotations written by men of the highest qualifications are introduced to explain processes, point out the character and uses of objects, and develop in brief terms the rationale of the more remarkable or least understood branches of human industry. It will open up sources of amusement or instruction to every class of taste, and proving equally at home on the drawing-room table, handled by fashionable dilettanti in the study, pored over by the scholar or the man of science, at the merchant's desk as a book of constant reference—in the factory, the foundry, and the workshop, as a repertoire for designs, and as highly suggestive for future progress."—Times.

THE NEW VOLUME OF THIERS' HISTORY OF THE CONSULATE AND THE EMPIRE OF FRANCE UNDER NAPOLEON, the late Mr. Colburn's authorized library edition, in 8vo. in large type. Vol. 12, price 5s.

NOTICE.

* Messrs. Willis and Sothran beg respectfully to announce that they have just purchased the entire Stock and Copyright of the authorized library edition of the above valuable work, which will be continued and completed as early as possible after the publication of the original in France. Vols. 1 to 12 are now ready, price 5s each; Vol. 13 is in course of translation, and the entire work will be completed in 15 vols. Those gentlemen who do not at present possess the first 11 vols. as published by Mr. Colburn, can by giving their names to W. and S. as subscribers to the 12th and concluding volumes, be supplied with Vols. I. to XI. at half price, namely, for £1. 7s 6d, instead of the published price of £2. 15s.

"Of his great and singular ability, this work is a new and convincing proof. His high administrative talents; his wonderful clearness and facility of detail: and that quality of calm, cold, eloquent good sense which makes his oratory in the Chamber of Deputies as unassuming as it is powerful, are prominently impressed."—The Examiner.

"The sale of this work has been unprecedented, ten thousand copies, it is said, have been sold in one day. The third edition is now publishing in France, whilst in neighbouring countries authorized translations, like the present, or pirated facsimiles, issue simultaneously from the press. We readily conceive this curiosity, and believe that time will not deprive the work of its interest, but that no library of any magnitude will be thought complete without this addition."—Post.

"The publication of M. Thiers' History of the Consulate and the Empire is an event of interest not confined to the world of literature. The charms of so facile a style, the method of so lucid a narrative, and the abundance of its authentic and hitherto unexplored materials, place this work amongst the most important productions of our time. During the course of his inquiries on the subject, the ex-Minister has had free access to many sources of information beyond the reach of every other biographer of Napoleon. As keeper of the State Paper-office (gardien de l'arche), he has ranged at will over its stores, and been able to consult a mass of diplomatic papers and other documents, the very existence of which was hitherto known only to a privileged few. Many interesting memoirs, diaries, and letters—all hitherto unpublished, and most of them destined for political reasons to remain so—have been placed at his disposal; while all the leading characters of the empire who were alive when the author undertook the present history, have supplied him with a mass of incidents and anecdotes which have never before appeared in print, and the accuracy and value of which may be inferred from the fact of these parties having been themselves eye-witnesses of, or actors in, the great events of the period."—Times.

Early English Chronicles,

PUBLISHED BY THE ENGLISH HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

A complete set of these valuable Publications, on LARGE PAPER, 29 vols. royal 8vo. finely printed on thick paper, neatly bound in vellum bds. lettered, only £15. Lond. 1838-56

* Of the above edition of these valuable Old Chronicles, Histories, and Documents, many of which are now printed for the first time, only 200 copies were printed for the use of the Members of the English Historical Society. Their value cannot be overrated, containing as they do a greater mass of information on our Early History than can be obtained in any other works, and edited as they are by some of the most eminent scholars of the present day.

"The extraordinary amount of information to be derived from these documents renders their publication an era in the studies of Teutonic scholars; for law, language, and history, they are full of data, without which no inquiry in this field, however industrious and conscientious, could possibly be successful. Germany and Scandinavia have their part too in the collection."—Preface to Codex Dipl. Ævi Sax.

OXFORDSHIRE PAROCHIAL MEMORANDA.

In Current Notes, pp. 30-31, are some interesting memoranda relative to the manor of Glympton. The earliest Register book of that parish, made of parchment, does not commence till "the 25th of June, in the year of our Lord, 1667;" one hundred and twenty-nine years after the issuing of the injunction by Thomas Lord Cromwell, for the keeping of registers. Possibly the following extracts, which with many others, by the kind permission of the late Rev. T. Nucella, I made from that register may be worth adding.

At p. 23, is an entry made by the rector, it appears in 1686, 2 James II., to the following effect.

Memorandum: Least the not demanding any other offerings att Easter then what are given att the Sacrament should be thought a neglect of mine, I am concerned to leave to my successors, this account which I had from some of the most understanding of the parish.

Whereas anciently there was a barbarous custom here for all the house-keepers, and which is worse the (judicious) rabble, to come to the Minister's house on Easter-day after the Sacrament, to demand bread and cheese, and drink themselves full of ale, and in process of time, meate, pigeon pyes, etc. This rudeness was broken off by way of exchange, that is, the quitting the Easter two-pences; and whereas long afterward, my predecessor demanded Easter-offerings, the parish came and demanded their ancient custom, which he was forced and glad to be ridden of. This I had from the mouth of an honest neighbour, who was one of those who came to demand it.

Ita est STEPH. PENTON, Rector.

Under another heading there is a subsequent reference.

CUSTOMES AND USAGES IN GLYMPTON.

1. A Fee Farm: rent payable at Michaelmas to Mr. Samuel Barton. 6s. 8d.
2. A dinner at Christmas, not on any certain day, for such house-keepers as take no almes.
3. The poor who take alms, have one peck of wheat, and one shilling.
4. Noe two-pences demanded att Easter, above the ordinary Oblations att the Sacrament, for a reason ascertained at p. 23. [As above.]

The Glympton register, with many others in the north of Oxfordshire, which I have examined, contains items relative to the sums being collected for the redemption of the English who were captives and in slavery in Turkey; a curious contrast with the present state of the two countries.

ST. ANDREW'S OLD CHURCH, PORTLAND.

This edifice, at the southern extremity of the island, very near to the sea, was erected and dedicated to St. Andrew, in 1475. The tower was plain, and had no bell, it was detached by nearly three feet from the body of the church. The woodcut is from a very old drawing of the principal entrance; inscribed over the doorway—
Psalmes the 122. I was glad when they said unto me,
Let us go into the house of the Lord.

Alex. Pearce. Phil. Dorent. Churchwardens, 1686.

Queen Anne presented this church with a Prayer-book, having the Service of the Healing, for the use of the parishioners; with the following presentation:—

To the Minister and Churchwardens of y^e Church of St. Andrew, in y^e Island and Manor Royal of Portlande.

This Booke of Common Prayer, is given by commande of the Queen's Majestie to the above-named Church, for the use of the Ministers thereof.

ANNE R.

NOTTINGHAM.

Hampton Courte,

May y^e 8th, 1708.

The signatures are those of Her Majesty, and her principal Minister of State, but at what time it ceased to be a part of the church property is a question; it was however purchased recently at a book stall, by a gentleman, by whom it was sent to the Rev. David Hogarth, Rector of Portland, who has recently deposited it as a donation in the Portland County Museum.

From the Act of Parliament, 29 Geo. II., we learn that this church was then in a ruinous condition, occasioned by several settlements in the foundation from time to time; further, that it was in a very dangerous situation, the cliff having fallen into the sea, by which the verge of the remaining part was within thirty-six feet of the foundation; upon these representations, the demolition of the old and much decayed church was commenced in 1754, and the materials used in the new one. Dorchester, May 2.

JOHN GARLAND.

TRADITION OF RICHARD THE THIRD'S BEDSTEAD.

A paragraph in Current Notes, p. 27, has recalled to my mind a circumstance communicated to me some years since, by an eminent English antiquary, respecting the bedstead on which Richard the Third slept, August 21, 1485, on the night previous to the battle of Bosworth Field, at the Blue Boar Inn, Leicester. The bedstead so occupied by the king, according to my informant, is still extant, the history of which, as related by Sir Roger Twysden, is not a little curious.

When King Richard marched into Leicestershire against Henry Earl of Richmond, he lay at the Blue Boar Inn, in the town of Leicester, where a large wooden bedstead, gilded in some places, after his defeat, the bedding being all taken from it, was either through haste, or as a thing of little value, left to the people of the house. Thenceforward this old bedstead, which was boarded at the bottom, as the manner was in those days, became a piece of standing furniture, and passed from tenant to tenant with the inn. This house, in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, was kept by one Clarke, who put a bed on this bedstead, which, his wife going to make hastily, and tumbling the bedstead, a piece of gold dropped out, this excited the woman's curiosity: she narrowly examined this piece of furniture, and finding it had a double bottom, took off the uppermost with a chisel, upon which she discovered the space between them filled with gold; part of it coined by King Richard III., and the rest in earlier times. Clarke concealed this good fortune, though by degrees the effect made it known, for from a low condition, he became rich, and in the space of a few years, Mayor of the town, and then the story of the bedstead came to be rumoured by the servants. At his death, he left his estate to his wife, who continued to keep the inn, though she was known to be very rich, which put some wicked persons upon engaging the maid-servant to assist in robbing her. These folks to the number of seven, lodged in the house, plundered it, and carried off some horse loads of valuable things, yet left a considerable quantity of valuables scattered about the floor. As for Mrs. Clarke, who was very fat, she endeavoured to cry out for help, upon which her maid thrust her fingers down her throat, and choked her, for which act she was burnt, and the seven men who were her accomplices, were hanged at Leicester, some time in the year 1613.

In addition to the foregoing statement by Sir Roger Twysden, I have heard that the bedstead was subsequently possessed by one Alderman Drake; I am however of opinion, that it is not at all likely such a piece of furniture would or could be carried about, by a person like Richard III.; it is far more probable that it had been the best in the inn, and that the gold might have been secreted where it was subsequently discovered, by the king himself, to be available for his purposes after the battle.

Could Mr. Kelly, or any reader of Current Notes say what has become of this bedstead, or in whose possession it now remains?

King Richard's body after the battle, was, it is asserted, exposed for some time, and then buried in the church of the Grey Friars, in Leicester. It is also stated, that King Henry VII. bestowed a monument upon his rival, which, on the dissolution of religious houses by Henry VIII., was demolished, and Richard's stone coffin actually served for a horse trough, at the White Horse Inn, in Leicester.

Downpatrick, May 1.

JAMES A. PILSON.

The tradition quoted by your correspondent, Mr. J. A. PILSON, is well known in this locality, and generally speaking is, in all its details, as an article of faith, popularly believed. Sir Roger Twysden, in his Decem Scriptores, 1652, first placed these assertions upon record; and he is said to have "had it from persons of undoubted credit, who were not only inhabitants of Leicester, but who saw the murderers executed," and from him, these assertions have been transmitted by subsequent writers, down to Miss Halstead, in whose biography of Richard III., they have been garnished by some slight poetical embellishments. The advance however that has been made of late years in the study of archæology, and the distinguished characteristics of architecture, furniture, and moveables, has been the means of exposing many falsely supposed reliques, and the so long vaunted King Richard the Third's bedstead is among the number. Among the most prominent of those who expressed their doubts on the subject, was Mr. J. G. Nichols, who, proceeding to the opposite extreme, in an article some years since in the Gentleman's Magazine, and more recently in the Literary Remains of Mr. J. S. Hardy, edited by him, endeavoured to prove that the whole tradition, which rested solely on the authority of Sir Roger Twysden, was nothing more than "an old wife's tale," nay, that the king never slept at the Blue Boar at all; and still more, that there was no such inn at Leicester.

Without attempting a thorough investigation of these assertions, I shall content myself with noticing the more salient points of the story, and of Mr. Nichols's doubts. That the Blue Boar Inn at Leicester, was well known in the reign of Queen Elizabeth there are ample documentary proofs; whilst the traditional story of the murder of Mrs. Clarke, has since the publication of Mr. Nichols's denial of the fact, been confirmed in the main relation, by the discovery in the Borough Munitment Room, of the original depositions of the witnesses in the case, taken before the Justices of the Peace, at the time of the murder. From these documents, the following facts are derived:—

Shortly before Christmas, 1603, one Thomas Harrison came out of Staffordshire to Leicester, and lodged for several days at the Blue Boar Inn, then kept by Mrs. Clarke. He there fell in speech with Alice Grumbold, a maid of the house, in the way of marriage. Whereupon, she told him, "her mistress had great store of money in her house, and bade him come again some night and bring a secret friend with him she might trust, and there would be means made to get some of her money." Harrison proceeded to Lichfield, and took into his confidence Adam Bonus, who communicated the plan of the robbery to one Edward Bradshaw, and they arranged to meet at Leicester, and carry it into effect. Accordingly, Harrison and Bradshaw, on Friday, February 1, 1604, rode to Leicester, and on the following day, they removed with their horses to the Blue Boar Inn, lay there all night, and staid all day, on Sunday. In the mean time Bonus, who had appointed to meet the others at the Blue Boar, came on Saturday to Leicester, and after some conversation with Alice Grumbold, in the absence of Harrison and Bradshaw, determined not to take part in the intended robbery; and in fact after the murder, he turned 'king's evidence.'

The particulars of the murder are these—Alice Grumbold deposed, that about ten o'clock on Sunday night, Feb. 3, she and her fellow servant, Waters, went into the stable with provender for the horses, and that Bradshaw and Harrison followed them; she then went to the well to draw water for the horses, Bradshaw at the same time returning to the house, where they had left the mistress all alone. On returning to the stable, she found her fellow-servant bound, and Harrison, doubtless according to previous arrangement, seized and bound her also. She was soon however, unbound, and seemingly by force taken by them into the house, to open her mistress's coffers, the first of which was full of linen; the second, full of writings; and the third, contained money. From this last, they took out several bags of money, most of which, having previously brought out their horses, they fastened to the pommels of their saddles. Alice would gladly have gone away with them, whereat they swore "by God's wounds, if thou comest with us, thou wilt both hang us and thyself." They then took her into the hall, and there bound her; Harrison at the same time gave her a linen cloth, wherein was money and other things, and said he would in ten days, come again, to fetch her and it. The money she had was 42*l.* 17*s.*, beside two silver rings, and a gold ring. In her second examination, she added, that after she was left bound in the chimney in the hall, her legs not being fast bound, she got up, and went into the buttery to see how her mistress did, where, being unable to get out again, she lay till morning, when one of the neighbours came into the house to light a candle, and unbound her. Beside the plunder carried off, it appears there were seven or eight bags of 'money or gold,' and certain plate were left behind on Mrs. Clarke's bed. As to the actual perpetration of the murder, no direct evidence appears, possibly the account as narrated by Sir Roger Twysden, may be the fact, and the circumstance of the maid's choking her mistress, may probably be true. Harrison declared that "for his part he did Mrs. Clarke no harm, nor did so much as think to kill or hurt her, but what Bradshaw did he knew not; for to his knowledge, she was living at their going away." He added, Alice Grumbold, "the maid, was the only setter of the match, for they had not dealt therein but by her procurement." She however protested, that although she could not clear herself from the robbery and consenting thereto, she was clear from the murder of her mistress, and asserted "in her conscience Bradshaw did murder her."

The plunder borne off by these robbers was never recovered, they declared they did not know what the bags contained, silver or gold, for in their flight, it was hidden by them in the bank of a ditch near Pooley park, in Warwickshire, but they believed, if it consisted of silver, there was from three to five hundred pounds. Being apprehended on some other charge and imprisoned, Bradshaw, through the instrumentality of Lord Stafford,* was bailed, and on his going to the ditch side for the money, found it had been removed.

They were subsequently apprehended on the charge of the murder of Mrs. Clarke, and brought to Leicester. The result of the trial appears on record among our Hall papers, in the following notice, on a slip of parchment:—

'Our Assizes holden at Leicester upon Tuesday, March 25, 1606, before Sir Peter Warburton, Knt.; at which Assizes Edward Bradshaw was executed for murdering Mrs. Clarke, and Alice Grumbold burned for the same murder.' Harrison's fate is not recorded.

Twysden, it is evident, errs in the date assigned by him, and two, not seven men were concerned with the maid Alice, in this diabolical act. The particulars advanced however establish the tradition as based on fact.

The story of King Richard's bedstead, and the discovery of the treasure secreted within it, rests wholly on tradition. That, now recognized as King Richard's bedstead, is indisputably a fine specimen of the late Elizabethan style, and has no concurrent similitude with those constructed more than a century before. Twysden's statement that "from a low condition Clarke soon became rich, and in the course of a few years, Mayor of the Town," would seem to be a recapitulation of some locally accredited belief, while it affords no evidence as to the discovery of the gold in the way related by those who placed credence in the tradition. Thomas Clarke mine host of the Blue Boar Inn, from the mode in which the money and valuables was garnered by Mrs. Clarke, was possibly of thrifty habit, might have inherited property from relations, or from his long and constant success as an innkeeper; still, certain it is that Thomas Clarke was mayor of Leicester, in 1598-9, and was an illiterate character, unable to subscribe his name. By his will, dated June 15, 1603, he bequeathed part of his property to charitable uses, and died a few days later in that month. Search has been made in the Archdeaconry Court for his will, in the hope that the inventory attached to it would afford some fact illustrative of the history of the bedstead, but the roll for that year is missing. These facts are suggestive, that Clarke during his mayoralty might have had this bedstead constructed for his use; and on his year of official greatness expiring, it was moved to his inn. The murder of his widow in February, 1604, doubtless placed the inn in other hands, and they possibly to draw custom created the fable of Richard having sought repose in that inn, and as any bedstead would answer the purpose, exhibited that on which possibly the ex-mayor died in 1603. This was a period of poetical fancies, the story of Dick Whittington and his Cat had its origin at this time; these romances spread far and wide, and were as eagerly credited by all classes of persons, the more incredible and strange they were in their purport, they were found to be vastly more agreeable, and in some panegyric lines by an anonymous writer, prefixed to Tom Coryate's Crudities, printed in 1611; there are recounted among the 'penny sights' then popular in England, in London, and elsewhere, the following:—

* Edward Stafford, the third baron, who died in 1625.

The lance of John o' Gaunt, and Brandon's still i' the Tower,
The fall of Nineveh, and Norwich built in an hower;
King Henry's slip shoes, the sword of valiant Edward,
The Coventry Boare's shield, and fireworks seen but to bedward:

Drake's ship at Deptford, King Richard's bed sted i' Leyster,
The White Hall whale bones, the silver bason i' Chester.

The bedstead, after having been for several generations in the family of Babington, of Rothley, has lately passed by purchase into the possession of W. Perry Herrick, Esq., of Beaumanor Park, in this county.

There are some other curious matters connected with the subject which would have been worth noting, irrespective of King Richard; among them, the charge of treason, which a few years previously had been brought against Mrs. Clarke, when Mayoress, for having said, 'the Queen deserved a rope, etc.' as also, the particulars of the attempt to procure by bribery, through Lord Stafford, a pardon for Bradshaw.

SHAKESPEARE'S BARDOLPH AND PISTOL.

The muster-roll of artillerymen serving under Humphrey Fitz-Allan, Earl of Arundel, at the siege of St. Laurens des Mortiers, dated Nov. 11, 1435, contained the names of R. Bardoulf, and Will. Pistail. Qu. were these the originals of Shakespeare's Bardolph and Pistol?

VESPASIAN.—The March number of Current Notes, p. 27, notices the discovery of a gold coin of Vespasian at Inveresk; the legend on the reverse, reading Cos ITER TR. POR. Last month, another of identically the same type, and in fine condition, was dug up on the site of a camp near Hawick. The fact of these two coins being discovered within three weeks, in different parts of Scotland, appears to be deserving of note.

STONE CARVING IN GLASGOW CATHEDRAL.

Your Correspondent's notice in Current Notes, p. 39, of the curious corbel in Brechin cathedral, reminds me of a stone carving in one of the crypts of the cathedral at Glasgow; and at this time when the north-landers are apparently about to repair their beautiful church, it may not be altogether useless to caution them not to deal too carelessly with the fragmentary stones lying in the crypts, now wisely left there for inspection, and perhaps might be so placed, that visitors might study them with more convenience.

The stone, of which the enclosed is a correct sketch—has been noticed by the Rev. R. S. Hawker, in Current Notes, 1855, p. 42, where he with great probability supposes it to represent evil spirits preying on a soul in purgatory. I only regret, that the carving alone can convey the frightful expression of the countenance of the unhappy victim.

What the destination and object of this singular fragment may have been, it is difficult to determine; it is probable, however, that some of the readers of your periodical may be able to inform me.

NOTES BY A NUMISMATIST.

ROMAN MINT AT ARLES CALLED, CONSTANTINIA.

In the Sale Catalogue of the Collection of the late Mr. H. P. Borrell, of Smyrna, to lot 834, consisting of twenty-five varieties of third brass coins of the period of the Constantine Family, is the following note—

On one of the coins of Fausta, the exergual or mint letters are CONS. The Baron Marchant remarked a similar example, which he thought singular, because Fausta died before Byzantium was called Constantinople; but the late Mr. Borrell, in his numismatic correspondence with the writer, expressed an opinion that these coins were struck at Arles; for Le Beau, in his History of the Lower empire, expressly tells us that in 316, Constantine visited Gaul, and having conferred many benefits upon the City of Arles, it took the name of Constantine in gratitude to its benefactor; moreover, Constantine Junior, the eldest son of Constantine and Fausta, was born there in the same year, or fourteen years before Byzantium was called Constantinople. As to these coins having been struck in her honour, after her death, except indeed by her sons, that is not probable.

The desire to direct attention to this note, has induced me to transcribe it, in order to avail myself of the occasion to add, that I have recently obtained a coin of Crispus, of the same module, with precisely the same letters on the exergue of the reverse—a discovery, which in my opinion, goes far undoubtedly to corroborate the probability of the hypothesis here suggested.

ST. ANDREW PENNY OF EGBERT, KING OF WESSEX.

Among the numismatic treasures of the Anglo-Saxon period in the National Collection, is a penny assigned to Egbert, king of Wessex, the first so called sole monarch of England. The coin having on the obverse, the portrait of the king, with the legend ECGBEORHT RE, and on the reverse, the legend + SCS ANDREA I is engraved in Hawkins' Silver Coins of England, plate XII, fig. 158; and at p. 55, it is simply described type 7, without comment.

The peculiarity, however of the legend on the reverse, induced Mr. Haigh to suggest that as the cathedral of Rochester is dedicated to St. Andrew, the coin was probably minted at that city after the battle of Ellandene in 823, when Egbert routed the Mercians, and followed up his victory by the conquest of the tributary kingdom of Kent.

Mr. Haigh's hypothesis it must be observed, rests entirely on the assumption that the name of St. Andrew bears relation to the city in which the coin was struck; but, even assuming that fact as a basis of classification, it must be borne in mind that the cathedral of Wells in Somersetshire was also dedicated to St. Andrew; and in reference to that fine old structure, that it was built by Ina, king of the West Saxons, and that several other of the West Saxon kings endowed it. It may therefore be fairly presumed, that as Wells was situated within the original territories of Egbert, the coin in question is much more likely to have been struck there, than at Rochester, a city that was only acquired by conquest, in the twenty-fourth year of the reign of the monarch whose effigy and name it bears.

NOTES ON THE AUTHOR OF WAVERLEY.

I have been again much gratified by perusing the second letter of Sir Walter Scott, printed in Current Notes, pp. 21, 22.* Mr. Ellis presented to me, the copy of the Poems by Bedingfeld and Pickering, which I still possess. Probably, the most attractive piece in the volume is the fragment of Scottish Song, said to have been written by the latter, beginning—

Keen blows the wind o'er Donnocht head;

* If, in Current Notes, p. 14, I was mistaken in the observation relative to the Lines on North Tyne, I was led to the error from Scott's mention of Drayton, to whose principal work, the Marriage of the Coquet and Alwine has direct reference, and none whatever to the lines in question. I also overlooked Mr. Fenwick's tract, and now thank E. H. A., for the light he has thrown upon the subject.

it attracted the notice of Burns, who observed he would have given ten pounds to have been the author. About 1842, several letters passed between the late Captain Charles Gray and myself on this subject, whence an abstract may be seen at p. 373, of the Book of Scottish Song, printed for Blackie and Son, at Glasgow, in 1843. The lyric is there printed with some additional lines by my correspondent. George Pickering was born in or about 1758, at Simonburn, in Northumberland. In 1777, he was clerk to Mr. Davidson, solicitor in Newcastle, and shortly after, had the management of the Stamp-Office for Northumberland, Newcastle and Berwick; but being unfortunate, he quitted the north of England, and after residing some time in Norfolk, in 1798 he went abroad. Twenty-five years afterward, he returned to Newcastle, and resided with his sister, at Chimney-Mills, where he died in 1826. He was buried toward the west corner of the churchyard at Lamesley, in the County of Durham, where a stone bears this inscription—

Sacred to the Memory of GEORGE PICKERING,

Son of

GEORGE PICKERING, OF SIMONBURN, who departed this life, 28th July, 1826,
Aged 68 years.

Erected by his sister ELIZABETH PICKERING, from motives of true affection to her much beloved and esteemed brother.

Every communication written by Sir Walter Scott possesses to me great attraction, and I look forward with much interest to the letters which will appear in Current Notes, connected with his membership of the Newcastle-upon-Tyne Society of Antiquaries, and the Border Minstrelsy. I am also glad to perceive Mr. Maidment contributing to Current Notes; like Mr. David Laing, of the Signet Library, Edinburgh, what he has done in the field of Scottish Literary Antiquities, awakens the desire that he would do still more. His letter is valuable, and has my cordial approval as to Scott being the author of the Waverley Novels. As a further proof of the correctness of his views on this point, I may relate what Mr. Ellis, of Otterburn, told me himself.

On Sept. 25, 1812, Mr. Scott, for he was not then a baronet, visited Mr. Ellis, at Otterburn.* He was on his way to Rokeby, and occupied in the composition of his poem of that name. Mrs. Scott and two children were with him, and they remained at Otterburn for one night only. Next morning Mr. Ellis accompanied his distinguished guest on the road through Woodburn, when they walked over the Roman station of Habitancum, commonly called Risingham, and ascending the hill to the south-east, they saw the figure of Robin of Redesdale sculptured on the face of a huge stone, which Scott examined with great attention. The result of the observations made that morning, may be seen in Rokeby. Subsequently, when the stone bearing the figure was broken, Mr. Ellis communicated all the particulars to Mr. Scott, to which the latter replied, dealing out some sarcastic remarks on the perpetrator of the deed. Nothing more on this matter transpired till 1819, when on the publication of Ivanhoe, Mr. Ellis by referring to Scott's letter, detected towards the close of the Introductory Epistle to that novel, clear and most conclusive proof that he alone was the author.

In these early days, I well remember with what avidity, I read every work that came from the hand of the Great Minstrel. After perusing all his poetry to which I had access, and duly weighing in my own mind, the writer's remarkable genius, on reading the novels, I had not the slightest doubt, they emanated from the same source. In his prose fictions, Scott commanded a wider stage for the performance of his dramatis personæ, introducing many peculiar characters who became known to him among his own countrymen, and who were suitable for a novel, though unfit for a poem. But the same careful individuality was in each preserved—the same creative power every where evident; the effective grouping together of all ranks, and the appropriate names employed—the striking force of the descriptive portions, and above all, in every instance, the complement and framing of a tale that every reader could comprehend, were not to be mistaken. In short, judging from what I saw of current literature, my opinion was that no other individual of the time could have produced them.

Retrospectively glancing over the circumstance of Scott's frequent denial of being the author, we ought to remember, that he was not only possessed of profound sagacity, but that he was a very proud man. In his day, none could better fathom the human mind both in its strength and weakness, and being aware how public curiosity becomes excited in proportion to the impenetrable silence with which a great secret is kept, this very point told most effectively on the popularity of these works of fiction. Again, as he himself said, he was by birth, a gentleman, and if it was openly avowed he wrote novels, the circumstance might detract from his dignity. In this respect, he was not alone, for about the commencement of the seventeenth century, a still greater man, alluding to the plays he had written, which ultimately crowned him with immortal honour, observed—

Thence comes it that my name receives a brand,
And almost thence my nature is subdued
To what it works in, like the dyer's hand :

so, the dread of such debasement undoubtedly influenced Scott to keep his own counsel when he wrote the Novels; and he seems to have made up his mind to repel most pointedly every attempt of prying impertinence to get beyond him. When his position in a business point of view rendered longer concealment impossible, he gave way; but had this not occurred, and had it not been that those works had then acquired a world-wide fame, the probability is, that he had never confessed the authorship; and when he mildly allowed the mask to be withdrawn, his unfading laurels were already won—they encircled the venerable temples and white hairs of that old man, whom to have seen was almost worth a king's ransom, and who hath left behind him a lesson impressive as Solomon's of the vanity of terrestrial things.

Newcastle-on-Tyne, May 9. ROBERT WHITE.

Scott's having abandoned poetical description for prose narrative, as a wider field for display of character appears never to have led to any attempt of a drama for theatrical representation, of which it would seem he entertained some dread. On the rebuilding of Drury Lane Theatre, among other projects of the proprietary for points of attractive advertisement, was one of obtaining at any cost, a play from the Northern Bard; and Elliston was deputed to make the application; it failed wholly. Scott in January, 1812, after five years gratuitous service as a clerk of Session entered upon the salary attached of 1300*l.* a-year; and might therefore be considered as less anxious to profit by the produce of his pen, but on the contrary, it appears to have been a settled principle that led to the avoidance of all association with the drama, as the autograph letter addressed to Elliston, and now before the writer, is conclusive evidence.

Sir,—I am favour'd with your letter, and am much obliged to you for the polite expressions it contains, as well as for your supposing me capable of advancing in any degree, the dramatic art, or the advantage of its professors. As I am very fond of the Stage, which is the only public amusement that I ever indulge in, I have at times, from my own inclination, or at the solicitation of friends, partial like yourself, to my other productions been tempted to consider the subject your letter proposes to me. But upon a mature consideration of my own powers such as they are, and of the probable consequences of any attempt to write for the Theatre, which might fall short of complete success, I have come to the determination of declining every overture of the kind, of which I have received several.

I therefore have only to express my regret that it is not in my power to assist your exertions, which I have no doubt, the public favour, and your own talents, will render successful without such aid, and I am very glad, I have been indirectly the means of supplying new subjects for your Theatre, and am very much,

Sir, your obedient servant,

Edinb. January 6, 1812. WALTER SCOTT.

IPSWICH TOWN ARMORIAL INSIGNIA.

I enclose drawings, with rubbings of the arms of Ipswich, from monumental brasses in the churches of that Town.

The arms on these examples are differently represented, and yet not one is in accordance with the description of the coat particularized in Clarendieux's confirmation in 1561; if that record was correctly copied, of this fact however, no means of ascertaining remains, as the original is believed to have been long since destroyed. Harvey's confirmation, printed wholly in Current Notes, October, 1855, p. 80; describes the lion rampant as regardant. Possibly, it would be of interest to notice this addition to the Curiosities of Heraldry, and therefore, with the drawings and rubbings, have attached an heraldic description of each shield.

I. Arms of Ipswich, from the brass in the church of St. Mary Tower; of Thomas Drayle, Portman, 1500.

Per pale, three demi-lions guardant in pale, joined to as many demi-hulls of ships.

II. Arms of Ipswich, from the brass in the church of St. Mary Key; of Thomas Pownder, 1525.

The Pownder brass in mode of emblazonment bears conclusive evidence of its foreign fabrication. Only one demi-hull appears on the shield, and the coat is reversed, in order apparently to turn the lion towards the centre of the subject, a perversion not unfrequently assumed in Flemish, German, and other continental heraldry.

III. Arms of Ipswich, also in the church of St. Mary Key, on the brass of Henry Toolye, 1551.

Party per pale; on the dexter side, a lion rampant guardant; on the sinister, three demi-hulls joined to the impaled line.

The arms as described in the confirmation by William Harvey Clarencieux, August 22, 1561, are—

Party per pale gules and azure; in the first, a lion rampant regardant, gold armed and langued azure; in the second, three demy-botes of the third.

IV. Arms of Ipswich, in the church of St. Clement, on the brass of John Toye, 1583.

Per pale; in the dexter, a lion rampant; on the sinister, three demi-hulls joined to the impaled line.

COLONIAL PUBLIC LIBRARIES.

A letter dated Melbourne, Feb. 16, affords some intimation of the progress of the public free library of Australia.

On Monday, the 11th inst., the public library was opened by his Excellency, the officer administering the Government. It is a free library, and we owe its existence to the exertions of Judge Barry, one of the Judges of the Supreme Court. He took the Legislature in time when the revenue had increased from less than 300,000*l.*, to more than three millions, and people thought it never would come to an end. He thus obtained money for the building, and for about three thousand volumes. Last year, there was a vote for 3000*l.*, but it lapsed for want of money. This year, that sum is again on the estimates, and as the colony is flourishing, and the revenue is improving, the amount will no doubt be voted and paid. The best colonial library is at Cape Town, but an annual payment for admission is required. The library at Quebec, is also good, but that is not free. Ours will be emphatically a public institution, and I fully expect that in eight or ten years, it will be the finest colonial library under the British Crown. That of the Legislative Council also presents the beginning of a splendid library—but that will of course be confined to the members of both Houses. We adopt the American custom of a joint library instead of the English custom of a library for each House.

FEMININE DELUSION.

The enclosed letter was written by Lord Eldon, in reply to one addressed to him by the aged wife of a Yorkshire Vicar, whose husband had long been engaged in a vexatious Tithe suit in Chancery. The request was to aid her by moving on the slow machinery of that very slow court—she, poor woman, thought that as she was a native of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, and had known and visited the Scott family there, the member of that family who then occupied the Woolsack, would for the sake of Newcastle, etc., use his influence in some powerful manner, to drive on Chancery to decide the case. To enable her husband to carry on the suit, her private property had been mortgaged, and the family had suffered greatly in consequence of the protracted litigation—she therefore in the anguish of her mind wrote the letter to the Chancellor, which drew from him the enclosed reply.

Madam—I have received your letter. With respect to making any application to Lord Lyndhurst, it cannot be made by me; I am sure that as a Judge, he would not permit me to have any conversation with him, relative to a cause which may come judicially before him; and having myself been long in a judicial situation, I could not permit myself to speak to him upon such a subject.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has nothing to do with anything respecting Tithes. Lord Lyndhurst is the Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer, who, with other Judges hears Tithe Causes, but no Judge will permit himself to be told anything respecting a cause but in open Court.

I am, Madam,

Your obedt. Servt.

ELDON.

I may add, that the dilatoriness of the reverend gentleman's country solicitors, was the cause of much delay ; but as soon after the receipt of Lord Eldon's letter, the cause was decided, the old lady fancied her missive had had its effect, and thought he had after all looked to the matter in some way, and had somehow done something to frighten the legal men to bring it to a close.

ANGELS VISITS.—Campbell wrote the Pleasures of Hope when very young, and he may possibly have been indebted to Blair's Grave for the expression—

Like Angel visits few and far between ;

yet both Blair and Campbell may have derived the sentiment from an earlier writer, John Norris, who died in 1711, in whose Transient Delights, occur these lines—

How fading are the joys we doat upon
Like apparitions seen and gone :
But those which soonest take their flight
Are the most exquisite and strong—
Like Angel visits short and bright,
Mortality's too weak to bear them long.

AMADIS DE GAULA.

A friend of mine in Spain has sent me notes of some additional editions of the Spanish romances, which I communicate as supplementary to those forwarded in February last. These editions are all in folio, and I hope those gentlemen in England, who have other editions will give an account of them in your Current Notes.

Another friend writes that in the library at Vienna, are the following editions:—

I.—IV. Amadis de Gaula, Sevilla, 1586.

VIII. Lisuarte de Grecia, Zaragoza, 1587.

XI. Rogel de Grecia, Salamanca, 1551.

XII. Silves de la Selva, Salamanca, 1551.

Ticknor quotes the edition of Esplandian, Burgos, 1587 ; and Mr. Julius, the German translator of Ticknor, notices the edition of Florisel de Niquea, Tarragona, 1584, as having been seen by him,

Some curious questions arise from the dates of these editions, which I hope to discuss in a future letter.

EARLY MERCHANT'S MARKS.

The merchants of the middle ages, however wealthy, were not permitted to assume heraldic insignia, and thus rival the dignity of the gentry, they therefore universally adopted symbolic devices, as marks to distinguish their bales of merchandise, and these marks are at times found delineated on shields, resembling in form those upon which the heralds emblazoned their representative fancies. Hence many an old tomb and church window is found decorated with frequently a very ingenious amalgamation of threaded forms and tracery, at times so complex as almost to baffle elucidation.

The enclosed inscription and merchant's mark is a mural memorial brass, 1586, in the church of St. Mary Magdalene, in Old Fish Street. No name is mentioned, but I presume it commemorates Thomas Berry, Fishmonger, who "gave a message in Southwark, called the Red Cross, with its appurtenances to the poor of the parish for ever."

In God the Lord put all your trusts
Repente your former wicked waies
Elizabeth our Quene most iuste
Blesse her o Lorde in all her daies
So Lord encrease good Councelers
And preachers off his holie worde
Mislike off all papistes desiers
O Lord cut them off with thy sworde
How small soever the gifte shalbe
Thanks God for him who gave it thee

XII penie loves to XII poore foulkes
Geve everie sabothe day for aye.

FIERY BULL.—Who was the person referred to as "the Fiery Bull of Colchester," in the following title—

Ten necessary Queries touching the Personal Treatie ; also a right description of a Cavalier ; with some drops to quench the Fiery Bull of Colchester, by JAMES TASWELL, a True Lover of King, Parliament, Truth and Peace, 1648.

I have read the copy at the British Museum, but that does not shew who was meant by the Fiery Bull ?

May 13.

ENQUIRER.

As the tract is evidently written by a royalist, possibly the designation of 'the Fiery Bull' applies to Fairfax, who refused all personal treaty with the besieged commanders.

BOLINGBROKE'S MISTRESS.—On what authority is it stated in Current Notes, 1855, p. 64, that Lady Bath had been Bolingbroke's Mistress? Lady Bath was a Miss Gumley, daughter of John Gumley, Esq., of Isleworth ; a large fortune, she was the sister of the wife of Francis Colman, Minister at Florence ; and Pope's verses upon her imply the very reverse of any levity of character. IMPORTANT BOOKS AT REDUCED PRICES.

OFFICIAL DESCRIPTIVE AND ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE OF THE GREAT EXHIBITION of 1851, embellished with many hundred beautiful wood-engravings of the choicest works of Art and Industry; with the SUPPLEMENTAL VOLUME, containing additional Illustrations; together 4 large vols. imperial 8vo. elegantly bound in gilt cloth, gilt leaves, new, only £1. 15s (pub. at £4. 4s)

••• The attention of the public is respectfully called to the above splendid record of the Great Exhibition of 1851, which filled with the most valuable and interesting information on every subject connected with the Wonders of Nature and Art. This is the first time the work has been offered at a reduced price; as the number of copies for sale is very limited, early application is desirable.

"We predict for the Illustrated Catalogue of the Great Exhibition a standard reputation. An extensive series of illustrations is made to embrace every object worthy of elucidation by the artists' power, and in order that the instructive character of the work may be fully sustained, annotations written by men of the highest qualifications are introduced to plain processes, point out the character and uses of objects, and develop in brief terms the rationale of the more remarkable or least understood branches of human industry. It will open up sources of amusement or instruction to every class of taste, and proving equally at home on the drawing-room table, handled by fashionable dilettanti in the study, pored over by the scholar or the man of science, at the merchant's desk as a book of constant reference—in the factory, the foundry, and the workshop, as a repertoire for designs, and as highly suggestive for future progress."—Times.

MCCULLOCH'S (J. R.) DESCRIPTIVE AND STATISTICAL ACCOUNT OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE; fourth and last edition, revised, 2 thick vols. 8vo. cloth, 12s (pub. at £2. 2s) 1854

[SEPTEMBER, 1856.]

NEW FACTS RESPECTING ROBINSON CRUSOE.

The original of De Foe's Robinson Crusoe, it is now generally admitted was Alexander Selkirk or Selchraig, a native of the parish of Largo, in Fifeshire. Several families of the same name resided at the time in the same place, and had long been settled in the fishing village of Nether Largo, romantically situated on the margin of the German Ocean. Here, about a mile distant from the parish kirk, was the spot of Alexander Selkirk's birth, in or about 1676; and although the year has not been certified by any entry in the parochial registry of Baptisms, nor in any known record, still the house in which he was born is well authenticated, and remains in much the same primitive condition in its form as when built. In the annexed view, it is engraved for the first time —

Whether that branch of the Selkirks to which Alexander was more immediately related inherited their quarrelsome habits from their father or their mother, the latter of whom it appears was a person of an unsteady and discontented nature, or as quaintly admitted in her own words 'of a troubled spirit,' it would be idle to attempt to determine; yet certain it is, that the scenes of family strife, which occurred within the house above represented, were the immediate cause of his leaving that home, and assuming a position in life, which by the graphic pen of De Foe has eternised him as a hero of imperishable notoriety.

The Selkirk family appear to have been naturally turbulent, and from the Sessional records, it is clear, that Alexander's elder brother John, in 1685, a married man with a family, also at times afforded the Kirk Session occasion to anathematise his dissolute conduct. During the summer of 1693, he was 'rebuked' for being drunk, and striking some of his neighbours; again, in the autumn of the same year, he, with a namesake, did penance 'for being drunk in a mercat at Leven;' other instances might be adduced from the same unerring record of the attempts to reform their ill doing.

Alexander Selkirk's occupation is not stated, probably he followed his father's calling, that of a tanner and shoemaker; his reprehensible conduct however in 1695, placed him under the ban of the Kirk Session, to avoid the oppressive tyranny of which, it is recorded, he fled to sea, and hence commenced a career that at a later period earned him a never-dying name in the annals of the world. The Sessional registers notice —

August 25. The kulk day, Alexander Selchraig, son to John Selchraig elder, in Neither Largo, was delated for his unbecoming carriage in the church. Ordered to be cited before the Session.

August 27. The kulk day, Alexander Selchraig called, but did not compear being gone away to the sea. This business is continued till his return.

When he returned does not appear, but he was at home in 1701, and took a prominent part in some family squabbles, which occasioned the following recorded proceedings in the Sessional register of that year.

Nov. 18. John Guthrie delated John Selcraige elder, and his wife Euphan Mckie, and Alexander Selcraig, Andrew Selcraige, for disagreement together; and also John Selcraige and his wife Margaret Bell. [All ordered to appear on 25th inst.]

Nov. 25. Euphan Mckie confessed that she desired to be separate from her husband, but she said she was of a troubled spirit, and that she thought her words should not be laid hold one; she said she is now in better termes with her husband.

John Selcraige elder being enquired what was the occasion of the tumult in his house, said, he knew not, but that Andrew Selcraige having brought in a canefull of salt watter of which his brother Alexander did through mistake take a drink, and he laughing at him for it, his brother Alexander came and beat him; upon which he rane out of the house and called his brother John. John Selcraige elder being again questioned what made him to sit one the floor with his back at the door? he said, it was to keep down his sone Alexander who was seeking to go up to get his pistole, and being enquired, what he was to do with it? he said, he could not tell.

Alexander Selcraige called, compeared not, because he was at Coupar: he is to be cited pro secundo against the next Session.

John Selcraige younger being questioned concerning the tumult in his father's house on Nov. 7, declared that he being called by his brother Andrew came in to it, and when he entered the house, his mother went out, and he seeing his father sitting one the floor with his back at the door was much troubled and offered to help him up, and to bring him to the fire, at which time he did see his brother Alexander, in the other end of the house, casting off his coate, and coming towards him; whereupon his father did get betwixt them, but he knew not what he did otherways, his head being borne down by his brother Alexander, but afterwards being liberated by his wife, did make his escape.

Margaret Bell, [wife of John S.,] deponed that Andrew Selcraige came running for her husband John, and desiring him to go to his father's house; which he doing, the said Margaret did follow her husband, and coming into the house, she found Alexander Selcraige gripping both his father and her husband, and she labouring to louse Alexander's hands from her husband's head and breast, her husband fled out of doors, and she followed him, and called back again—You fals loon will you murder your father and my husband both? Whereupon he followed her to the door, but whether he beat her or not, she was in so great confusion, she cannot distinctly tell, but ever since she hath a sore pain in her head.

Nov. 29. Alexander Selcraige, scandalous for contention and disagreeing with his brothers compeared and confest that he having taken a drink of salt watter out of the cane, his younger brother Andrew laughing at him for it, he did beat him twice with a stafe. He confest also that he had spoken very ill words concerning his brothers, and particularly he challenged his elder brother John to a combat as he called it, of dry neiffells; he said then he would not care to do it even now, which afterwards he did refuse and regrate; moreover, he said several other things, whereupon the Session appointed him to compear before the pulpit against to-morrow, and to be rebuked in face of the congregation for his scandalous carriage.

Nov. 30. Alexander Selcraige according to the Session's appointment compeared before the pulpit and made acknowledgement of his sin in disagreeing with his brothers, and was rebuked in face of the congregation for it: he promised amendment in the strenth of the Lord, and so was dismissed.

The next that is with certainty known of Alexander Selkirk, is the fact, that while sailing master of the ship Cinque Ports, in 1704, he quarrelled with the captain of that vessel, and by way of punishment was put on shore on the uninhabited island of Juan Fernandez in the Pacific Ocean, with a chest containing cloathes, a hatchet, and a firelock, with some powder and shot, and that there he contrived to live till he was picked up by Captain Woodes Rogers, in 1709, and brought to England.

The firelock, his cloathes, chest, and drinking cup, used on the island, were brought home by him to his native village; and with the exception of the firelock, now at Lathallan House, near Largo; the rest remain in the house in which he was born. The house, nominally at least, the property of Mrs. Gillies, a poor widow, is tenanted by her; she is the daughter of John Selkirk, grand-nephew of Alexander Selkirk, is 78 years of age, and has been the mother of a large family, all of whom have preceded her to their last home.

Widow Gillies is the last survivor of the family to which Selkirk belonged, and her circumstances are such, that she is dependant on the benevolence of those who visit her interesting cottage, and the relics of her far-famed predecessor: visitors it must be admitted are not a few, some of them are and have been persons of high literary distinction: among them not the least memorable was the master spirit of the North, Sir Walter Scott, and his publisher Constable, the latter of whom, in consequence of the notices recorded respecting Selkirk in the parish registers, rebound them handsomely at his own cost; the upper side of each volume being inscribed—Rebound for preservation at the expense of Archibald Constable, of Balneil, 1820.

The drinking cup formed of a small cocoa-nut shell; (the simple ornament shewn in the woodcut—having been the work of Alexander Selkirk,)—is three inches and a quarter deep, by two and a half inches diameter. Mrs. Gillies assured the writer, it had formerly a silver foot and stem, but that her father had disposed of it. Wanting that appendage, Sir Walter and Constable took it to Edinburgh, where the present foot and stem of rosewood nearly three inches high, was added, making the whole about six inches in height. They also added the silver band or fillet, that encircles the outside of the cup, bearing this inscription—The Cup of Alex. Selkirk, whilst in Juan Fernandez, 1704-9.

The cloathes-chest, designated by the family in Mrs. Gillies's youth, 'the cedar kist,' from the top being made of cedar wood, is two feet deep, eighteen inches wide, and three feet long. At one end is a small drawer or 'locker,' with a rudely ornamented lid. The asp of the lock, as shewn by the woodcut—was a coarse strong sort of fastening, now useless. Upon the top of the slightly rounded lid, are the letters A. S., and the figures 34, being the number of the chest on board Capt. Woodes Rogers' ship at the time he was homeward bound; there are also scratched with some sharp instrument, four angular marks equi-distant; all the contents of the chest as may be premised are few—the drinking cup, a copy of De Foe's Novel of Robinson Crusoe, and the rusted key, long since past use, are all it contains.

ORIGIN OF SMOKING TOBACCO.

Columbus in his first voyage of discovery, on his returning entered the port of Nipe, in Cuba, Oct. 28, 1492, and on the following day, believing the coast to be that of Asia, left it in hopes of finding the city, which induced by the Indians he believed lay to the westward. On Nov. 2 he deputed messengers to confer with the great king, who was supposed to govern this vast continent, but on the fourth day of their absence, they returned; they had found no Eastern magnificence, but simply a town about twelve leagues distant. These messengers, in the course of their journey, observed for the first time the application of Tobacco to smoking. This was described as being in the form of a roll of a large quantity of the leaf, one end of which was on fire, the smoke being inhaled by the mouth from the other, a process which occasioned the Spaniards much surprise. Thus, observes Navarrete, was the first lesson given to Europeans, of this extraordinary habit, that has become universal; and hence the origin of the so-much prized and so far celebrated Havanas. The natives on being questioned why they adopted the practice, replied as well as they could be understood, that it prevented them from feeling fatigue. Las Casas, the Spanish historian, is the first to exclaim against the custom, being unable on his part to discover the benefit that was to be derived from it; but Navarrete inadvertently supplies a satisfactory answer, one that applies to other states, besides that of Spain, in simply observing—Who would have supposed, that this new and curious vice could have become so general, as to be one of the most profitable sources of revenue to the State? This after all appears to be the most beneficial result of the use of the weed in all the various ways in which it is applied. Capt. Becher, in his recently published admirable work, the Landfall of Columbus, p. 356, observes—Here, as stated by Las Casas, is the origin of smoking tobacco, a practice which however extensive it may be in other countries, has become so general in this, that to the discredit of parents, it is even followed by children! the eternal cigar is seen in the mouth of old and young, even in that of the ragged urchin, who swaggers along not only astonishing those who see him at his early hardihood, but leaving them to speculate how he came by it, considering the price which must have been paid for it. Profitable indeed it is to the State, but indulged in to the cost of the pocket, the health, and the personal comfort of society, as the following statement from an official source of the amount of duty derived from Tobacco in the United Kingdom, for the last three years will substantiate:—

1853	.	.	.	4,560,827 l .
1854	.	.	.	4,751,776 l .
1855	.	.	.	4,704,663 l .

These are tolerably good round sums, contributing to the benefit of the State, if not of its subjects; and as may be added—wholly blown off in a whiff!

PORSON'S LATIN CHARADE.

The very elegant charade attributed to Professor Porson, Current Notes, p. 68, is incorrectly printed. I send you the true version, and the subjoined translation is much at your service, if you should think it worthy of insertion in your very amusing and instructive Current Notes.

TO MISS LAURA CROW.

Te primum incauto nimium propiusque tuenti
 Laura mihi subito surripuisse queror;
 Nec tamen hoc furtum tibi condonare recusem,
 Si pretium tali solvere merce velis;
 Sed quo plus candoris habent tua colla secundo,
 Hoc tibi plus primum frigoris intus habet;
 Jamque sinistra cavā cantavit ab illice totum
 Omina, et audaces spes vetat esse ratas.

TRANSLATION.

My first, while too fondly I gaze,
 To my sorrow, O Laura! you stole;
 And yet I the theft could e'en praise,
 If you gave me yourself, as a whole;
 But your breast, than my second more white,
 My first, still more chilling, conceals;
 Whilst my whole, from yon oak's airy height,
 On the left, my destruction reveals.
 Newport, Essex. WILLIAM HILDYARD.

TO MISS LAURA CROW.

Too rashly lifting thy protecting veil,
 My stolen first, dear Laura, I bewail:
 And yet 'twere venial theft, my lips would say,
 Wouldst thou in kindred ware the price repay;
 But in thy first, my second's coldness dwells,
 The more its whiteness thy fair neck excels;
 And hark! my whole perch'd on the hollow oak,
 Chides my bold wishes with ill omen'd croak.

THE LANDFALL OF COLUMBUS.

Captain Becher's recently published volume entitled—The Landfall of Columbus on his first voyage to America, is one of those works which must find its way into all libraries, whether public or private, inasmuch as based on fact and records of an indisputable character, the circumstances relative to the four voyages of this celebrated man, are here fully developed, and the spot on which Columbus first set foot in the New World, is here satisfactorily defined and established. Notwithstanding the hitherto unsuccessful efforts of the most distinguished writers and Nautical Commanders or Historians to determine or solve a question that has been deemed of the highest importance, and embarrassed by difficulties in the solution of no ordinary complicity, as neither Watling Island, the Guanahani of Columbus, nor the Crooked Island Group, his 'Fragrant Isles,' have been surveyed on the liberal scale of Long Island, off the south-west end of which he anchored, and after naming it, simply adds a passing notice in two or three words.

The circumstances in the eventful career of Columbus, whose name can never be forgotten in the annals of the world, though only the eldest son of a humble carder, born at Genoa in 1435, are subjects of the most minute enquiry, and his perseverance, undaunted amidst the greatest perplexities, is held forth for the admiration of all men, and proving Columbus to have been under all positions in himself a person of innate majesty of capacity, notwithstanding the frequent rejections of his proposals for discoveries in the West, his being deceived, taunted and treated as a fanatic, by governments whose antecedents and power ought to have rendered them more susceptible of appreciation. In 1485, we learn that Columbus purposed to proffer his services to England: Henry the Seventh was then on the throne, a monarch whose wisdom and prowess Columbus had heard highly praised, so much so indeed, as to induce him to urge the setting forth of his brother Bartholomew to obtain if possible the patronage of the king; in the meantime however having satisfied his filial piety by seeing his aged father was comfortably provided for, he quitted Genoa for Spain, where subsequently he found a more favourable reception than had been accorded to him by the different governments which he had addressed, and England missed the opportunity of adding one more to the many glories which already enrich her naval renown.

The notes of the Journal of Columbus in his first voyage across the Atlantic Ocean in 1492, are here digested in the more modern form of the Journals kept on board Government ships, by which at a glance are shewn the courses and distances run by him, and elicit the fact that on Thursday, Oct. 11, land was first seen by a seaman named Rodriga de Triana, on board the Pinta, which being a faster vessel was ahead of the Admiral's ship, the Santa Maria. At two in the morning of Friday, land was distinctly seen by the ships at about two leagues distance, and at day-break Columbus landed on an island of the Lucayos, called by the natives Guanahani, now known as Watling Island, 'the Garden of the Bahamas;' was then taken possession of in the name of Ferdinand and Isabella, and named by him in accordance with the dominant religious notions of the time, San Salvador.*

Magellan, the first of the early navigators who shewed the way into the Pacific Ocean has been more fortunate than Columbus, both with the historian and the poet. Even his ship, the Victory, which never returned to Europe, but was lost among the Molucca Islands, has been pictorially represented, and her success celebrated in song; while to realise an illustration of the ships of Columbus has been the difficult task of the antiquary, causing misconceptions and errors among men and writers of the clearest and most resplendent intellects. The arguments of Washington Irving in favour of Cat Island; and those of Baron Humboldt for Turk's Island, are by Captain Becher most successfully analysed, the several courses are traced on an accompanying map, and the vexatious point in dispute may now be considered as definitively settled.

By order dated Barcelona, May 20, 1493, Ferdinand and Isabella conferred on Columbus the dignity of bearing the armorial insignia here represented—

Divested of its official phraseology, that patent would read thus—

Don Fernando and Doña Isabel, etc., In acknowledgment and reward to you Cristóbal Colon, our Admiral of the Islands and Mainland discovered by our command, and to be discovered in the Indies in the Ocean Sea; and in remembrance of the great and loyal services which you have performed for us, especially in exposing your person as you have to much risk and labour in discovering the said Islands, and to honour and promote you and your descendants and lineage in perpetuity hereafter, we have thought proper, and it is our desire, and we give you power and authority to bear on your shield of arms, besides those of your own family, a Castle and Lion over them, which we give you for arms, that is to say:

In the dexter quarter, the Castle or on a field vert. In the sinister quarter, a Lion purpurea, rampant, on a field argent. In the dexter base quarter, some Islands or in waves of the sea; and in the sinister base quarter, the arms which you are accustomed to bear; which abovesaid arms shall be acknowledged as yours and those of your descendants in perpetuity hereafter.

• Watling Island, celebrated as it is for being the real San Salvador of Columbus, obtained its later designation from a Captain George Watling, an old buccaneer or free-booter; the latter a word now in use among our friends in the United States, with a Spanish parentage, and called Pilibustier, that being the nearest pronunciation of the Spaniards to Freebooter, and is so defined in the dictionaries.

The biography of Columbus has been most fully discussed, and many important facts established. One, not the least interesting is the definition of the initials which are found attached to Columbus's signature. Isabella having assured him that his desire to be the explorer of regions then unknown should be promoted—that the voyage should be undertaken under her auspices; that as Admiral he should be in the service of the crown, and that his son would also be provided for in his absence, appears to have created such emotions, as moved him even to tears. The certainty of the means of the achieving the fondest, most ardent wishes of his life, and the protection awarded to his family caused the expression of those sentiments, which he maintained ever after, bequeathing them as sacred heir-looms to his successors. Subdued by so much unexpected kindness from the Queen, so soon as his feeling permitted him the utterance, he is said to have exclaimed—I shall henceforth be the Servant of your Majesty! Adopting these words of Columbus as a key to his cipher, which is thus disposed —

s. A. s.
X. M. Y.
Xpo Ferens
El Almirante.

and assuming they are intended to imply Spanish words, the three first lines would be read —

Servidor
Sus Altezas Sacras
Jesus Maria Ysabel

and translated mean—The servant of their Sacred Highnesses Jesus, Maria and Isabella. Thus in assuming the above cipher, Columbus seems to have really expressed what he purposed should remain in perpetuity in his family, that in gratitude for her protection he and his heirs should be the servants of her Majesty. Navarrete has printed all the letters of one size, but this is not in conformity with the custom of Columbus, to which the A. here is of a larger character. The words—Xpo Ferens, are admitted to imply—bearing the Cross; so that the whole translated would stand thus in English—

The Servant of their Sacred Highnesses
Jesus, Mary, and Isabella, Bearing the Cross,
The Admiral.

Columbus, soon after his return from his fourth voyage, enfeebled by age and borne down by infirmities, the result of the hardships he had undergone, more particularly in his last voyage, and affected by the loss of his patroness, the Queen Isabella, directed his efforts to the obtaining for his brother Bartholomew a reward for his services, and died May 26, 1506, aged 71. His remains were deposited in the convent of San Francisco at Valladolid. In 1513, they were transferred to the monastery of Cartujos de las Cuevas, in Seville, where were also deposited those of his son Don Diego, who died Feb. 23, 1526. In 1536, the remains of Columbus and his son Diego, were delivered for transfer to the city of Santo Domingo, in the island of Espanola, where they were interred by the altar, in the cathedral. In 1795, that island having been ceded to France, their ashes were again disturbed, and transferred to Cuba, their last resting place being on the right side of the altar, of the cathedral of the city of Havana.

THE BARRIECO, OR BARAECO.

The boar-shaped Estian divinity Barrieco, or Baraeco, referred to in Current Notes, p. 72, by A. M., as having been worshipped on the banks of the Duero and its tributaries, at a very early period, is of Indian origin. Varaha, or the Boar, was one of the ten avatars or descents of Vishnu, the second person of the Hindu Trinity, in his capacity of preserver. He took the form of a boar, the symbol of strength, to draw up and support in his tusks the whole earth, which had been sunk beneath the ocean. One of the Calpas or renovations of the universe is thence named Varaha. "Waters (alone) there were; this world originally was water; in it the lord of creation moved, having become air; he saw this (earth); and uplifted it, assuming the form of a boar; and then moulded that (earth), becoming Viswacarma, the artificer of the universe." Taittiriya Yajurveda, quoted in Asiatic Researches, vol. VIII., p. 452. When the eight sactis or energies of the gods,—female divinities, matris, or mothers, exactly like their male principles, "with the same form, the same decoration, and the same vehicle,"—came to fight against the demons, as related in the Devi Māhātmya, Asiatic Researches, vol. VIII., p. 83, the energy of Hari, Varahi, the granter of boons, "assumed the unrivalled form of the holy boar," sitting on a buffalo. This redoubtable goddess it seems to have been who was known under the name of Frea or Fricco, "mother of the gods," to the tribes inhabiting the countries adjoining the Baltic, (Mallet, Introd. à l'Histoire de Dannemarch, pp. 56, et seqq.) and the emblem of whose worship, insigne superstitionis, was the image of a wild boar. Eccardus, De Rebus Franciæ Orientalis, tom. I. p. 409, quoted by Brotier, in his notes to Tacitus, says many vestiges of this superstition still remain in Sweden. The country people, he observes, at that season of the year (February) when the festival of Frea was formerly held, bake loaves shaped like a wild boar, which they put to various superstitious uses. I need scarcely add that Frea or Friga is identified by mythologists with the Greek Aphrodité and the Roman Venus, and that one of the days of the week takes its name from her.

The Sanscrit term varaha, a boar, is evidently the Latin verres, the Italian verro, the French verrat, the Dutch varken, as well as the Spanish barraco or ver-raco, and Exmoor baarge. Its root is most likely identical with that of the Latin aper and German eber, which, however, Schœbel, Analogies Constitutives de la Langue Allemande, p. 22; analyses into aa-bär—the water or marsh beast, defining it "animal fort qui aime le séjour des marécages." Bär he derives from the Sanscrit arks, which he considers as a secondary form of ark strong (Teutonic urh, Greek ari, ēr), and the etymon of the Greek arktos and Latin ursus. Cognates are the Sanscrit rksa, Zingari or Gypsy ritsch, and Suomi or Finnish karhu, a bear. From bär come the Saxon bar, Cornish bora, Dutch beer, Swedish borr, and English boar. The root ark, with the initial augment t, seems to be the Irish and Gaelic tore and Welsh torch. The Greek kapros has a similar affinity with aper. Our brawn comes from aprugnus, an adnoun formed from aper. The Shemitic and Slavonian tongues, so far as I have been able to trace them, contain no corresponding terms from the same roots; but it is remarkable that the Hebrew hazir, Syriac kheziro, and Arabic hhenzer, come from a root hazār, which signifies to transfix, pierce, perforate, bore, (Greek peir-, Latin for-, German bohr-, Irish bear, etc.) I may likewise mention that the Greek kapros denotes not only the male of the wild hog, but the organ of generation or phallos, which was used in the rites of Bacchus or Priapus as an emblem of fecundity, like the Hindu lingam.

WILLIAM BROCKIE.

The lines which eighteen centuries since, were addressed to a fair Stoic:

To the Immutable Fair one.

Si, nisi quæ forma poterit te digna videri
Nulla futura tua est; nulla futura tua est.

have been deemed inimitable, and for delicacy and point have no resemblance in any other language. The following are among the many attempts which have been made as a Translation.

If, to no charms, thou wilt thy heart resign,
But such as merit, such as equal thine;
By none, alas! by none, thou wilt be moved:
Then thou alone, must by thyself be loved.

If none, but equal charms, thy heart can bind;
Then, to thyself alone, must thou be kind.

If but to one, form'd equally divine,
None you'll incline to, you'll to none incline.

If, saue whose charms with equal splendour shine,
None euer thine can be; none euer can be thine.

EARLY MERCHANTS' MARKS.

The following examples of Merchant's marks occur on sepulchral memorials in the churches of St. Margaret and St. Nicholas, Lynn.

Mackerell in his History of Lynn has noticed these marks, but so incorrectly, and so wretchedly engraved, that I think it would be desirable to perpetuate them in Current Notes.

On the brass of Adam de Walsokne in St. Margaret's church, is the following inscription, incorrectly printed in Mackerell's Collections.

Hic Jacet Adam de Walsokne quondam Burgens Lenn qui obiit quinto die mensis Junii Anno Dni Millesimo Trigentesimo quadregesimo nono Margareta uxor ejus in Cleye nata quorum anime per Dei misericordiam in pace requiescant. Amen.

In the same church, is the brass of John Atkin, thus inscribed —

Hic jacet corpus Johannis Atkin, Aldermani, Viri gravissimi, præhonesti, Reiq: hujus Burgi publicæ admodum studiosi, cujus Maioratum A° R. Ra. Jacobi 5° et 13° honorifice ac pie gessit. E Johanna uxore ejus unica duodecim amoris sui pignora suscitavit quorum in vivis tantum modo sunt novem Gulielmus natu-primus; Thomas, Johannes, Setheus, Anna, Clementia, Johanna, Frideswitha, et Margeria. Vixit annos 68 feliciter, 15 die Septembris A°. D^m. 1617. Chrò obdormivit.

The Monogram evidently formed of three letters doubtless implied John Atkin, Lynn.

In the chancel of St. Nicholas' church, incised on a sepulchral slab, with this inscription —

Thomas Toll, Esq.
and Alies his wife rest heer,
Til Christ apeare.

Hee departed 29 October, 16 53.
Sbe ye 9 October, 16 52.

On referring to Mackerell, on the last plate, at p. 269, the monogram adopted by Thomas Toll, which ought to consist of a combination of the three letters of his name, is thus unmeaningly delineated.

Such errors in engraving make the prints in these devices, which however are few and far between, in many of our County Histories valueless, as more care is required in drawing these marks than even in heraldic insignia. These errors in engraving and printing are the more to be regretted, since out of some twenty or thirty examples noticed by Mackerell, I could in my recent search find only the three here described.

CHARTER OAK AT HARTFORD, CONNECTICUT.

On the 21st of last month, August, during a strong gale of wind, the far famed Charter Oak which stood near the City of Hartford, was blown down and fell with a tremendous crash, leaving about six feet of its stem remaining. It must have been a very old tree when Columbus in 1492, discovered the New World.

The appellation of Charter Oak has in more instances than the present, occasioned a requirement of some elucidation, and at no period more than now, could that explanation be more pertinently rendered.

Soon after the restoration of royalty in England, in 1660, the Connecticut colony sent the son of Governor Winthrop of Massachusetts, to England, with a humble and respectful petition to king Charles the Second, in which they solicited a charter under the royal signature. Mr. Winthrop being possessed of a valuable ring that had been presented by king Charles the First, to his grandfather, presented it on his audience to the king, and by this timely incident is supposed to have considerably interested the monarch in his favour. The Charter which passed under the Great Seal, April 20, 1662, established over the colony a form of government of the most liberal tendency, granting the most ample privileges, and confirming the fundamental law of Connecticut for one hundred and fifty-eight years, in fact till the year 1818.

Under James the Second, Connecticut was apparently doomed to suffer from the injustice and violence of the last of the male sovereigns of the Stuart race. Massachusetts had been deprived of her Charter, and Rhode Island had also been induced to surrender, when in July, 1685, a writ of quo warranto was issued against the governor and company of Connecticut. Vane strongly advised the colonial government to comply with the requisition, and surrender the Charter, but it was determined otherwise, neither to appear to defend it, nor voluntarily to surrender it, notwithstanding the repeated applications of Sir Edmund Andros, who had the appointment of Governor of the New England Colonies.

In October, 1687, the Assembly met as usual, and the government according to the Charter continued till the end of the month, when on the last day, Sir Edmund with his suite, and more than sixty regular troops came to Hartford, where the assembly were sitting, demanded the Charter, and declared the government under it to be dissolved.

Even in this emergency, the Assembly were in no way disposed to any resolution involving the surrender of their Charter, or in respect to any motion to produce it. Governor Treat urged the great expense and hardships of the Colonists in planting the country; the blood and treasure they had expended in defending it against both savages and foreigners, and further the danger and vicissitudes to which he had himself been exposed therefore to surrender the patent and privileges so dearly bought and so long enjoyed, was as he stated like to giving up his life. The subject was debated and held in suspense until the evening, by which time great numbers of the people were assembled, and among them many sufficiently bold and determined to any enterprise that might be deemed expedient, or necessity require. The Charter was at length brought in and laid upon the table, where the assembly were sitting, but the lights were in an instant extinguished, and Captain Wadsworth of Hartford, in the surprise thus created, silently secured and carried off the patent, which he secreted in a large hollow tree fronting the house of the Hon. Samuel Wyllys, then one of the magistrates of the colony. Those present in the Assembly continued orderly and peaceable; the candles were officiously relighted, but the Charter was gone, nor could any discovery be made either of it, or of the person by whom it had been removed.

Though foiled in the attempt to obtain possession of the Charter, Sir Edmund did not hesitate to immediately assume the reins of government,* which as the minion of a wretched monarch he administered with as much oppression in this, as in the other Colonies, till on the arrival at Boston, of the declaration of the Prince of Orange, Andros was deposed and imprisoned; their former Governor was re-elected, and after an interruption of little more than a year and a half, the people of Connecticut resumed the previous form of government that had been guaranteed to them by the Charter.

The day after the tree had been blown down, the City band performed for two hours solemn music over its prostrate trunk, and at sunset, the bells tolled to express the general regret at the event.

CIVILITY ON SIGN-BOARDS.—I once saw in Charle-ville, in the county of Cork, a sign which set forth, that the proprietor of the concern was licensed to sell drink with civil usage, the latter commodity at Varese in Italy, is expressed by cortesia, and obtains precedence of the grape—Cortesia con buon vino. G. D.

* The records of the Colony state the fact in these words—At a general court at Hartford, Oct. 31, 1687, his excellency Sir Edmund Andros, Knight, and Captain-General and Governor of his Majesty's territories and dominions in New England, by order from his Majesty, James II., King of England, Scotland, France and Ireland, the 31st of October, 1687, took into his hands the government of the Colony of Connecticut, it being by his Majesty, annexed to Massachusetts and other Colonies under his Excellency's government. Finis.

MONKEY MONEY.—I have recently met with the phrase 'Monkey's money,' in reference to one man's grinning at another who demanded a sum owing. May I ask, whence does this originate, or has it an allusion only to the ordinary vague chatter of the animal?

Hastings, Sep. 9.

E. S.

The French have a proverb 'To pay in Monkey's coin,' i. e. to laugh at a man instead of paying him, which is said to be thus derived. The tariff of St. Lewis the Ninth, who reigned in France from 1226 to 1270; for regulating the duties upon articles and produce brought by the gate of the Little Châtelet into Paris, among other items ordained, that whoever brought a monkey into the City for sale, should pay four deniers; but if the monkey pertained to a Merry-Andrew, the owner by causing his monkey to dance and disport before the collector of the dues, was not only exempt from paying any duty for the said monkey, but passed freely with ought else he might have with him.

The same code of dues directed that Jugglers, provided they sang a couplet of a ballad before the toll-gatherer, were to pass exempt from all imposts.

HORACE MISCONSTRUED.

M. De Beauchamps in his Recherches sur les Theatres de France, notices the performance of Voltaire's first drama, Œdipus, which was represented for the first time, on Friday, Nov. 18, 1718. He observes much has been said for and against this drama, which had a prodigious success, and appends a numerous list of printed critical pamphlets which it occasioned; he however seems not to have been aware of the successful ruse that was played off against it, on the first night of its representation. Œdipus was performed on the opening night of the season, the Theatre during the recess had been newly decorated, and on the proscenium, above the curtain, was placed as a motto, the initials —

O. T. P. Q. M. V. D.

These letters created a general interest, and many were the solutions as fitted the comprehensions of the audients, till the witty yet sarcastic Piron, whispered to a few ladies, they were intended to designate —

Œdipe Tragédie pitoyable que Monsieur Voltaire donne.

This was quite sufficient, the slanderous definition flew like lightning, and was heedlessly accepted as the true meaning, the incessant uproar that followed precluded the actors from being heard, and the drama was withdrawn as altogether unsuccessful. During the criticism which it occasioned, the fact of this perversion of the luckless motto transpired, and the real meaning of these mysterious initials being authoritatively made known as implying — the drama was again played, the unlucky perversion of the motto was forgotten, and the run followed for forty-five successive nights. The line is from Horace.

Omne tulit punctum qui miscuit utile dulci;

THE BEING PUT TO ONE'S SHIFTS.

Gabriel Naudé, Physician to Louis XIII., observes, the ancients in writing made use of waxen tables, called Pugillares; or leaves made of barks of trees: I have seen specimens of each in Italy. They did not make use of paper, for they had no linen; they knew hemp as an herb, but applied it not to this purpose. In the time of Charles VII., of France, 1422-60, linen made of hemp was so scarce that his Queen had but two shifts of that material, and Rabelais, at the end of his third book, mentions hemp as a newly discovered plant, under the term Pentaguellion, which had not been in use above a century.

DERIVATION OF THE TERM, FLINT GLASS?

The words, Flint glass, as descriptive of our most pellucid glass has long been to me a doubtful matter, whether it was so called from the material of which it was manufactured? but on looking over the Proceedings of the British Archaeological Association, at Chester in 1849, I find the Rev. T. B. Ll. Browne, the Vicar of Flint, in a paper read before the Association, at Flint, thus alludes to the enquiry —

Flint was very early the seat of considerable metallurgical operations, rendered evident from the fact of numerous Roman and other coins being found at places, the British names of which are indicative of such operations having been carried on there. With respect to the name of Flint, Pennant states he was unable to "assign any derivation of the word, as our country is totally destitute of the fossil usually so called;" in this however, the celebrated Tourist and Antiquary was mistaken, that mineral technically termed Chert, being found in great abundance, particularly in many of the lead mines.

The term Flint glass it is highly probable was derived from the fact of its being first manufactured at Flint. Where the present Town-hall stands was formerly glass-works, and a few years since while sinking the foundation of the gateway, at Mr. Haywood's, great quantities of fragments of melting pots and glass were found; and as the mineral flint is a compound part of all kinds of glass, there is no reason to suppose that this term should be applied solely as indicative of that description which is manufactured by the aid of lead, whilst on the other hand, it is highly probable, that the first locality for that part of the glass manufacture should be at a spot where the lead required for its formation could be obtained in abundance, particularly as in addition to the raw materials, the vicinity of Flint has abounded in ancient times with fuel, whether that was derived from forests or mines.

I must confess I am still sceptical, and shall be greatly obliged to any correspondent of Current Notes, who will contribute any notices in reference to the derivation of the term, Flint glass.

LIBERTY SUPPRESSED IN FRANCE.

On the first of October next, all the one and two sous pieces of the copper coinage of France, bearing the head of Liberty, cease to have any currency in monetary payments. The copper coins of one and two liards, and of one centime, bearing the head of Liberty, by a decree of Napoleon III., which was published in the Moniteur, enacted these minor symbols of Revolutionary periods to be out of circulation on the first of July last.

OXFORD CLARENDON PRESS PUBLICATIONS,

AT VERY REDUCED PRICES,

MANY BEING THE ENTIRE REMAINDERS, AND ALL NEW AND UNCUT.

* The following Works are well known, and much esteemed for the large size and elegance of their typography, and the accuracy and ability with which they are edited. W. and S. having secured a few copies of those mentioned below, beg to direct attention to this favourable opportunity of procuring them at the unprecedentedly low prices affixed.

ABDOLLATIPHI BAGDADENSIS VITA, auctore Ibn Abi Osaiba, Arabice, e Codd. MSS. Bodleianis descriptis et Latine vertit J. Mousley, 4to. new bds. 5s Oxfon. 1808

A learned and interesting work, forming an indispensable accompaniment to the works of this eminent writer.

ALBUCAISIS de Chirurgia, Arabice et Latine, cura J. Channing, 2 vols. 4to. in 1. bds. 16s (pub. at £1. 16s) 1778

A valuable work: in Dr. Freind's History of Physic is a very elaborate analysis of Albucasis's works and practice.

POLLONIUS RHODIUS, Gr. et Lat. cum Notis Variorum et Suis, edidit J. Shaw, 2 vols. royal 8vo. bds. 5s (pub. at 15s) Oxfon., 1779

A most correct and complete edition; and particularly esteemed for the clearness of the type.

ARISTOTELIS Ethica, Gr. et Lat. cum Notis Wilkinson, LARGE PAPER, 8vo. bds. 7s (pub. at 16s) Oxfon. 1803

An elegant and correct edition, which has long been scarce, particularly on large paper.

ARISTOTELIS Ethica, Annotationes in, edidit et Indices uberiore ornavit E. Cardwell, 8vo. cloth, 6s (pub. at 10s 6d) Oxfon., 1830

ARCHIMEDIS OPERA OMNIA, Grace et Latine, cum Eutochii Commentariis, ex recens. Torelli, accedunt Lectiones variantes ex Codd. Mediceo et Parisiensibus, folio, bds. uncut, VERY SCARCE, 18s (pub. at £2. 6s) Oxfon., 1792

The most complete and magnificent edition of the entire works of Archimedes.

BENTLEY'S (Dr.) BOYLE LECTURES, with other SERMONS, 8vo. cloth, 3s (pub. at 12s) Oxf. 1809

"This is an incomparable work, well calculated to give a proper direction to a young man's mind in religious inquiry, and to guard him against infidelity."—Kerr.

BRADLEY'S (J., Astronomer Royal) ASTRONOMICAL OBSERVATIONS made at the Royal Observatory, Greenwich, from 1750 to 1762, with continuation by the Rev. N. Bliss, 2 vols. folio, bds. £1. 15s (pub. at £9.) Oxf., 1798-1805

BURNET'S (Bp.) HISTORY OF THE REFORMATION OF THE Church of England, in large and elegant type, LARGE PAPER, 6 vols. imp. 8vo. £1. 16s (pub. at £9. 9s) Oxf. 1816

The most sumptuous and excellent edition; comprehending a complete collection of all the Records, Original Papers and Documents, and a copious Index: but few copies were printed in this size.

CÆSAR ET HIRTIUS, de Bello Gallico et Civili, ed. Ouden-dorpius, 8vo. bds. 2s 6d (pub. at 12s) Oxfon., 1780

An admirable and critical edition.

HANDLER'S (Dr.) TRAVELS IN ASIA MINOR AND GREECE, by Revett, with Life of the Author by Churtou, mops, 2 vols. 8vo. cloth, 5s (pub. at 18s) Oxf. 1825

These valuable and interesting travels were undertaken and published at the expense of the Dilettanti Society. They contain very full and accurate descriptions of the Ancient Ruins of Greece and Asia Minor.

CLARENDON'S (Earl of) HISTORY OF THE REBELLION AND Civil Wars in England, LARGEST TYPE EDITION, portrait by Fittler, 6 vols. roy. 4to. bds. £1. 10s (pub. at £8. 8s) Oxf., 1816

— Another copy, LARGE VELLUM PAPER, (only a few so printed) 6 vols. fol. bds. £3. 3s (pub. at £16. 5s)

A most valuable and splendid edition, and one of the finest sets of books issued from this press.

CLARENDON'S (Earl of) LIFE, with a continuation of his History of the Rebellion, written by himself, 2 vols. 4to. cloth, 15s (pub. at £3. 3s) Oxf., 1827

— Another copy, LARGE PAPER, 2 vols. folio, bds. £1. 1s (pub. at £6. 6s)

Uniformly printed with the preceding History, to which it forms an indispensable continuation; "It is full," says Warburton, "of a thousand curious anecdotes."

CHAUCER'S CANTERBURY TALES, with an Essay on his Language, Notes, and Glossary by Tyrwhitt, elegantly printed in large type, fine portrait, 2 vols. 4to. new bds. 16s (pub. at £2. 2s) Oxf., 1798

This very handsome and valuable edition was printed by the University of Oxford as a tribute of respect for the Editor: for its correctness and beauty, and size of the type, it has never been surpassed.

GRAVE OF ROB ROY.

Balquhiddy, the residence and the scene of many of the exploits of Rob Roy MacGregor, the hero of Sir Walter Scott's highly popular romance of that name; and also the place of his burial, is a Highland parish in the south-west of Perthshire, distinguished by its beautiful lakes and wild scenery. The kirktown or hamlet is about twelve miles from the well-known village of Callander, and to the west of the kirk are 'the Braes of Balquhiddy,' commemorated in Scottish song by the unfortunate Tannahill.

The widely spread traditions of Rob Roy have eternised in popular recognition the parish of Balquhiddy, but it would be idle to adduce any detailed notice of that extraordinary individual, his family history and exploits having been so ably recorded by Sir Walter Scott, in the introduction to his celebrated romance. The passing mention will, therefore, be sufficient, that within his own house, at Balquhiddy, he died about 1738, an old man, retaining to the last the same strange characteristics which he had exhibited through a long and adventurous life. His character, it is almost needless to add, had much of the same impetuosity and self-daring which marked the personal conduct and disposition of the English Robert, Earl of Huntingdon, better known as Robin Hood, and of which the concluding stanza of Wordsworth's admirable poem, written on visiting Rob Roy's grave at Balquhiddy, renders with no little force a just idea—

And thus among these rocks he lived,
Through summer's heat and winter's snow;
The eagle, he was lord above,
And Rob was lord below.

On the southern slope of a mountain, with a broadly expanded view, is situated the old parish kirk and burial ground of Balquhiddy. The kirk bears the initials of MacGregor, Knight of Glencarnock, and his lady, with the date 1631; but recently, a new fabric, in the old English style of architecture, having been built outside of the burial ground, the former kirk has been unroofed, and thus rendered a picturesque ruin. The burial-place of the MacGregors is at the east end of the old kirk, in that part of the kirk which was called capbail big, i.e., the small chapel or chancel. There are three grave-stones pertaining to the family, all are lying closely together, and the most northerly, erected to the memory of Rob Roy's eldest son, Coll or Colin, is raised upon four rude pillars, and bearing the arms of the MacGregors, with these words—

Here lies interred the corps of COLIN MCGREGOR, who died in the year 1735; aged 31 years.

VOL. VI.

That futurity might know by whom this was raised, it was further inscribed—This stone was erected by Lieutenant John Gregorson, 1770.

The stone, on the south side, no inscription, but having a sword as here represented rudely incised in pale—is commonly, but erroneously, believed to cover the grave of Rob Roy; on the contrary, as the writer has been informed by several intelligent and trustworthy residents in Balquhiddy, this stone denotes the last deposit of Rob's wife Helen, a daughter of Campbell of Glenfalloch, and of one of his sons; while the real resting place of 'the bold outlaw' is below the third or centre stone elaborately ensculpt; by far the most interesting of these memorials of the dead, and like the preceding, is now engraved for the first time.

These monumental stones are all of rough native granite, and from the great similarity of some of the emblems upon that which covers the grave of Rob Roy, with those found upon several of the ancient sculptured stones of Scotland, of which a large collection has recently been published by the Spalding Club, under the editorial care of their respected secretary, John Stuart, Esq., advocate, there is reason not only to suppose, but to believe, that ages before the name of MacGregor was known in the braes of Balquhiddy, this monumental slab denoted the grave of some person locally distinguished, but whose name, with any other memorial or particulars have long since been shrouded in oblivion.

The rudely incised figures upon this stone, which is about six feet long by sixteen inches wide, may be conjectured to indicate the predilections or pursuits of the person it was purposed in the olden time to commemorate. The cross-patent near the breast of the grotesquely represented human figure, or possibly cross-patée, for it is difficult to define which of the kinds it purports; or whether it is intended to represent either, being after all, probably, an emblem of Christianity, may be looked upon as indicative of the faith of the deceased; the dogs, emblematical of his ardour or attachment to the sports of the chase; and the sword, rudely carved and ill proportioned to the rest of the figures, may emblematised his individual prowess.

The last described stone, like that having simply the sword, are both partially mutilated, owing to the penchant which many unreflective tourists have to carry off some fragment of known relics of the past. The practice is highly reprehensible, and cannot be too much condemned.

Besides these interesting monuments of the MacGregors, there is in the burial ground an oddly shaped stone, resembling in form and size a horse's collar. Traditionally it is said to have been an instrument of punishment in the days of superstitious requirements, and that it was formerly placed on the shoulders of the delinquent, whose head protruded through it. The aperture is sufficiently large enough for that purpose, but as the writer has never before seen or heard of a similar object, it is here figured, in the hope that some correspondent of Current Notes may advance some particulars respecting its use.

BRITISH CHURCH NOT SUBJECT TO ROME.

The following memorials have been collected, to form an appendix to Bishop Godwyn's Catalogue of the Prelates of England and Wales, which latter country stops short at p. 490, with those of Llandaff; the reverend author being precluded by death from adding those of Bangor or St. Asaph, as he had purposed.

Bangor, a city of Caernarvonshire, in North Wales, is situated in a valley, within a short distance of the charming and much-frequented bay of Beaumaris. It is enclosed on the south side with a very steep mountain, and, comparatively speaking, by a little hill on the north. Camden derives its name à choro pulchro, from a beautiful quire; or, as others suppose, quasi locus chori, the place of a quire.

The cathedral is in the form of a cross: the eastern part is embattled, and at the west end is a low massive square tower, surmounted by four pinnacles. This tower and the nave, some parts of the transepts, and most of the windows of the choir are perpendicular. The south aisle of the nave is decorated, and there are some buttresses and other portions of early English character. The north aisle to the choir is divided, and used as a chapter house and vestry. The font, of an octagonal and perpendicular character, is very handsome.

Bishop Godwyn has given an interesting account of the foundation of episcopacy, wherein he states that one of the earliest kings was baptized, and following his example, many of his people in all parts of his dominions; and that he caused the temples of his false gods to be dedicated to the service of the True God.

In place of their priests, he appointed preachers of the Gospel, and for their flames, he created bishops to the number of twenty-eight; and of these, three were instituted archbishops—one at London, whose province was the southern part of England; a second, at Caerleon upon Uske, his province was Wales; and the third at York, unto whose jurisdiction the bishops of Scotland and North England were subject.

The Gospel under such influence prospered greatly, and even when a terrible persecution of the Church, by the Saxons, prevailed in almost every other part of the land, it found in Wales many open and undaunted professors, who never allowed the light thereof to be utterly extinguished. There was, in fact, no public authorisation of the Christian religion anywhere but in Wales.

That a monastery was founded at a very early period in Bangor is evident, from the recorded notice of the spirited reply of the monks thereof to Augustine, on his coming to England, long after the supposed establishment of that monastery; when, on his landing in Kent, King Ethelbert bestowed on him the royal city of Canterbury, as an episcopal see, and the King's palace for a cathedral church, to be erected unto Christ. Pope Gregory the Great having, in 601, honoured Augustine with the pall, and thereby appointed him Metropolitan of Britain, he summoned a council in the borders of Worcestershire, that he might be somewhat nigher to the British clergy and bishops, in Wales, and warned them to appear. Augustine in that assembly demanded from them obedience to the Bishop of Rome, and the reception of the Roman ceremonies into the service of the British Church.

This innovation the Britons rejected, and after a long disputation on both sides, another session or synod was agreed on, at which a greater number of the British clergy were present, and amongst them seven bishops.

The monastery of Bangor contained at this time, it is said, so great a number of monks, that when the whole monastery was constituted into seven parts with their rulers, no part contained fewer than three hundred men, all of whom obtained their maintenance by the labour of their hands.

To the demand made by Augustine of submission to the dominance of the Bishop of Rome, the abbot, in the name of his Church, made this memorable reply:—

Be it known and without doubt unto you, that We, all and every one of us are obedient and subject to the Church of God, and to the Pope of Rome, and to every godly Christian, to love every one in his degree in perfect charity, and to help every one of them, by word and deed, to be the children of God: other obedience than this I do not know due to him, whom you name to be Pope; nor to be Father of Fathers; to be claimed and to be demanded; and this obedience we are ready to give, and to render to him, and to every Christian continually. Besides, We are under the government of the Bishop of Caerleon upon Uske, who is to oversee under

God, and rule over us, to cause us to keep the way spiritually.

This abbot was no other, as appears by a Norman manuscript yet extant, than the renowned Dinot; and it is clear, not only from this reply to Augustine, but also, from what is related by the Venerable Bede, that the British Church acknowledged no supremacy in the Roman bishop, or any other foreign patriarch. Neither had it any communication with the Roman Church, but was subject, as from the days of Eleutherius, to a metropolitan of its own.

The consequence of this resistance to the mandate of Augustine was a most horrible slaughter of the monks of this celebrated monastery, the particulars of which are related in Sammes' Britannia, p. 513.

Historians affirm that the first establishment of the Christian faith in this country was first promulgated here about 181 years after the birth of Christ, and the reason stated for its earlier establishment in Britain than in other nations, arose from the devotion, piety, and learning of the Druidical order, who were eminent throughout the island, who decided and judged not only in spiritual, but in civil affairs, and were resorted to as oracles for their profound judgment and skill in questions of the highest concern. Many of their tenets—that of the immortality of the soul, especially, constituted points of ready admission to that faith, which, besides the great sanctity and holiness it implied, it taught rewards of virtue and punishments of vice upon surer grounds than the heathens had ever inculcated—that there was an Almighty Power which strictly examined the actions of all mankind.

Kent, Oct. 13.

ECLECTICUS.

THE PRIOR'S CROSS, 'BY HOOK AND CROOK.'

Hals in his Parochial History of Cornwall, in reference to the Peverells of Park, in his account of the parish of Eglosheyle, observes—

Those Peverells are especially memorable here by two crosses of moorstone in the highway set up by them, still extant (circa 1700), and called Peverell's crosses.

Not far from them is another moorstone cross, near Mount Charles, called the Prior's Cross, whereon is cut the figure of a hook and crook, in memory of that privilege and freedom granted by him to the poor of Bodmin, for gathering for fireboots and houseboots, such boughs and branches of oak trees in his contiguous wood of Dunmeor as they could reach to, or come at with a hook and crook without further damage to the trees thereof. From whence arose the Cornish proverb concerning filching, purloining, or taking another person's goods overmuch, or indirectly, beyond what is allowed them—'they will have it by hook or by crook.'

Some short time since, while purposely searching for these monuments, I discovered not far from Mount Charles, its original situation, what I believe to be the Prior's Cross, built into a hedge, near the little inn at Washaway. As it is supposed to be unique, an account of it may well be inserted in Current Notes, especially as Mr. Blight, whose recent highly and truthfully illustrated work on the crosses of West Cornwall is soon to be followed by a similar volume on those of the Eastern portion of the county, has kindly offered to illustrate it by a characteristic sketch.

The stone, the dimensions of which are uncertain from its being partially sunk in the ground, is of the common round-headed form, but in place of the cross which usually occupies the disk, the exposed side shews a fleur-de-lis sans pied carved in relief. That Ha's's explanation of the figure, probably derived from the tradition of the neighbourhood, is incorrect, seems more than likely from the very distant resemblance which the lateral leaflets of the device bear to the woodcutter's implements mentioned, as also from the improbability that the reverent spirit of the age would have permitted such an use of a form of pillar consecrated to a loftier purpose. There would appear to be more truth in the suggestion that the fleur-de-lis is commemorative of the Virgin. Can your readers furnish further instances of the sacred use of the symbol?

The derivation of the common proverb which the historian gives is, at least, as good as any that antiquarians have offered, which is, however, saying but little for its value. Your legal readers could, I dare say, supply examples to prove that it is a phrase frequent in deeds conveying grants of common of estovers. Several instances of its use are to be found in connection with the grant that this stone was popularly supposed to refer to, and the production of them here will be of wider interest in illustrating the social insecurity of a not very distant age. My information is derived from the Rev. John Wallis's useful and interesting Bodmin Register.

A right of housebote and firebote, as well as common of pasturage in the Dunmeor wood, was granted to the poor of Bodmin by one of the earlier priors, and this right, so liable to abuse, was, at a later date, a source of quarrel between the prior and the people of the town. A testimonial of the town against the prior, bearing date 1525, states, "that the wood, called Dymnure wood, was ever open and common for all burgesses and inhabitants of Bodmyn till now of late, as well for all manner kind of their beasts to common therein, as to have their burden wood, to bear and carry away upon their backs, of lop, crop, hook, crook, and bagwood, without contradiction, let or disturbance of any manner persons; always reserving and saving to the Prior of Bodmyn and his successors the stems of the trees for their fuel and building," and it goes on to complain that the bailiffs whose duty it was to see that matters should be "indifferently ordered according to good right and conscience," were accustomed, for rewards and money given, to permit certain burgesses and others to carry away on horses the burden wood to the prejudice of both the Prior and the commonalty. The dispute from hard words came to blows, as is detailed in a petition from the town to Henry VIII., within the period 1529-39, and that document represented that "whereas the said inhabitants have used to have common pasture, with all manner of beasts, and common fuel, in a wood called Dymnure wood, a mile from the said town, that is to say, with hook and crook, to lop and crop and to carry away upon their backs and none other ways," the Prior had caused the said wood to be inclosed, the gates to be locked, and by his bailiffs had beaten, and cruelly obstructed the poor people while attempting to exercise their right of common; and that "the same now Prior hath now of late sold the said wood and made coal there, pretending it to be his several wood, not having regard to the title of common that the said inhabitants have within the said wood." The townspeople may possibly have exceeded their privileges, but they stoutly resented this infringement of their rights, and pulled down a hedge that "they might daysler use the said ways and common." The Prior, among whose virtues forbearance could not be numbered, assumed an attitude of vengeance, and commanded the friends and servants of the manor of Bodmin to repair to the priory with such weapons as they had. "By this means he gathered unto the said priory by estimation to the number of a hundred persons and above, and charged five cart load of ordnance with pellets to shoot into the town, and to destroy the town, and so shot into the town twenty pellets or thereabouts, which unlawful purpose the same Prior had maliciously fulfilled to his power, if by the council and advice of good men he had not been stayed; by reason of which dealings and malicious purpose," saith the petition, "the said poor commons standeth greatly in dread of the said Prior, and were thereby greatly inquieted."

This right of common was soon after renounced in consideration of a grant of a leet and frank pledge, for ninety-nine years, at the annual rent of four pounds (the term, at its close, to be renewed for ninety-nine years more), with a licence to build a market house in the town, and to hold a fair or mart at the Berry.

EARLY MERCHANTS' MARKS.

Appended to a grant from Rowland Hawarde, William Allen and Lyonel Duckett, Knights, Aldermen of London; to Edward Osborne,* Woolston Dixie, George Barne, Thomas Starkey, Richard Martin, and William Rowe, of four acres of land in 'Fynsburie field juxta Bonhill,' dated March 22, 1583; are the seals and signatures of the grantees. On the seal of Sir Rowland Haywarde are the following armorial bearings—1 and 6. A lion rampant guardant crowned. 2. Two pellets engrailed. 3. On a saltire engrailed, five fleurs-de-lis. 4. A lion rampant guardant in chief, two mullets. 5. Per fess indented, an eagle displayed.

The seal of Sir William Allyn, as the name is so subscribed, Lord Mayor of London, 1571, has his merchant's mark, as here shewn:

In Heylin's Help to English History, edit. 1773, p. 528, the following arms are assigned to Allen—

Party per pale sable and or, on a fess engrailed, counterchanged, three Talbots passant, gules and of the second.

On Sir Lyonel Duckett's seal are the arms, quarterly—1. A saltire charged with a mullet. 2. Three cushions tasselled. 3. A lion rampant. In Heylin's Help to English History, edit. 1773, p. 528, it is said the lion rampant, is within a bordure engrailed, but it is not so on the seal. 4. A saltire between twelve crosses crosslet.

Sir Wolstan Dixie was Lord Mayor in 1585, when the Inauguration Pageant was written by George Peele. Of this there is but one printed copy known, it is among the many bibliographical rarities deposited in the Corporation Library, Guildhall. A friend to his country and to mankind, Sir Wolstan Dixie deserves to be held in perpetual remembrance for his exemplary character as a magistrate, and for his extensive charities.

Sir George Barne, Lord Mayor in 1586, was the first Merchant Adventurer to Barbary, Russia and Genoa.

The deed is among the records of the Corporation of London.

* Sir Edward Osborne, the ancestor from whom are descended the ducal family of Leeds. He was apprenticed to Sir William Hewet, of the Clothworker's Company, Lord Mayor in 1559, one of the most considerable merchants in London, and possessed of an estate of six thousand pounds per annum. Sir William's residence was on London bridge, and his only child Anne having, by the negligence of her nurse, fallen into the Thames from the window of the house upon the bridge, his apprentice Osborne on the instant leaped into the river, and having rescued her with much difficulty and danger, was in after time rewarded with her hand and fortune. As that was ample, he appears to have early relinquished mercantile affairs, although he served Lord Mayor in 1582, the year previous to this grant, and was elected the representative in Parliament for the City of London in 1585.

NUNBURNHOLME.—In the autumn of 1855, a parcel of Roman third brass coins was found at Nunburnholme, near Pocklington; they are now in the possession of Lord Londesborough, the lord of the manor, and as the result of their examination may afford some data for the comparative rarity of certain Emperors, the numbers of each are here given. The number rendered was 3236. A few of Tacitus and Probus were also stated to have been among them, but are not here particularised:—

Valerianus, A.D. 254	3
Gallienus, A.D. 253-268	318
Salonina	24
Victorinus, A.D. 265-267	412
Marius, A.D. 267	4
Tetricus, senior, A.D. 267-272	1270
Tetricus, the younger	448
Barbarous imitations, chiefly of the Tetrici period	415
Claudius Gothicus, A.D. 268-270	326
Quintillus, A.D. 270	13
Aurelianus, A.D. 270-275	3

DUCHESS DALTON.—Lately perusing some old family papers, a century or later, I find a notice of the Duchess Dalton, or D'Alton, who is stated to have died 'very old.' My curiosity was excited, but after referring to most of the family histories, have failed wholly in discovering any clue as to whom she was? Can any of the many deeply-read contributors to Current Notes kindly afford me a helping hand?

Cheshunt, Oct. 10.

N. V.

Alice Wise, who died at York, Feb. 20, 1751, aged 108, was commonly known by the appellation of 'Duchess Dalton,' but why does not appear. Her desire was to have as many persons invited to her funeral as she was years old, and that number accordingly formed the cortege of her corpse to the grave.—Ed.

DR. HALL.—The Duke of Rutland and other distinguished persons, desirous of presenting to Dr. Spencer T. Hall, author of 'The Peak and the Plain,' and other works, some appropriate memorial of the esteem and friendship with which they estimate his public usefulness, are liberally aiding a subscription in Derby towards the purchase of a complete set of Models, Diagrams and Apparatus for illustrating, educationally, Lectures on Physiology and the Laws of Health. Robert Pegg, Esq., Mayor of Derby, is the treasurer; and Mr. Llewellyn Jewitt, F.S.A., proprietor of the Derby Telegraph, officiates as honorary secretary. Many distinguished names appear in the list of the committee, and we unequivocally commend their exertions to the consideration of kindly disposed individuals.

BANGOR EPISCOPAL MONUMENTS.

The Rev. Charles Boutell, in his Christian Monuments in England and Wales, p. 69, figures the monumental slab of Griffith ap Jorworth, a benefactor to Bangor Friery, now built into the wall of the grammar school, at that city, which, as he observes, is a memorial no less beautiful than interesting. It bears a cross of most elegant design, which has on the dexter side of its stem, a sword,* and on the sinister side, a Latin legend in two lines + HIC : IACET GRIFVVD : IORWERTH : VAP : , cut in relief in sunk labels. Below the woodcut it is described as the coffin slab of Griffith ap Jorworth, Bangor, c. A.D. 1320; but Griffith or Griffin ap Yerward was consecrated bishop of Bangor, March 26, 1307, and died in 1309. His successor, Anian Seys, was consecrated Nov. 9, 1309, and died Jan. 26, 1327. Heylin and Beatson place Lewis I., as the successor of bishop Griffith in 1320, which date the Rev. C. Boutell appears to have adopted; but Le Neve omits this Lewis; whilst on the other hand, Heylin and Beatson are silent as to Bishop Seys.

In 1787 was discovered at Bangor another coffin lid, apparently unknown to Rev. C. Boutell, bearing a cross flory, and on the dexter side a bishop's crook or staff, with between the stem of the cross and the crook the inscription—HIC : IACET : IHGER : IOH'S DE : LAHNA-JES +, or more fully, Hic jacet Magister Johannes de Lahnajestyn.

Lhanjesty is a rectory in Caernarvonshire, in the diocese of Bangor, with a population of about fifteen hundred persons. Our correspondent, ECLECTICUS, seems inclined to suppose this inscription to refer either to Johannes Gilbert, who was appointed bishop of Bangor, Nov. 16, 1372, or to Johannes Clovensis; about both of whom there seems some doubt. John Gilbert was translated to Hereford, Sept. 12, 1375, moved to St. David's, May 6, 1389,† and died Lord Treasurer, July 28, 1397.

Heylin and Beatson designate Jo. Clovensis suffragan to the Archbishop of Cashell, the successor of Bishop Gilbert, and states that Bishop Swaffham followed him in 1383. Le Neve, however, registers Gilbert's successor at Bangor, John Swaffham, bishop of Clogher, in Ireland, from whence he was translated to this see, Oct. 28, 1376.

Can any correspondent supply any facts respecting this John of Llanjesty? who it would seem was a prelate of some distinction.

* The sword would seem to militate against the fact of its being the bishop's memorial; another point of difficulty is the assertion by Malkin, in his South Wales, 1804, 4to. p. 462—On the south side of St. David's cathedral, near the throne, lies bishop Jorworth in his robes, with his mitre and staff.

† In Duncombe's Hereford, the date is July 12, 1380.

AMCOTTS GRANT, TEMP. EDWARD THE SIXTH.

The following grant of arms to Alexander Amcotts of Astrop, in Lincolnshire, in 1549; the original being in my possession, is worthy of note, as it specifies not only the achievements of the family, but also their quarterings, a circumstance rarely observed in grants of so early a date. The parchment, on three sides has an illuminated border, and the initial letter T richly gilded, has within it, the emblazoned portrait of Garter, habited in the tabard and crown of his office; standing upon a green mound, and his arms extended.

The grant, it will be observed, is dated in October, 1549; but Sir Christopher Barker died in January in that year, and Sir Gilbert Dethick was appointed Garter in April, 1549. The arms appear to have been granted by Barker, but the document was not drawn or issued as authority until after his decease.

WARD FAMILY, IPSWICH.

In some manuscript collections relating to Suffolk, during the Commonwealth period, are the following memoranda. The descendants of the Wards are now located in America, and are very wealthy.

St. Clements, Ipswich.—The present rector is Mr. JOHN WARD, brother of Mr. SAMUEL WARD, sometime there Tower preacher. He married Lydia, sister of John Acton, Esq., of Bramford, and widow of Daniel Burrell, Gent. His estate as minister of St. Clements, by his wife, his owne lands and otherwise, viis et modis, is thought worth 400*l*. per annum.

A later edition states—There is since a handsome monument of alabaster against the wall, set up by Thomas Essington, Esq., and Anne, his wife, to preserve the memory of John Ward, minister there.

THE CROSS OR SWORD AT AUCHENDRANE.

Traditionally, the cross or sword, cut upon a large grey granite boulder stone here, measuring from head to point forty-one inches, and transversely fifteen inches, is said to represent the sword of Sir William Wallace, the shape of which here shewn, was cut into the stone by his followers to commemorate one of his successful raids between the years 1291 and 1297, against the soldiers of Edward the First of England, who were then in garrison in the neighbouring town of Ayr.

On the other hand, the author of the Description of Carrick, one of the districts of Ayrshire, who lived towards the close of the seventeenth century, and whose treatise is appended to Pitcairn's reprint of the History of the Kennedies, Edinb. 1830, states—'Upon the descent of Brown Carrick Hill, near to the mains of Blairs-towne, is a big whinstone, upon which is the dull figure of a crosse, alledged to have been done by some venerable churchman, who did mediate a peace between the Kings of the Picts and the Scots, and to give the more authority to his proposals, did in their sight, by laying a crosse upon the stone, imprint that figure thereon.'

Which, therefore, of these stories is the most credible and the most deserving of belief? Hereabouts we prefer the first.

Is it a cross or a sword that is represented on the large granite boulder stone? and in either case, does it commemorate Wallace, or the peace between the Picts and the Scots? Possibly some of your numerous readers may be able to solve and settle this difficulty. The stone is now enclosed within a wall, in order to its preservation.

PRESIDENTIAL HAMMER.—Whence is derived the practice of the chairman at public meetings calling to order by the rapping of a hammer?

Edinburgh, Oct. 11.

E. G.

In May last, at a meeting of the British Archaeological Association, Captain Tupper exhibited the head of a hammer, carved in ivory, having the arms of the Merchant Taylors' Company, London, on one end; and the other inscribed—The gift of Thomas Roberts, 1679. A portion of the handle of black wood remained in the socket. The origin of the Presidential Hammer, as a symbol of authority, is supposed, as it was then stated, to be sought for in the Mjölnir of the mighty Thor.

LINES TO A FAIR STOIC.

The couplet quoted in Current Notes, p. 78, appears to admit of a closer translation than either there quoted, c. g.

Si, nisi quæ forma poterit te digna videri
Nulla futura tua est; nulla futura tua est.

Which I would render —

If, save the form in beauty worthy thee,
None shall be thine; thine none shall ever be.

Oct. 6.

W. S.

On reading the couplet, and the translations, in Current Notes, p. 78, it appeared to me that none of them were sufficiently close to the original. To the following attempt you are welcome:

If none, but one, whose form seems worthy thee,
Shall be thine own; none thine will ever be.

REMARKABLE EPITAPHS IN LESLIE, FIFESHIRE.

To the memory of GEORGE ARCHER, aged 63, and his wife, AGNES WALKER, aged 69. Both died in the month of May, 1711.

Here lyes within this earthen ark,
An Archer grave and wise;
Faith was his arrow, Christ the mark,
And glory was the prize.
His bow is now a harp, his song
Doth halleluiahs dote;
His consort Walker went along
To walk with Christ in white.

Upon a marble tablet is the following —

John Brown's dust lays here below,
Once served a noble earl,*
To his commands he ne'er said no,
Had it been on his peril.

His days and years they were spun out
Like to a thread most fine;
At last a period came about
Snapt it at ninety-nine.

It being the 24th day of May,
In the year forty-six,†
This honest man was called away,
To heaven we hope did fix.

On the same tablet, later was added —

Here lyes the dust of Charles Brown,
Sometime a wright in London town;
Who coming home parents to see,
And of his years being twenty-three;
Of a decay with a bad hort,‡
He dyed upon the Yorkshire coast;
The 10th of May, 1752.
We hope his soul in heaven rests now.

* Earl of Rothes.

† 1746.

‡ Decay, a pulmonary consumption. Hort, a cough.

PICTORIAL NIMBUS OR GLORY.

Can any of your antiquarian readers give any illustrations of the Nimbus of painters, especially in reference to this sacred ornament of the heads of the Saviour and the Virgin Mary in particular; I mean as to its distinctive character, and as expressive of a particular age, or artist? One form, which is perhaps rather more rare than the circlet of light, though it is sometimes used with it, is, I believe, that of the small pointed flame resting upon the crown of the head. I wish to ascertain if this is indicative of a particular school, and of what school of art, as well as to have a reference or two to any remarkable pictures where examples of it are met with?

BIBLICAL MISTRANSLATION CORRECTED.

Joshua said in the sight of Israel—Sun, stand thou still upon Gibeon; and thou, Moon, in the valley of Ajalon. Ch. x., v. 12. In the Hebrew, the Rev. Stephen Weston observes, the reading is—Sun be thou silent on Gibeon, etc. Dum sile, Σιωπα. Aquila, Πανσεν, cease to shine, in the Heavenly bodies, is non-appearance or absence. Lunæ silentis dies est interlunium. Plin., lib. xvi., c. 74. Virgil's Per amica silentia lunæ, is in the dark; and when the Greeks sailed unobserved to Troy, 'silentem lunum,' minimè tum lucentem. Politian. in locum. See also Deborah's song, where the stars fought against Sisera, by not lending their light, and his army, in the dark, was driven into the brook Kishon. Dante, Inferno, cap. 1., says—

Mi ripegeva là, dove'l sol tace.

These authorities shew that the original word might have been rendered literally, and not to have occasioned for its explanation the appearance of a miracle. Further, it is evident, the prolongation of light was not the object of Joshua's injunction to the Sun, because he adds, the Moon, which whilst the Sun was above the horizon, could have been of no effect. The prayer was made to the Lord, and the command given probably to enable the army of Joshua, to prolong the fight a whole day in a hot country, at the summer solstice, which would otherwise appear to have been impracticable under a meridian sun. Standing, and not hastening to go down, are expressions intelligible enough, of objects whose motion is not perceivable, when obscured by a cloudy atmosphere.

The Emperor Napoleon, on the occasion of the baptism of the Prince Imperial, has presented the Pope with a superb piece of Gobelins' tapestry, and a baptismal font. The chef-d'œuvre of Caravaggio, in the Vatican, the Descent from the Cross, is the subject of the tapestry; and the font, ornamented with symbols of the Evangelists, is of Sévres porcelain.

PORSON.—The following translation of the Latin charade to Miss Laura Crow, in Current Notes, p. 75, is submitted for insertion.

Late, fondly gazing on your charms,
Laura! from me, my first, you stole;
Yet, haply clasp me in your arms:
The loss you caused would soon be whole.
But, than my first, more cold is thine,
As than my second, thine more fair;
While from yon oak, dull croaks divine
To ill starr'd hopes nought but despair.

The Jews, although scattered over the face of the earth, yet maintain an indissoluble bond of union and common interest. In every country they are as it were the servants, but the time may come when they will virtually be the masters in their turn. Even at the present day, are they not to a great extent the arbiters of the fate of Europe, maintaining on the one hand, the bond between the different States, by the mysterious power of wealth which they possess; and on the other, loosening the ties of social life, and introducing or fostering ideas of change and revolution among various peoples? In the Jewish nation stirs the Nemesis of the destiny of Europe.

VON HAXTHAUSEN.

Holford House, situated near the north gate, in the Great Park of the Regent's Park, upon which the late proprietor expended, it is said, not less than fifty thousand pounds, the sewer thence to Hanover Gate cost five thousand, after being for the last two years a subject of much speculation, has been purchased by the Baptist Communion. The purpose being to move to this new and advantageous position the establishment of the Baptist College, now at Stepney; and in which, in addition to the training persons for the ministry, arrangements are to be effected for the reception of a limited number of lay-students. The committee are to have immediate possession. Report states the purchase money was 7000*l.*, but in the Times of the 14th inst., it is said—To complete the purchase, the sum of 8000*l.* is required, towards which, however, 5000*l.* has been already raised, Sir S. M. Peto having headed the list with the munificent donation of 1000*l.* Possibly this involves the money required for alterations to adapt the building for collegiate purposes. The land, probably about nine acres, within a ring fence, without the garden-wall of Holford House, is rented from the Crown, at nine pounds per acre per annum.

THIERS' HISTORY OF THE CONSULATE AND THE EMPIRE OF FRANCE

UNDER NAPOLEON, the late Mr. Colburn's authorized library edition, in 8vo. in large type.

NOTICE.—Messrs. Willis and Sotheran beg respectfully to announce that they have just purchased the entire copyright of the authorized library edition of the above valuable work, which will be continued and completed as far as possible after the publication of the original in France. Vols. 1 to 13 are now ready, price 5s each; Vol. 14 is in translation, and the entire work will be completed in 16 vols. Those gentlemen who do not at present possess the 11 vols. as published by Mr. Colburn, can by giving their names to W. and S. as subscribers to the 12th and 13th volumes, be supplied with Vols. I. to XI. at half price, namely, for £1. 7s 6d, instead of the published price of £2. 14s.

SHAKSPERE'S PLAYS AND POEMS, Knight's National Library Edition with Dissertations, numerous Notes, &c. printed in large type, illustrated by upwards of 100 Woodcuts of Views, Old Buildings, Antiquities and Costume, Portraits, &c. 6 vols.—Knight's Biography of Shakspeare, 1 vol.—Knight's Studies and Illustrations of the Writings of Shakspeare and of his Life and Times, 1 vol.; together, 8 vols. 8vo. extra cloth, new, £2. 10s.—The same, in Russia, marbled leaves, new, £3. 3s

W. and S. having secured a few of the still remaining copies of this valuable edition, beg to call attention to the present low price. It includes the Notes and other matters of the eight volumes of the original Pictorial Edition (now out of time out of print), thoroughly revised.—“One of the best editions of the works of the immortal dramatist ever published, and its size is convenient, the type and paper are of the best, the illustrations, though not profuse, are excellent, and the notes, it is sufficient to say, are by Mr. Charles Knight.”—LEEDS TIMES.

NATIONAL CYCLOPÆDIA OF USEFUL KNOWLEDGE, published

C. Knight, illustrated by numerous woodcuts, the complete work, 12 vols. 8vo. new cloth, £3. 10s (pub. at £3.)—The same, newly half bound in Russia, 12 vols. in 6, £2. 10s

This is one of the best Cyclopedias for general use ever published: embracing—Ancient and Modern History, Civil and Ecclesiastical; Chronology; Biography; Geography and Topography; Law and Government; Economy; Philosophy; Mathematics; Physical Science; Chemistry; Geology and Mineralogy; Zoology, Botany; Medicine; Surgery, and Anatomy; Agriculture; Arts and Manufactures; Architecture; Painting and Engraving; Sculpture; &c.

SCOTT'S COMMENTARY ON THE HOLY BIBLE, a new and complete

copyright edition, and the only one containing the Author's final Additions and Emendations, embellished with 15 maps and 69 Illustrations of Scripture Incidents and Scenery, 6 vols. 4to. cloth, £3. 3s.—The same, newly bound, calf extra, £5. 5s

The present is a new Subscription edition of this valuable commentary, of which but a limited number of copies are for sale, at the remarkably low price of £3. 3s for the complete work in 6 vols. W. and S. having, as subscribers, a small supply, beg to call attention to the fact that the present is the only opportunity of obtaining the work, as the closed, and in a short time no more sets will be attainable. Those customers, therefore, who are desirous of possessing the work, are respectfully requested to transmit their names to W. and S. without delay.

SIMPSON'S ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE WAR IN THE EAST, from its commencement to its close (COLNAGHI'S Authentic Series), consisting of 81 large Plates, in imperial folio, printed in the first style of art, in double tints, by DAY AND SON, with key-plates to each forming 2 volumes, in parts, £4. 4s (pub. at £12.)

Of this most beautiful work it is impossible to exaggerate the importance and peculiar interest. At the period of its publication it excited universal admiration, as presenting the most perfect Pictures of the incidents of War that Art has ever given to the world. As evidences of its merits, both artistically and historically, the following Testimonials from distinguished Crimean Heroes, and from eminent Artists, may be appropriately quoted:—

"I have great pleasure in bearing my testimony to their accuracy and correctness, and I cannot but hope that they may be kept together as a collection, and be bought by the Nation as a valuable memento of the present War in the East, and memorable Siege of Sebastopol."—H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CAMBRIDGE.

"Having carefully examined Mr. Simpson's Crimean Drawings, I can testify to their remarkable accuracy and great merit as commemorating scenes at the Seat of War. They exhibit a rare combination of artistic excellence with a strict adherence to truth."—THE DUKE OF NEWCASTLE.

"I have had great pleasure in looking at Mr. Simpson's Crimean Drawings, and I am much struck by the fidelity with which everything he saw is represented."—REAR-ADMIRAL LORD LYONS.

"The Drawings were, to Colonel Steele's knowledge, faithful representations of the events passing before Mr. Simpson's eyes; and, in carrying out his object, Mr. Simpson was continually exposed to the enemy's fire."—COLONEL STEELE.

"I have been much struck with the fidelity and spirit of Mr. Simpson's Sketches in the Crimea, and I am decidedly of opinion that their acquisition by the nation as a memorial of the great struggle in which we have been engaged would be highly desirable."—A. H. LAYARD, Esq., M.P.

BOSSOLI'S (CARLO) AUTHENTIC VIEWS WITHIN THE CITY AND HARBOUR OF SEBASTOPOL; also at Perekop, Eupatoria, Balaklava, Simferopol, Bakchi-Sar, Kara-Su-Bazar, Kertch, Fort Arabat, &c., and on the Rivers Alma, Katcha, and Salghir, illustrating the Scenery and Customs throughout the Crimea, taken prior to the War, a series of 52 large and extremely beautiful lithographic drawings, in double tints, on 30 plates, imperial folio, in parts, £2. 12s 6d (pub. at £5. 5s)—or, coloured and mounted like original drawings, in portfolio, £3. 1s (pub. at £10. 10s)

The Artist, Carlo Bossoli, having lived for some time in the Crimea, in the suite of Prince Woronzoff, then Governor-General of New Russia, Bessarabia, and the Crimea, enjoyed frequent opportunities of visiting every part of the Peninsula. He was thus enabled to make upon the spot a collection of Sketches of the Cities, Fortresses, Costumes, &c. of unusual excellence, for by no one could the beautiful and varied scenery of the country have been more worthily treated.

CONSTANTINOPLE AND THE MOSQUE OF AYA SOFIA, as recently Restored by the Sultan, in double tinted lithography, from the original Drawings by CHEVALIER FOSSATI; with Descriptions of the Plates, by Viscomte DE BEAUMONT, being a series of Twenty-five Interior and Exterior Views of the Mosque of St. Sophia, and four Panoramic Views of Constantinople; together with an illuminated Title-page, by Owen Jones, impl. folio, half morocco, £1. 1s (pub. at £4. 4s)—or, coloured and mounted like original drawings, in portfolio, £4. 10s (pub. at £10. 10s)

Apart from the great interest attaching to the subject here illustrated, associated as it is with the events now passing in the East, this work recommends itself by its artistic merits,—the lithography being of the highest class, and amongst the latest from the hands of Louis Haghe, Esq.

FENTON'S HISTORICAL PORTRAIT GALLERY, being PHOTOGRAPHIC PORTRAITS TAKEN FROM LIFE IN THE CRIMEA, by ROGER FENTON, Esq., of the Generals and Officers who distinguished themselves during the Crimean Campaign: the complete set of 30 Portraits, in 5 parts, impl. folio, £5. 5s (pub. at 10 guineas)

THE MILITARY AND NAVAL OFFICERS' VIEWS OF THE WAR, both in the East and in the Baltic, a series of 27 tinted lithographs, many of them of large size, from Sketches by Eminent Officers, imperial folio, unbound, £1. 10s (pub. at £6. 6s)

THE FRENCH AND ENGLISH FLEETS IN THE BALTIC, by OSWALD W. BRIERLEY, being a Series of 18 beautifully tinted lithographs, impl. folio, in parts, £1. 18s (pub. at £5. 5s)

MARINE SKETCHES IN THE BLACK SEA, COAST OF CIRCASSIA, &c., by OSWALD BRIERLEY, 13 double tinted lithographic plates, impl. fol. in parts, 16s (pub. at £2. 10s)

FEUDS OF THE VEITCHES AND TWEEDIES.

These two families, though now of little notoriety, were at a former period, of some importance. James, whom it has been the fashion of late to ridicule; had during his Scottish reign, adopted every measure in his power to tame the "perferoidum genus Scotorum," and as he was not very scrupulous in the means used, was so successful, that when he ascended the English throne, his native country was making rapid strides towards civilization. Had he lived ruler of Ireland, a few years longer, Ulster would not have remained the only portion of that country in which life and property were deemed safe. James was in fact a much wiser man than his son Charles, and fully as honest. The following unpublished letter, addressed to the Lords Privy Council, relative to the feuds between the Veitches and the Tweedies, goes far to establish the vigour of his Scottish administration—

Right Trustie and Well beloved Cousins and Counsellors, We greet you well. Whereas We understand that the deadly feud between the Veitchies and Tweedies is as yet unreconciled, and our peace kept between them only by the means of renewing of assurance from time to time; but since we came so far by great pains in our person, or during our stay there, and by our continued directions sinsyne, and suppressed that monster within that kingdom, so as We do hardly think that there be any feud except this unreconciled, and the wrongs and mischiefs done by either of them, as we understand to others being in such a proportion of a compensation as neither part boast of advantage or otherways unless he be himself too much blind. Therefore our Pleasure and Will is, that you call before you the principals of either surname, and then take such course for removing of the Feud, and reconciling as We have been accustomed to do in the like cases: And, whoever shall disobey your commands and directions, you shall commit them prisoners and certifie us thereof to the effect We may return unto you our further pleasure and will therein. And so we bid you farewell.

From our Court at Greenwich, the 10th of March, 1611.

The Veitchies and the Tweedies were a higher class of border marauders; the Elliotts had not then come into much notice.

ARMS TO PARLIAMENTARY REPRESENTATIVES.

I have heard it stated that prior to the Commonwealth, any person who became a member of Parliament, if he had not a coat of arms, had one granted to him. I should feel obliged if, through the medium of Current Notes, it were notified that such was the fact; and where a list of such arms may be found?

Also, is there any list of arms of the members of Parliament, Lord Mayors and Sheriffs of the City of York?

A SEA LAWYER.

Chivalry with its gorgeous splendour during the reigns of Elizabeth and James was evidently waning, and had lost much of its original attractions by the substitution and intermixture of Italian shows, while the Military ardour which was its chief impetus, had greatly subsided; the pride of ancestry, seems at this era to have been very generally avowed and encouraged in opposition to those newly-acquired pretensions. The practice of the law, and the wealth arising from commercial advantages, had, in fact, created a new order in society who were ambitious of the ensigns and rank of gentility, and these honours were not obtainable from the heralds but upon the strictest inquiry, and frequent references to the Institutes of the Earl Marshal's Court, serve only to authenticate the equity and liberality which directed most of their proceedings in days, individually, perhaps, deemed gothic, savage, and unlettered, but certainly those when just claims only were confirmed, and real merit obtained its rewards. The fact of being returned as a parliamentary representative, conferred doubtless a rank of gentility on persons whose family possibly in a previous generation, the heralds might have deemed ineligible to armorial honours, and in that light only could be connected with our correspondent's enquiry. The grants of arms to all or any of such claimants are to be found only upon search of name in the records of the College of Arms.

Lists of names of the High Sheriffs of York, the Parliamentary representatives, the Mayor and Bailiffs, Lord Mayors and Sheriffs, to 1735, are printed in Drake's History of York, 1736, fol. pp. 350-367, but the armorial distinctions are not particularised.

HOLYWELL, HUNTINGDONSHIRE.

The parish church is a gem in its way for any person of an ecclesiological taste, and greatly resembles in form those so frequently observable in Kent. It has a square tower, but no spire, has a regular nave, lateral aisles, and a perfect chancel. The piercings for the windows are much like those we see in the ruined abbey and church walls, which had their day some six or seven centuries since. A pointed arch forms the windows, but a stone mullion in the centre divides it into two light lancet arches within. In the chancel there are three very narrow windows on the south side, and two on the north. The other windows are of elegant formation, while the fretted quoins and mullions have a venerable aspect. The exterior walls are covered with a yellowish kind of lichen; and the roof seems tanned as it were by the effects of Sol's rays during the lapse of centuries. On one of the beams of the roof, in the interior, is the date 1595. The pews have a coarse old appearance, and are mostly all open. The font is large, and has an aperture at bottom, but was evidently constructed for the dipping of children, in accordance with the general practice in England, until with Calvin's dogmas of faith, sprinkling or affusion was substituted.

Is there any known legend or tradition in connection with the well that gives name to the parish of Holywell, similar as it might be premised to that of the famous well of St. Winifred, that supplies the name to the parish of Holywell in Flintshire? The well here, with a view to its preservation, is now enclosed by a newly constructed wall, and partly covered over. Whatever was the legendary story, it seems now to be wholly unknown to the present generation of the inhabitants. Can any reader of Current Notes supply any facts in reference to this legend?

WALLINGTON'S JOURNAL—In Notes and Queries, vol. v. p. 489, is an inquiry respecting a manuscript journal of Nehemiah Wallington, 1618-36, that was sold at the dispersion of Gulston's library in 1784. At that sale it was purchased by Mr. George Baker of St. Paul's Churchyard, and in 1824, if not before, passed into the Upcott Collection, from which it was purchased for the Corporation Library, Guildhall, London, for Twenty-five pounds.

CONTINENTAL SIGNS AND SIGN-BOARDS.

The good old custom of placing a sign above the shop by way of distinction, from the very general mode of numbering now adopted, has been rendered unnecessary in England, and is with us almost extinct. It is only in our hostleries that signs have been retained, and in many instances these are becoming superseded in the grander Hotels; however, we still in general look for real comfort and good old English cheer at the Tabard or the Boar.

All persons who have visited foreign parts must have noticed that signboards though rare with us, are commonly in use abroad; and the peculiarities of these countries, their past history, or legendary lore are there retained in their original and quaint guise.

The employments of the districts which find markets for their goods in particular cities or towns, are readily perceptible in the signs which hang over the shop doors. In North France, they are resplendent in colour and gilding; in Holland they are quaint and sober; in Germany they are generally substantial, and often wildly imaginative; and in Belgium, a mixture of each of these countries, with an air of pasteboard and neglect, not very inviting, however attractive or good may be the contents of the shop. This classification may of course be carried into the provinces and minor divisions, where the neighbourhood of the cloth manufactory, or spinning-wheel, the hop ground, or the flax-field is perceptibly stamped with tolerable plainness in the signs of the principal towns; but nowhere are signs and signboards seen to better advantage than at Lille, the centre of a fertile and rich district, the market of a busy and industrious people, the chief city in North France, and in truth, the paradise of good shops and polite merchants.

Bordering on Flanders, the old historical memories of the land of artizans and people-power remain on the signs. Lille, indeed, is still the capital of a little manufacturing kingdom, rendered by its own industry and natural fertility tolerably independent.

The golden signs predominate in Lille, as indeed they do in all parts of French Flanders, and in their ludicrous connection with the commonest articles of every-day life, they bring back the story of Milla's touch of gold, and its unfortunate results.

Small and common as it may seem, the sketch of the Green Knight—made by me from a sign, while rambling in the streets of Lille, in August last; serves to awaken some few historical reflections. The 'Flander's mare,' clumsy, fleshy, and thick set, reminds one of Cuyt's pastures, and the remark in connection of Anne of Cleves, and her sometime lord and master, our own bluff Harry, while the Knight who bestrides the prancing steed, with his cloud formed cloak and sword almost as long as himself, smacks somewhat of the Spanish occupation. The sign subscribed LE CHEVALIER. VERT. is in date probably of that awful period in the history of the Netherlands, whose annals are inscribed in letters of blood.

ROYAL LICENCE FOR IMPRESSMENT OF SURGEONS.

The following inedited document of authority affords good evidence of the low condition of the surgical practice in the metropolis on the accession of Queen Elizabeth, and cannot be perused without exciting considerable interest.

Holbein, on whose skill as a painter, Du Fresnoy thus expatiates—his execution surpassed even that of Raffaele, and I have seen a portrait of his painting, with which one of Titian's could not come in competition; has in his glorious picture of king Henry the Eighth granting the Charter to the Barber Surgeons' Company, eternised the portrait of Thomas Vicary, the Queen's Serjeant Surgeon; it is to him, the burly monarch and father of Her Majesty is delivering the charter as the chief of the company.

The Great seal has been torn from the original licence, but there are remains to prove that it was formerly attached.

PENGERSICK CASTLE, WEST CORNWALL.

The traveller as he passes along the Helston-road, in the parish of Breage, may descry at about half a mile distance, in a picturesque valley which slopes to the sea, the ruins of Pengersick Castle. A visit thither would amply repay the artist or the antiquary, and as no view of it has hitherto been engraved, I respectfully submit to the readers of Current Notes, the accompanying illustration.

The local historians state that the barton and manor of Pengersick,* was in the reign of Henry the Eighth, purchased in his son's name by—Milliton, a gentleman, who having by accident or otherwise committed murder, immured himself in a private chamber in the tower of the castle, and was so effectually concealed from any judicial inquiry, that except to a few friends, nothing was known respecting him, until upon his death, his retreat was discovered.

Whether this castellated mansion, the family seat of the Millitons was built by them, or previously, is not recorded. In 1547, Job Milliton, the son above noticed, was appointed governor of St. Michael's Mount, in place of Humphrey Arundell, who was executed for rebellion. William Milliton, his only son, who had the honour of being Sheriff of Cornwall, died without issue, in 1595, when the family estate was divided among his six sisters, who became his heiresses.

Sir Nicholas Hals, Knight, on his first coming into Cornwall, from Efford, in Devonshire, purchased a portion of the lands, and occasionally resided at Pengersick and Trewinard, till he removed to Fintongollen. John Hals the thriftless son and heir to Sir Nicholas, by his imprudence, caused all the growing timber at Pengersick, of which according to tradition, 'there was great store,' to be cut down and sold. Some portion of the lands passed to the Duke of Leeds, as the representative of the Godolphin family.

The tower of the castle consists of three stories, a passage of winding steps leads to the roof, from which there is a pleasing though not extensive prospect.

On the ground floor, the walls are pierced with loopholes, and many of the apartments have fallen in. Those which remain are used by a farmer as haylofts and granaries. On the wainscot of the upper story, elaborately carved and painted, are some quaint verses, now nearly effaced. The following are specimens :

The one nedith the other ys helpe
The laime wyche lacketh for to goo,
Is borne upon the blynde is back,
So mutually between them twoo :
The one supplieth the other's lack ;
The blynde to laime doth lend his might,
The laime to blynde doth yeld his sight.

These lines have reference to a painting of a blind-man, bearing one who is lame on his back.

PERSEVERANCE.

What thing is harder than a rock ?
What softer is than water clear ?
But will the same with often drop
The hard rock pierce as doth appear,
Even so nothing so hard to attayne,
But may be had with labour and payne.

The arms of the Milliton family were from a supposed punning allusion to their name, a chevron, between three millot fishes hariant or erected, whereas Milliton is a mill-town.

ETHELFEDEA, THE 'LADY' OF MERCIA.

England, notwithstanding the supposed ignorance of geographical knowledge manifested by most nations in the earlier annals of the world, appears to have been 'the golden land,' to which the most ruthless migratory inroads by hordes of barbarian northmen were ostensibly directed and though attacked successively by armed hosts sufficiently caparisoned and inured to military evolutions, that on any other soil, would have served to annihilate the very character and name of its aborigines, still their innate bravery, and the irresistible pluck of the natives, has ever served to sustain their indomitable genius, which like hope was and is ever directed to the future, constantly undaunted in the conflict, and unconquered in death.

At the period of Alfred's accession, the Danes by their brutal ferocity, had caused great devastation, and the Angles partially depressed by the innumerable hosts of their assailants, experienced extreme misery and privation. Mercia, wholly in the power of the Danes, was most mercilessly ravaged, the greater part of the nobility—had either fallen in battle, or had been driven from their homes, and few but the peasantry or churls remained, to undergo oppression and plunder by Ceolwulf, a Thane, who was advanced by the Danes to be for a time, their king or governor of Mercia.* The desperation these events caused, excited the energies of many persons whose characters stand forth magnificently illustrious in English History, but to none can Englishmen point with greater pride than to Ethelfleda, the youngest daughter of Alfred ; the sister of Edward, surnamed the elder, who 'every inch a king,' majestically supported the functions of the monarch ; and the wife of Ethelred, then Ealdorman of Mercia, which, by its absorption with other states, had then ceased to be a kingdom. In her person, emphatically styled 'the Lady' of Mercia, Ethelfleda appears to have characteristically embodied the soul-moving Heroine of Romance, to have been embued with the sturdy valour of Ariosto's Bradamante; and to have shewn on all occasions, the prowess of 'the bold Virago' as she was termed by all the monkish writers; nor was her decision or prudence inferior to her bravery.

Chester, that had been strongly fortified by the Romans, and after the Roman period, successively occupied by the Britons and the Anglo-Saxons, was during the invasions of this period, abandoned by the latter; but the Danes in 894, occupied it as a place of succour against the advances of Alfred ; they in their turn, were driven thence; and in 908, Ethelred having possession restored much of the ruined buildings, and walled it about, enclosing the castle which till then had been beyond its limits.

In 912, Ethelred died, and the rule in Mercia devolved upon his widow Ethelfleda, who, having been taught by experience that much of the Danish success in their depredations was in great part owing to their defensive fortifications, and that amidst all their apparent regularity, they effectually carried on war by system; adopted the same course of strategy; and every place or point that could be rendered defensible, she promptly secured. Worcester, her capital, had been fortified by Ethelred. Hovenden, and other chroniclers mention her proceeding with a large force, on May 6, 913, to Sceargate, or Shiregate, and there built a strong castle; and another on the west bank of the Severn, called Bridge, otherwise Bridgenorth, in Shropshire. In the spring of 914, she went to Tamworth, restored the town, and built the castle; thence, according to Matthew of Westminster, and Florence of Worcester, she proceeded to Stafford, and repaired that castle. In 915, as Hovenden records, she built Edesbury or Eddesbury, and fortified Warwick; and in 916, as Florence of Worcester relates, she built Cherbury, which he designates Cyriebyrig; Runcorn and other places were also successfully protected by the ramparts which she raised. Each year of her sovereignty was characterised by bold and well-directed measures. In 917, occurred the memorable assault on Breccanmere, or Brecknock, designated by the Welsh—Gwyrth y Dinas Newydd, i.e. the battle of the new city. Johannes Castoreus thus narrates the particulars.

Huganus, Lord of West Wales, perceiving king Edward to be occupied far enough from him, in the Danish war; gathered an army of Britons, and entered the

* Ceolwulf, is said to have been the minister of Burgred, who when the latter was driven from his throne by the Danes, seized on the government, for a short time, till his own expulsion in 874 terminated the independence. The coins struck by Ceolwulf are the last of that Saxon kingdom.

king's territories. Ethelfleda, king Edward's sister, upon hearing this, advanced with a strong army to Wales, and fought the rebellious Welshmen at Brecknock, where having put Huganus and his followers to flight, she took as captives the wife of Huganus, with thirty-four of his men, and led them with her into Mercia. Huganus thus discomfited, fled to Derby, where being of the people peaceably received, he in 918 with fifteen men at arms, and two hundred well appointed soldiers, joined king Edward's adversaries, the Danes. The men of Derby having certified this to the dauntless Ethelfleda, she followed him with a powerful force, to the gates of that town, and four of her chief officers were there slain; but her steward, Gwyane, Lord of the Isle of Ely; having set fire to, and burned the gates, the Britons being vigorously assaulted, Huganus overmatched, and choosing to die by the sword, rather than yield himself unto a woman, was there slain.

By the capture of Derby, and of Leicester in 919, were achieved great advantages, and having forced the Danes to a capitulation, Ethelfleda thus regained important portions of the old Mercian territory, and the submission of the Danish hosts stationed in and near these towns comprised her authority.

Ethelfleda died at Tamworth, in 919, soon after these successful assaults, and was buried by the side of her husband, in St. Peter's porch, in the cathedral of Gloucester, having ensculptured on her tomb, the following lines:—

O ELFLEDA potens, ô terror virgo virorum,
O ELFLEDA potens, nomine digna viri.
Te quoque splendidior fecit natura puellam,
Te probitas fecit nomen habere viri.
Te mutare decet sed solum nomina sexus,
Tu regina potens rexque trophea parans.
Iam nec Cæsareos tantum mirare triumphos,
Cæsare splendor virgo, virago vale!

When the old foundations of St. Peter's church were being excavated for the building of the present edifice, the bodies of Ethelred and Ethelfleda were found together and entire.

A woodcut nearly three centuries old, proffers an imaginary portrait of this celebrated Lady. Her face to the right, a richly flowing mantle on the shoulders. Her necklace and bracelets are studded with pearls or jewels, and on her head is placed a radiant diadem or coronet. In her right hand, is a sceptre; and in her left, are flowers—that beautiful emblem, the Forget me Not, serving as a memento for remembrance to future ages—thus bloom for ever the actions of the Just.

Virago Vale! Brave Lady, Farewell!

JEWELS DISCOVERED IN THE EXCHEQUER OFFICE.

A quantity of jewels was discovered there in 1841, and was at the time the subject of much conversation. The treasure thus recovered, was said to be of considerable value, and according to appearances had been hidden 150 years or more. The surmise was, the jewels had been pledged in the reign of Charles II. or James II. princes of no remarkable regularity in their financial operations.

What became of these jewels, and what was their value?

SURNAMES ENDING IN WELL.

Whence the origin and signification of the termination 'well,' to names of Places and Families, such as Bidwell, Boswell, Carswell, Creswell, Faxwell, Harewell, Leapingwell, Maxwell, Tanswell, Tregonwell, Tugwell, etc.? I have thought it a corruption of the Norman 'ville,' but shall be glad to receive some definite information on the subject from any of your correspondents.

Inner Temple, Dec. 1.

T. P. LANGMEAD.

Hereditary surnames are said to have been adopted in the kingdoms of the Saxon Heptarchy prior to the Norman Conquest. The termination 'ville' equivalent to our 'ton' is frequent among the Norman names, and in the Battel Abbey roll. Noble held such terminations as conclusive evidence, the persons so named were Normans. The termination ville, has in frequent instances been changed or perverted into well, as Bosseville to Boswell, Fretchville to Freshwell and Fretwell, Roseville to Roswell. Hareville, a name found in Leland's copy of the Battel Abbey roll, appears in Hollinshed's more modern version as Harewell.

Verstegan in 1605, descanting on English Surnames, observes on those terminating in well, our Ancestors accordingly to the different issue of waters, did term them differently, and among others, that which rose bubbling out of the earth, they called well-water, as if they had said, bubbling water; but this name of well grew afterward among us to be the name of the bourne-pit where out the water is drawn. In Brabant, a well is called a bourne-pit. Sundry persons coming to possess places which were near unto wells of especial note, having gotten thereby the name of such and such a well, became after them to be so called, as Staniwell, of his dwelling at a well, so named of the stoniness thereof; and Moswell, of a well where much moss did grow.

Camden, in his Notes on English Surnames, merely notices well, as a termination attached to some names: and that ville had been corruptly turned as champ into field or field, as Baakerville into Baakerfeld or Baakerfield, and Somerville into Somersfield.

From Boswell is derived Bothwell; Verstegan in 1605, quoting the relation of some traveller in Palestine, relates a romantic fact, that passing through a town near Jerusalem, the relater heard a woman seated at a door nursing her child, singing as a lullaby, surprised at the sound, he accosted her, when she, equally delighted as himself, told him she was a Scotswoman, who had passed first from Sootland to Venice, and from Venice thither, her husband being then an officer under the Turk. Robert Chambers, in his Collection of Scottish Songs, Edinb. 1829, vol. i. p. 239, has there printed John Pinkerton's song, entitled Bothwell Bank, to the Tune of Bothwell bank thou bloomest fair; it appears to have had its origin in the line quoted as that of the tune to which it was purposed to be sung; but where are to be found the words of the original Bothwell bank?

Bothwell bank thou bloomest fayre;

The burial register, has the entry, Mr. Erasmus Rice of Happisburgh,* was buried here, Jan. 23, 1715-16.

THEO. RICE, Rector.

Can any of your correspondents inform me to what family of the Rices, these parties belonged?

Coleford, Dec. 2.

J. LAWSON Sisson.

* Happisburgh or Hapsburgh, a vicarage in Happing Hundred, see Blomefield's Norfolk, continued by Parkin, Vol. V., Lynn, 1775, pp. 853-854.

Blomefield, Vol. I. p. 584, notices Henry Ryce, rector of Merton, from May 6, 1580, till 1590, when he was deprived. Again, in the same volume, p. 574, Henry Rice, is noticed as rector of Ovington, 1601-3.

Theophilus Rice appears to have held the rectory of Edington, on presentation by Queen Anne, from 1710 till 1748.

WILLFORD'S MICRO-CHRONICON, 1651.

Lately I picked up at an old book stall, a duodecimo Manuscript volume of the 17th century, pp. 240. neatly and well written, and entitled—A genuine Description and Use of the Perpetual Kalendar. Secondly, a Temporary Table for Twenty-two Years to come. Thirdly, an Appendix fore shewing the effects of Eclipses and Prognostications of the Weather by the Planets; the litigious Termes and Returnes; a Table of the Norman Kings; the Marts and Faïres in England and Wales; with a Micro-Chronicon of Memorable Things, all rendered facile by THOMAS WILLFORD, Philomathesis.

After the title-page, which is too long to insert in full, follows an address—'To the Ingeniously Wise and Benevolent Reader,' in which Willford refers to his 'Bookes of Astronomie,' and his 'Meteoroological Prognostications.' A Micro-Chronicon, or Abstract of Historicall Computations collected chiefly from our English Annals, declaring many Memorable Accidents. Remarkable Events, and Things of Note, since Cæsar invaded Britaine, continued unto the yeare of Grace, 1650, commences at p. 135. This is by far the most interesting portion of the book, and especially that part of the Chronicle which treats of events during the reigns of James and Charles the First; many of the notices under these periods appearing to be original.

Under 1612, is the following reference to the then current suspicions of poisoning—Vpon the 6th day of Nouember, Prince Henry died, hauing liu'd so long as he could, but yett, generally thought not so long as he might haue done.

From various passages it is apparent Willford was a Papist and a Royalist. The Gunpowder Treason he describes as 'that senceless and inhuman conspiracie,' which 'cast an aspersion vpon the Catholikes in generall, and raised a persecution.' He continues, "God direct all Christians from such horrid designes and preserue the worst of men from sudden and miserable ends, and all my enemies (if I haue any) from violent deaths!"

Notices of earthquakes and tempests abound; and also of 'Omens and Portents dire,' e.g.—In Februarie, 1644, there appeared in the north part of the Horizon, a fiery impression, like a stand of Pikes, these after half an houres space vanish'd, and then as many more did rise in the West. Vpon the second of March, the Scots came ouer the River Tyne, at which time there appeared a Meteor ouer the City of Yorke, representing the forme of a St. Andrew's crosse. Vpon the second daye of July was the battle of Marston-Moore neere Yorke, etc.

The 'Regall Table' terminates with this observation—January 30, 1649, was the period to our Monarchs, and the originall of our State, so now I must not here insert Charles the Second, by the Grace of God, King of England, Scotland, France and Ireland, etc.

The Micro-Chronicon is continued through most part of 1651. Seuerall apparitions in the aire there were this spring, in some part of Staffordshire; and in Shropshire two armies in the clouds were seen in battalio, and seemed to encounter one another. Vpon the 15 daye of May, there was another Earthquake felt in Leicestershire. The last entry is on Nov. 18, 1651, and at the end, is an ornamental piece of scroll work, bearing the motto—FINIS CORONAT OPUS, and the initials T. W.

I cannot find the name of the writer mentioned in any work of reference, to which I have access here, and shall feel grateful for any particulars respecting this Thomas Willford, and for information whether the manuscript in my possession has ever been printed?

Leicester, Dec. 10.

LEGEND OF THE FORGET ME NOT.

In Current Notes for April, page 40, is an inquiry respecting the Legend of the Forget me not, and though the enclosed, copied from a periodical published many years since, is a different version from that noticed in the inquiry, it is sent on the chance that it may be deemed interesting to many of your readers, the work in which it was first printed, being now difficult of obtainment.

E. A. BENTHAM.

LA FLEUR DE SOUVENANCE.

Farewell! my true and loyal Knight! On yonder battle field,
Many a pearl and gem of price will gleam on helm and shield:
But bear thou on thy silver crest this pure and simple wreath,
A token of thy Lady's love—unchanging to the death.

'They seem, I know, these fragrant flow'rs, those fairy stars of blue,
As maiden's eyes had smiled on them, and giv'n them that bright hue;
As only fitting but to bind a Lady's hair or lute,
And not with war, or warrior's crest in armed field to suit.
But there's a charm in ev'ry leaf, a deep and mystic spell;
Then take the wreath, my loyal Knight, Our Lady shield thee well;
And, though still prouder favors deck the gallant knights of France,
Oh, be the first in ev'ry field, LA FLEUR DE SOUVENANCE!

How bland, 'how still, this summer eve, sure never gentler hour.
For lay of love, or sigh of lute, to breathe in lady's bow'r;
Then listen, with a Lover's faith, all thoughts of war forgot,
To the legend of my token flow'r, the charm'd FORGET ME NOT.

Young Albert led his Ida forth, when the departing sun
Still linger'd in the golden West, and shone like treasures won
From some far land of old romance; some Genie's diamond throne,
A wreck of bright enchanted gems, in triumph overthrown.

Love, look to those radiant clouds, so like to fairy bow'rs:
How proudly o'er a sea of gold are raised their ruby tow'rs;
And now, as if by magic spell, a bright pavilion seems,
With its folds of sapphire light, where the parting sunray gleams.

To that bright Heaven with smiles she look'd; one gleam of her blue eyes,
And Albert's heart forgot the clouds, and all their radiant dyes,
All, all, but that young smiling one, whose beauty well might seem

A fairy form of loveliness imagined in a dream.

She took a chaplet from her brow, which gleaming soft and fair,
Like orient veil of amber light stream'd down her silken hair,
Shedding fragrance and emitting brightness from its glittering rings.

As if halo'd by Love's breath, and the glancing of his wings.

"These maiden roses, Love, appear like pearls kissed by the sun

With last rich gleam of crimson ere his western throne be won;

But should there not be some bright flow'r to deck our bridal wreath,

Whose hue might speak of constancy, unchanging to the death?"

"My Ida! from a thousand wreath, thy own sweet fancy chose

For pure unfading loveliness, this garland of the Rose:
And what can speak of truer faith, my own beloved one,
Than the flow'r whose fragrance lasts even when its life is gone?"

"Look to yon lone enchanted isle which 'mid the silv'ry foam

Of the blue water seems to float, the wild swan's elfin home;

A very cloud of azure flow'rs in rich profusion bloom;
Winds of the lake! your passing sighs breathe of their rich perfume.

In nameless beauty all unmasked, in solitude they smile,
As if they bloomed but for the stars, or birds of that lone isle:

For never yet hath mortal foot touch'd that enchanted shore,
Long hallowed by wildly imagined tales of gore.

Full well I love those distant flow'rs, whose pure and tender blue

Seem fitting emblems of a faith, unchanging as their hue;
And wouldst thou venture for my love as thou wouldst for renown,

Then win for me those azure flow'rs, to deck my bridal crown."

One parting kiss of his fair bride, and swiftly far away.
Like the wild swan whose home he sought, young Albert met the spray

Of rising waves, which foamed in wrath, as if some spirit's hand

Awoke the genii of the lake, to guard their mystic land.

The flow'rs were won, but devious his course lay back again;

To stem the waters in their tow'ring rage he strove in vain : Fondly he glanced to the yet distant shore, where in despair His betrothed stood with extended arms, mid shrieks and pray'r.

Darker and darker gather'd on the tempest in its wrath, Th' eddying waters with vengeful ire beset the fatal path. With the wild energy of death he well nigh reach'd the spot, The asure flowers fell at her feet—IDA, FORGET ME NOT ! The words yet borne upon his lips, the prize seem'd almost won—

When mid the rush of angry waves he sank—for ever gone !

Within a proud cathedral aisle was raised a costly tomb, Whose pure marble shone like ethereal light amid the gloom ; No other trace it bore, to speak of lineage or of lot But IDA's name, with star-like flow'r ensculp'd FORGET ME NOT.

There Ida slept, the desolate, the last of all her name ; Parted from him who perished for her love, mid dawn of fame ;

But when shall their fond legend die ? or when shall be forgot

The flow'r that won its name in death, Love's theme—FORGET ME NOT !

ERASURES IN MANUSCRIPTS.

In several early manuscripts, I have noticed particular words have had a line drawn through them ; sometimes a black line with a second or red line, as if erased, but which words constantly are a portion of the phraseology or sense of the narration or fact stated by the writer. For what purpose was this done ?

Canterbury, Dec. 5,

JUVENIS.

The words so lined through are not erasures, though that is the modern mode of erasing words or phrases which are objectionable. The earlier scribes by these lines implied that a particular emphasis should rest on these words, and that the reader should observe their import in particular, as we now underline them in writing, or print them in an italic type.

TRANSLATIONS OF BISHOPS.—When did the practice commence ? or is there any record of the first person who was thus preferred or translated to a see, other than the one to which he was first appointed ?

Carlisle, Dec. 8.

F. M.

In Atkins' History of Gloucester, it is said, Gilbert Foliot, Abbot of that Monastery in 1139, was consecrated bishop of Hereford, Sept. 5, 1143, and translated to the see of London, in 1163, being the first instance of the translation of a bishop in England. The assertion is very erroneous, as prior to that date, Gerard, bishop of Hereford, circa 1095, was translated to York, in 1100. Still earlier, Herman, bishop of Winton, in 1046, was translated as bishop of Shireburn, in 1050. He removed the latter see to Salisbury, and was deceased in 1078, or before. There may possibly have been even earlier translations among the Anglo-Saxon bishops.

ST. BERNARD'S SAUCE.—Reading recently of some viands served up with St. Bernard's sauce, the meaning appeared to me to be obscure. I have looked into Halliwell's Dictionary and other authorities, but fail to find any solution of this delicacy, if such it be. Can any reader of Current Notes render any elucidation of this phrase ?

Liverpool, Dec. 4.

S. T.

St. Bernard's sauce is an ironical term for hunger.

PICTORIAL NIMBUS, OR GLORY.

I am sorry to observe that Mrs. Jameson's beautiful work, the 'Legends of the Madonna,' does not as stated in a note appended to my inquiry in your October number, furnish any exact information on the subject referred to. Whether Didron's Christian Iconography is more to the purpose I am not able to judge, as the work is not in my possession. In Mrs. Jameson's volume some of the few examples from Dutch artists represent the Nimbus in the form of rays proceeding from the head of the Virgin and the Child ; and I have an old picture on which are the painter's initials I. A. V., where both of these figures are represented with this head of glory—the latter with the rays very marked and very striking. The head of the Virgin has a thin circle of light, and a small point or two of condensed rays issuing beneath from the back part of the corner of the head. The subject is the Adoration of the Shepherds, one of whom presents a lamb. The infant Child is lying on a white cloth, and the Virgin Mother is a kneeling posture, is looking upon him, with her hands closed in the attitude of prayer. The artist, I think, must have been Flemish or Dutch, and probably the Nimbus referred to, may be characteristic of the painter. Query whom ?

Your correspondent F. R. N. H. in his interesting communication seems to corroborate my views, that the rayed or flame like Nimbus is a characteristic of Dutch Art.

Dec. 15.

E. B.

Our correspondent E. B. has only to refer to Didron, a volume which the publishers of Current Notes could readily supply ; to correct his erroneous supposition that the luminous fluid or flame-like Nimbus was a characteristic of the Dutch School. It is found in Hindoo representations executed in far distant ages, and Didron adverts to the adoption of certain anachronisms and erroneous applications by artists of more recent times, while his historical inquiries are supported by unquestionable objects of Archaeology. The subject of the glory or Nimbus occupies in Didron, pp. 129-200 ; and his Christian Iconography is one of those works of authentic information that should find shelter in every library in the world, either public or private.

M. Christ in 1750, noticed the Monogram I. A. V., but most erroneously ascribes it to Josep Ammon of Zurich Brulliot, whose Dictionnaire des Monogrammes professes to embody all previously published articles in that subject, refers, Vol. II. p. 169, to Christ, simply to record the misappropriation by that writer. The monogram, however, remains unapplied.

38 Bible (Polyp). OLD AND NEW TESTAMENT AND APOCRYPHA, according to the Translation appointed by the Queen's Majesty's Injunctions to be read in all Churches, large thick folio, newly bound in antique calf, a fine volume, £5. 5s Rouen, R. Carmarden, 1566

Archbishop Cranmer's Bible. The above is a good sound copy, but wants preliminary matter and last leaf of Apocalypse, and probably otherwise slightly imperfect.

39 BIBLE AND APOCRYPHA, printed in large Gothic type, with numerous engravings, and PORTRAITS of the EARL of LEICESTER and LORD BURLINGHAM, very thick folio, hf. calf neat, £1. 16s R. Jugge, 1568

FIRST EDITION of the Bishops' Bible; this Edition is so rare that neither Dr. Burnet nor Mr. Strype appears to have seen it. Wants title to the Old Testament, and all after the Epistle of S. James, Chap. V.

40 Bible. OLD AND NEW TESTAMENT and Apocrypha, Geneva Version, or BREECHES' Bible, printed in large Gothic type, with woodcuts, thick folio, original calf binding, £3. 3s C. Barker, 1578

One of the earliest and least common of the editions printed by Barker: it contains a double version of the Psalms, Cranmer's Prologue, Dedication to Queen Elizabeth, and Marginal Annotations, the above contains the two titles, but the margins of a few leaves are injured.

41 BIBLE.—The Old Testament, K. JAMES', or the present authorised Version interlarded throughout, thick folio, calf, fine clean copy, 15s Barker, 1616

WITH AUTOGRAPH of EDMUND WALLER, the POET. "Edm. Waller, Anno Domini 1636, July 11th."

42 BIBLE and Apocrypha, with very copious marginal Notes, large maps and plan of Jerusalem, thick folio, original oak and rusia binding, 15s (Amst.) 1715

A scarce and somewhat curious Edition; this copy contains the Book of Common Prayer, and the Psalms in Verse by Sternhold and Hopkins.

43 BIBLE.—CLARKE'S (Dr. Adam) Old and New Testaments, with Marginal Readings, Parallel Texts, Commentary and Critical Notes, maps and tables, 6 large vols. impl. 8vo. new cloth. £2. 15s 1857

LAST EDITION of this excellent Family Bible.

44 BIBLE PRINTS by VAN SICHEM.—Bibels Tresoor ofte der Zeilen Lusthof uygebeelt in Figuren, door verscheyden Meesters, nearly 800 fine woodcuts illustrative of the Old Testament, thick sm. 4to. original calf binding, fine copy, scarce, £2. 8s Amst. 1646

A very extensive and curious series: "the cuts to Plia Desideria Emblematis Hugonis 1688, are included in this volume." MS. Note in Mr. Douce's handwriting, whose copy it formerly was.

45 BIBLE PRINTS.—Biblia Veteris Testamenti et Historia artificiosis picturis effigiata, nearly 200 very curious old woodcuts, with descriptions, Lat. and Germ. 12mo. vellum, 10s 6d Franc. 1557

46 BIBLIOTHÈQUE Universelle des Voyages, ou Notice complète et raisonnée de tous les Voyages anciens et modernes, par BOUCHER de la RICHAUDERIE, 6 thick vols. 8vo. sewed, £1. 4s Paris, 1808

This is not merely a bibliographical work giving an uninteresting list of titles and dates, but it contains also long extracts from the most esteemed works, and is highly recommended by Dibdin.

47 BIOGRAPHIE UNIVERSELLE, ou Dictionnaire Historique depuis le commencement du Monde, par une Société de Gens de Lettres, sous la direction de M. Weiss, with a series of English and Foreign portraits, 6 large vols. impl. 8vo. hf. cf. gilt, £3. 8s Paris, 1841

48 BLAKE'S (W.) Sublime Illustrations to Blair's Grave, with the Poem, LARGE PAPER, WITH INDIA PROOFS of the 12 fine etchings by Schiavonetti, and portrait after Phillips, impl. 4to. rusia, gilt leaves, by C. Smith, fine original copy, scarce, £1. 8s 1808

49 BLANCHARD'S (Laman) Life and Literary Remains of Letitia E. Landon, portrait by Finden, 2 vols. post 8vo. new half calf gilt, 7s 6d 1841

IMPORTANT BOOKS AT LOW PRICES.

Towers and Spires of the Cathedral Churches.

WILKES' (C. Architect) SPIRES AND TOWERS OF THE MEDIÆVAL CHURCHES OF ENGLAND, Illustrations of, with Observations on the Architecture of the Middle Ages, 52 fine large drawings on stone of the principal English Cathedrals and Churches, on tinted paper, 2 vols. impl. folio, new hf. morocco, £2. 18s (pub. at £7. 7s) Weale, 1853-5
 This fine work illustrates the most beautiful specimens of Spire, Tower, and Steeple Architecture in all parts of the country. The plates are executed in a very accurate and elaborate manner, from drawings made expressly for this work by the author himself.

MURIN'S (W.) MONUMENTAL HISTORY OF EGYPT, as recorded on the Ruins of her Temples, Palaces, and Tombs, upwards of 1200 Hieroglyphics and other engravings, some of which are coloured, 2 large and handsome volumes, 8vo. cloth, 16s (pub. at £2. 2s) 1854
 This valuable work embraces the period from the first Colonization of the Valley of the Nile, to the Exodus 1314 B.C. The number of Hieroglyphics and other illustrations amounts to upwards of 1200 not one of which has been copied from any English work, many being taken from Sketches by the Author's own hand, whilst assistance has been sought from very costly and elaborate works issued by the Governments of France, Italy, and Germany, and which are almost unknown in this land.

Now Ready, Vol. 13, price 5s.

Those gentlemen who do not at present possess the first edition, as published by Mr. Colburn, can by giving their names to W. and S. as subscribers to the 12th and concluding volumes, be supplied with Vols. I. to XI. at half price, namely, for £1. 7s 6d, instead of the published price of £2. 15s.

SHAKSPERE'S PLAYS AND POEMS, Knight's National Library Edition, with Dissertations, numerous Notes, &c. printed in large type, illustrated by upwards of 1000 Woodcuts of Views, Old Buildings, Antiquities and Costume, Portraits, &c. 6 vols.—Knight's Biography of Shakspeare, 1 vol.—Knight's Studies and Illustrations of the Writings of Shakspeare, and of his Life and Times, 1 vol.; together, 8 vols. 8vo. extra cloth, new, £2. 10s—The same, half Russia, marbled leaves, new, £3. 3s 1852

W. and S. having secured a few of the still remaining copies of this valuable edition, beg to call attention to its low price. It includes the Notes and other matters of the eight volumes of the original Pictorial Edition (now a long time out of print), thoroughly revised.—“One of the best editions of the works of the immortal dramatist ever published. The convenient, the type and paper are of the best, the illustrations, though not profuse, are excellent, and the illustrative material is sufficient to say, are by Mr. Charles Knight.”—LEEDS TIMES.

BRITISH CYCLOPÆDIA OF USEFUL KNOWLEDGE, published by C. Knight, illustrated by numerous woodcuts, the complete work, 12 vols. 8vo. new cloth, £2. 2s (pub. at £3.)—The same, newly half bound in Russia, 12 vols. in 6, £2. 10s 1851

This is one of the best Cyclopædias for general use ever published: embracing—Ancient and Modern Literature; History, Civil and Ecclesiastical; Chronology; Biography; Geography and Topography; Law and Government; Social Economy; Philosophy; Mathematics; Physical Science; Chemistry; Geology and Mineralogy; Zoology, Botany; Medicine, Surgery, and Anatomy; Agriculture; Arts and Manufactures; Architecture; Painting and Engraving; Sculpture; Music.

WYATT'S COMMENTARY ON THE HOLY BIBLE, a new and complete copyright edition, and the only one containing the Author's final Additions and Emendations; embellished with 15 maps and 69 Illustrations of Scripture Incidents and Scenery, 6 vols. 4to. new cloth, £3. 3s—The same, newly bound, calf extra, £5. 15s 1856

The present is a new Subscription edition of this valuable commentary, of which but a limited number of copies are now available, at the remarkably low price of £3. 3s for the complete work in 6 vols. W. and S. having, as subscribers, secured a supply, beg to call attention to the fact that the present is the only opportunity of obtaining the work, as the List is closed, and in a short time no more sets will be attainable. Those customers, therefore, who are desirous of possessing the work, are respectfully requested to transmit their names to W. and S. without delay.

BARONIAL HALLS and Picturesque Edifices of England, from Drawings

Harding, Cattermole, Prout, Allom, &c. 72 beautiful plates, and numerous fine woodcuts, with Descriptions by S. C. Hall, Esq. F.S.A. 2 large vols. roy. 4to. new half morocco, gilt leaves, £3. 10s (pub. at £7. 7s)—Another copy, LARGE PAPER, CHOICE PROOFS of the plates, 2 sumptuous vols. fol. half morocco, gilt leaves, £6. 6s (pub. at £14. 14s)

A very beautiful and interesting work; containing views of some of the finest specimens of Castellated Architecture selected from nearly every county in England.

SIMPSON'S ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE WAR IN THE EAST, from the commencement to its close (COLNAGHI'S Authentic Series), consisting of 81 large Plates, in imperial folio, printed in the first style of art, in double tints, by DAY AND SON, with key-plates to each forming 2 volumes, in parts, £4. 4s (pub. at £12.)

Of this most beautiful work it is impossible to exaggerate the importance and peculiar interest. At the period of publication it excited universal admiration, as presenting the most perfect Pictures of the incidents of War that Art has ever given to the world. As evidences of its merits, both artistically and historically, the following Testimonials from distinguished Crimean Heroes, and from eminent Artists, may be appropriately quoted:—

"I have great pleasure in bearing my testimony to their accuracy and correctness, and I cannot but hope that they will be kept together as a collection, and be bought by the Nation as a valuable memento of the present War in the East, and the memorable Siege of Sebastopol."—H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CAMBRIDGE.

"I have had great pleasure in looking at Mr. Simpson's Crimean Drawings, and I am much struck by the fidelity with which everything he saw is represented."—REAR-ADMIRAL LORD LYONS.

"The Drawings were, to Colonel Steele's knowledge, faithful representations of the events passing before Mr. Simpson's eyes; and, in carrying out his object, Mr. Simpson was continually exposed to the enemy's fire."—COLONEL STEELE.

"I have been much struck with the fidelity and spirit of Mr. Simpson's Sketches in the Crimea, and I am decidedly of opinion that their acquisition by the nation as a memorial of the great struggle in which we have been engaged would be highly desirable."—A. H. LAYARD, Esq., M.P.

The Beautiful Scenery throughout the Crimea.

BOSSOLI'S (CARLO) AUTHENTIC VIEWS WITHIN THE CITY AND HARBOUR OF SEBASTOPOL; also at Perekop, Eupatoria, Balaklava, Simferopol, Bakchi-Sarai, Kara-Su-Bazar, Kertch, Fort Arabat, &c., and on the Rivers Alma, Katcha, and Salghir, illustrating the Scenery and Customs throughout the Crimea, taken prior to the War, a series of 52 large and extremely beautiful lithographic drawings, in double tints, on 30 plates, imperial folio, in parts £2. 12s 6d (pub. at £5. 5s)—or, coloured and mounted like original drawings, £5. 5s (pub. at £10. 10s)

The Artist, Carlo Bossoli, having lived for some time in the Crimea, in the suite of Prince Woronzoff, then Governor General of New Russia, Bessarabia, and the Crimea, enjoyed frequent opportunities of visiting every part of the Peninsula. He was thus enabled to make upon the spot a collection of Sketches of the Cities, Fortresses, Costumes, &c. of unusual excellence, for by no one could the beautiful and varied scenery of the country have been more worthily treated.

CONSTANTINOPLE AND THE MOSQUE OF AYA SOPHIA, as recently

Restored by the Sultan, in double tinted lithography, from the original Drawings by CHEVALIER FOSSATI; with Descriptions of the Plates, by Viscomte DE BEAUMONT, being a series of Twenty-One Interior and Exterior Views of the Mosque of St. Sophia, and four Panoramic Views of Constantinople; together with an illuminated Title-page, by Owen Jones, impl. folio, half morocco, £1. 10s (pub. at £4. 4s)—or, coloured and mounted like original drawings, in portfolio, £4. 10s (pub. at £10. 10s)

Apart from the great interest attaching to the subject here illustrated, associated as it is with the events now passing in the East, this work recommends itself by its artistic merits, the lithography being of the highest class, and amongst the latest from the hands of Louis Haghe, Esq.

SCOTTISH PRESBYTERIANS UNDER WILLIAM III.

On Nov. 13, 1690, a Commission was appointed by the General Assembly, for visiting the whole Presbyteries of the North side of the Tay, etc. In reference to that visitation the following hitherto unpublished letter from Major General Hugh Mackay, of Scourie, the well known Commander of the Forces in Scotland under King William III.; distinguished not only by his personal piety, but by his attachment to the Presbyterian faith; addressed to Ludovick Grant of that ilk, a member of the Scottish Privy Council, and one of the powerful and zealous supporters of the Presbyterian interest in the north, will doubtless be read with much interest for the developement it affords on the comparative strength of religious parties in Scotland at the period of the Revolution. It is dated at London, Dec. 4, 1690, and proceeds thus—

Continue in your zeal for the Government, and I exhort you to study moderation in your present commission, which will do the Presbyterian interest more good than men generally there are aware of. The King's intentions are certainly to maintain that government, as the fittest for that nation; but it is also his earnest desire that it may be made as supportable to those who seem to dissent from it, that even they may fall in liking with it, and so the Kingdom become one body, which surely is the likeliest way for the subsistence of that which is so newly established. Many are of opinion that you, Brody, Foulis, and Grange, being upon that northern commission, nothing is to be expected but severity; but I am sure that no man who will duly weigh all circumstances but will confess with me, that, humanly, the standing of that government doth consist in the making it supportable to the King and Kingdom. For, let men flatter themselves as they will, I tell you, who know Scotland, and where the strength and weakness of it doth lie, that, if I were as much an enemy to that interest as I am a friend, I would without difficulty engage to form in Scotland a more formidable party against it, even for their Majesties' Government, than can be formed for it. I therefore pray you gentlemen, take a friendly advertisement, and let your zeal be tempered with prudence, for no man in England or Scotland can judge of your circumstances better than myself.

The significance of this language will be best understood by comparing it with what is said on the subject by Mr. Macaulay in the thirteenth chapter of his History of England; and by Mr. Burton, in the fifth and sixth chapters of his History of Scotland. R.

Roman Catholics who refuse to believe in the dogma of the Immaculate Conception, are now, by Ultramontanists, considered and denounced as Protestants.

ST. PETER'S CHURCH, DORCHESTER.

I observe announced in the newspapers the death of the talented water-colour artist, Mr. Frederick Nash; and in the Art Journal, for February, we are favoured with a very interesting biographical sketch of him. In 1802, Mr. Nash painted a view of St. Peter's Church, with the Market House, etc., in Dorchester, from which an engraving was made by Birrell, and published by Mr. Frampton, then a bookseller in this town. The annexed woodcut is a reduced copy of the print, a facsimile of the painting.

To Topographers it is particularly valuable from the circumstance of the Market House having been thrown down, the church altered, and the houses seen in the centre having all been demolished, thus leaving a wide open space, and much improving and enlarging the Town.

Mr. Nash commenced another painting of a view embracing the church of the Holy Trinity, etc., but in consequence, I imagine, of the prints of the first not selling well, the painting was never finished. Fortunately, I possess both paintings, the plate of the first has been destroyed, and the prints are in consequence very scarce. Dorchester, Feb. 2. JOHN GARLAND, F.L.S.

A correspondent observes the Blacksmith's epitaph, in Current Notes, p. 8, is incomplete, and consists of eight lines, the two last being—

My fire-dried corpse lies here at rest,
My soul, like smoke, soars to be blest.

ROY'S WIFE OF ALDIVALLOCH.

Many of our most popular ballads have originated in the traditional relation of some incident, the particulars of which have become mystified or forgotten, or have been based on rude fragmentary lyrics which have been transmitted by successive generations eternising some cherished memorial of events in local history, or celebrating some well known hill, or dale, or stream. Among these, none are better known than the song of 'Roy's Wife of Aldivalloch;' but the allusion to persons was without elucidation, and the name of the writer was become a matter of question. Allan Cunningham observes—'Cromek, an anxious inquirer into all matters illustrative of northern song, ascribes Roy's Wife of Aldivalloch, to Mrs. Murray, of Bath; while George Thomson, and all other editors of Scottish song, impute it to Mrs. Grant, of Carron. I am not aware that the authorship has been settled.' The doubt rested with Cunningham, who appears to have not been aware that the writer married her cousin—Grant, of Carron, near Elchies; and upon his decease, married secondly Dr. Murray, a physician resident at Bath. Whether there was some tradition in Aberlour, her native place, as to the courtship and inconstancy of the bride, or that Mrs. Grant may have taken up the burden of some former, but now forgotten ballad, is not known. Recently, on examining the parish register of Cabrach, Banffshire, for some other affair, the circumstances of the marriage of the veritable Roy of Aldivalloch and his once fickle wife, so famous in Scottish song, was discovered. They had been previously 'contracted' on January 28, 1727; but on February 21, following, John Roy, lawful son of Thomas Roy, in Aldivalloch, was married to Isabel, daughter of Alister Stewart, sometime resident in Cabrach. The braes of Balloch are in the neighbourhood of Aldivalloch, and possibly all the circumstances were long the current gossip of the district, as Mrs. Grant was not born till 1745, and she died in 1814.

ENGLISH EPISCOPAL CHAPEL, MONTROSE.

St. Peter's English Episcopal Chapel, Montrose, was founded in 1722, and consecrated in 1724. Dr. Johnson, during his journey to Scotland, after inspecting 'these fragments of magnificence,' the ruins of the Abbey of Aberbrothoc, founded in 1178, proceeded on to Montrose, of which town and its buildings he speaks with much commendation. 'We then went to view the English Chapel, and found a small church, clean to a degree, unknown in any other part of Scotland, with commodious galleries, and what was yet less expected, with an organ.' The organ, in 1833, was replaced by one of superior construction, at a cost of three hundred pounds; and a new front to the chapel, with other improvements, were recently completed, but the whole was destroyed by fire on the evening of Saturday, 7th inst., the accident originated in the over heating of the flues of the stove. The curiously painted altar-piece of Moses and Aaron was also consumed. Large subscriptions have however already been effected for the rebuilding of the chapel.

YORKSHIRE FLINT ARROW HEADS.

In January Current Notes, p. 8, it is stated, that a person in the East Riding of Yorkshire had employed himself in manufacturing imitations of ancient flint arrow-heads. The assertion had its rise at a meeting of the Society of Antiquaries, and has since been made current in various forms, but it is nevertheless wholly an error. None but a good workman could produce flint arrow heads with any approach to excellence as to deceive any one who had seen a genuine specimen, while the operation of fabrication would be so tedious, and the chances of sale so precarious, that no one, however dishonest, could possibly obtain any thing like remuneration. The paragraph in the Illustrated Times, Dec. 13, p. 395, which has occasioned all this stir, has been answered by Mr. Thomas Wright, whose sagacity as an antiquary had been rather cavalierly treated; in the same paper, for January 10, p. 27. Another reply, in reference to this controversy, has since appeared in the Hull Advertiser, in the following terms:—

As comparatively few of our Yorkshire friends may not either see that publication, or, seeing it, may not fully understand the subject, the writer of this, (who is in no way connected with any of the parties concerned, nor in the least interested in the matter, except for truth's sake, and having some knowledge of the subject in dispute) begs to say that, independently of, and without any reference to what Mr. Wright has stated, the engravings above referred to, in the tract published by Mr. Wright, were taken from Flint Implements, now in the possession of Mr. Edward Tindall, of Bridlington, and that all of them, with the exception of two, are of Mr. Tindall's own finding, chiefly within short distances from Bridlington. In the museum of Sir George Strickland, Bart., at Boynton Hall, near Bridlington, there is a small but fine collection of flint and stone implements, consisting of a stone hammer, stone and flint celts, as they are called, and spear or arrow-heads of flint, which have been in the museum between thirty and forty years. Some of these articles were found on the estate at Boynton, and others on an estate belonging to the same gentleman, near Malton. Implements of flint, namely sling stones, knives, celts, spear and arrow heads, saws, drills, flat sling stones, and some round, size of a half-crown; also, others of various shapes, the use of which cannot now be satisfactorily ascertained. Some of the flints are rounded, and about the size of a child's ball; some less, and some sharp pointed like a lance, and, at the same time, like a penknife blade in shape. These and many others, too numerous to mention or describe, are now in the possession of Mr. Tindall, who has been a most diligent gatherer of these things upwards of four years; he has, indeed, such a collection of these antiquities as probably is not to be found out of any museum in England, except that of Thomas Bateman, Esq., of Youlgrove, Derbyshire. The writer has also authority for saying, if any person wished to see Mr. Tindall's collection he may do so free of expense, by producing a letter of introduction from the secretary of any antiquarian society; or from the authorised officers of any scientific society in the kingdom.

Leonardo da Vinci's Last Supper, painted al fresco, is by order of the Emperor of Austria, to be restored.

DERIVATION OF THE WORD COWARD.

That 'Coward' is derived from Cow-heart, as Mr. PILSON thinks, is highly probable, though the popular etymology is cow-herd. Spencer writes cow-heard. Ogilvie, Imp. Dict. sub voce, says it has been supposed to be from culum vertere, to turn the tail, the old French being culvert, now coward. This suggestion receives countenance from the corresponding word in Italian, codardo, which would seem to be derived from coda, the tail; and it is confirmed by the use of the term in heraldry to signify a lion borne in the escutcheon with his tail doubled between his legs. The Spanish cobarde is a corrupt form, with b for d, or the French and Venetian w (comp. cul, queue, cuma), while the Armoric couhard comes from the French. To cow is to depress with fear. The Scottish cove, which is identical with the Icelandic Kuga or Kufva, to depress, signifies also to crop, to lop, to switch the head off. A 'cowed cou' is a hornless or dodged cow. 'I'll cove yer lugs,' is a common threat held out to mischievous boys. A 'brume cove' is a broom stalk, deprived of its leaves. To cuff, is an almost synonymous Scottish and English verb with cove; and both cuff and cove may be traced through many languages. The Scottish has cluff with a similar meaning. Compare the English clap, German klap-, klapp-, Swedish klapp-, klepp-, Dutch klapp-, Spanish golp, Italian colp-, French coup-, Latin culp-, colaph-, Greek kolap-, kolaph-, Hebrew or Arabic kalaf, Sanskrit klap. The Scottish cowie agrees in sense as in sound with the Latin cava, a small hornless milch cow.

South Shields, Feb. 2.

W. B.

Your Correspondent, Mr. JAMES A. PILSON, Current Notes, p. 7, might find another derivation for the word Coward than those of Cow-herd and Cow-heart, in the ancient Spanish word—Cohardia, Covardia, cowardice—and in the English word Cover, to crouch, to slink.

B. B. W.

Are not Messrs. Carrington and Pilson led too much by the ear in deriving Coward from Cow-herd or Cow-heart? Neither comparative philology nor antiquarian research offer anything in support of either of these derivations. The nouns cow, herd, and heart, are Germanic, and are found in all the different branches of the German language. But the word coward is found in none of these save the English.

The modern German for coward Feigling, faint-heart, bears no relation to the English, and the substantive Kuhhirt, a cowherd, in common use, is applied exclusively to a keeper of cattle. Our chief authorities, Johnson and Richardson, differ in their derivation of the word in question. Johnson has "Coward; (coward Fr. of uncertain derivation)." Richardson, "Coward, French, Coward; Spanish, Cobarde; Italian, Codardo, "Coward, i.e. covered, covered, cover'd. One who has cover'd before an enemy. It has the same import as supplex. Coward is the past part of the verb, to cover, or to cover, a word formerly in common use." (see Tooke.) Thus Johnson derives the word directly from the old French noun coward; Richardson, following Tooke, from the English verb to cover.

I believe Johnson is right. That a word similarly spelt, and identical in meaning with the word coward, is found in French, Spanish, and Italian, and is not found in any German dialect, is strong proof of its Latin origin, and the fact that it did not become a portion of the English language until after the diffusion of the Norman literature points out the way by which it was introduced.

Coward is a word of frequent recurrence in old French writings, both verse and prose. It was variously spelt coard, coars, coart, coward, comard. I am disposed to consider coard the earliest spelling, but about the middle of the fourteenth century coward became the usual orthography and remained so until the time of Louis XIV., when the word fell into disuse. That the word coward was not employed in France in writing only, but was made use of in common conversation is shewn by its being found in many proverbs of that country. Cotgrave gives four of these—"Plus coward qu'un lieure," "Le coward n'aura belle amie," "Hardie langue, covarde lance;" "Mieux vaut coward que trop hardi." To which may be added:

"A horions et escarmouche
Le coward se cache, au se couche."

"Avec le renard on renarde Avec le coward on couarde."

Johnson appears not to have known the derivation of coward, and possibly the French philologists had not in his time agreed upon it. Nevertheless it was known to the Italians, for in Antonini's Italian and French dictionary, published in 1749, I find after the word Codardo "Alcuni credono codardo derivarsi dalla coda, che frà le gambe portans i cani paurosi." This derivation has been generally accepted by the French lexicographers. Roquefort, after giving the meaning of coardisc, goes on to derive it from "coue, cauda, parceque les animaux qui craignent portent la queue entre les jambes." Bescherelle at the word coward says "du lat. barb. codardux, même signif., formé de cauda, queue parceque les animaux timides laissent pendre leur queue entre les jambes."

In old French the modern word queue was variously spelt coe, coue, coua, cowe, etc. These observations suffice to shew that coward is not formed from the verb to cover, nor is it a compound of the German words cow, herd, or heart, but that it is a French word derived from the Latin cauda or coda, a tail.

SCOTTISH OVER DOOR INSCRIPTIONS.

Upon the burial aisle of the noble family of Ruthven at Forgandenny, Perthshire, are the following apparently renewed lines—

ALL. MEN. THINK. ON. ZOVR. DYING DAY
ZIT. IOY. TO. DIE. TO LIVE. FOR. AY
1809.

Over the small gateway to the Grey Friars' burial ground, in Perth, are these lines—

HOC GENITOR GENETRIXQUE SITI, NUMEROSA VTRIVSQUE
PROGENIES, NATI ET NATÆ, CHARIQVE NEPOTES,
ET NEPTES, NECNON PRONEPTOS ATQVE PRONEPTES.
HÆC QVIQVQVE LEGIS MORTI. NOS NOSTRAQUE CVNCTA
DEBERI, TANQVAM SPECVLO REFERENTE VIDEBIS; HÆC ETENIM TRANSIT GENERATIO, NASCITVR ILLA.

On the Police Office in the same town, are these admonitory lines—

THIS HOVSE LOVES PEACE, HATES KNAVES, CRIMES
PVNISHETH,
PRESERVES THE LAWS, AND GOOD MEN HONOVRETH.

Since the publication of the inscriptions on Mar's Wark, a building at the head of the Broad street in Stirling, begun by the Regent Earl of Mar, but now a ruin; in Current Notes, July 1855, p. 53, I have had full opportunity of comparing the printed versions with the originals, and finding them incorrect, I forward the following, which considering the decayed state of the letters are as near to the original as it is possible to render them. The first two couplets are on the front of Mars Wark.

THE. MOIR. I. STAND. ON. OPPIN. HITH
MY. FAVLTIS. MOIR. SVBIECT. AR. TO. SITH.
I. PRAY. AL. LVIKARIS. ON. THIS. BIGING
VITH. GENTIL. E. TO. GIF. THAIR. IVGING*

The third is on the back of Mar's Wark, within the garden—

ESSPY. SPEIK. FVRTH. AND. SPAIR. NOTHT
CONSIDDIR. VEIL. AND. CAIR. NOTHT.

The last couplet reminds me of an inscription upon an old house in Dunfermline, which proffers more cautious advice, dictated, no doubt, by the discretion of the erector, who was Robert Pitcairn, Commendatory of Dunfermline, and Secretary of State to Queen Mary. The lines are engraved over the chief entrance door to Pitcairn's house in Maygate Street—

SEN. VORD. IS. THRALL. AND. THOCT. IS. FRE
KEIP. VEILL. THY. TONGE. I. COINSELL. THE

Over the door of the farm house of Cossins, parish of Glamis is the following inscription. The stone taken from the castle of Cossins in its demolition, bears the arms of the Lyon and Young families. Prior to the lands of Cossins becoming the property of the noble family of Lyon of Glamis, they formed an ancient lordship which gave during the middle ages surname and title to a family of considerable local repute.

NON-FREEMEN BARBERS AND PERUKE MAKERS.

The following petition of the Company of Barbers and Surgeons, against a supposed innovation upon their rights and privileges by Foreigners who were non-freemen peruke makers, in 1712, in the reign of Queen Anne, will doubtless be read with interest, as illustrative of the then prevalent practice of wearing perukes so generally represented in the paintings and engravings of that period.

Lee Road, Blackheath.

J. J. H.

To the Right Honourable Sir Robert Beauchcroft, Bart Lord Mayor of the City of London, and to the Right Worshipfull, the Aldermen, his brethren.

The humble petition of the Masters or Governors and Assistants of the Mystery and Commonalty of Barbers and Surgeons of London.

Sheweth, That by Charter granted to your Petitioners by King Edward the Fourth, no Surgeon within this City could exercise his art unless he was first approved and admitted thereto by your petitioners, and all the rights and privileges granted by such Charter were afterwards confirmed to your petitioners, by Act of Parliament passed in the thirty-second year of King Henry the Eighth. And by Charters of King James and King Charles the First, the examination and approbation of all Surgeons within seven miles of London is likewise placed in your petitioners.

That by the said Act of Parliament made in the thirty-second year of King Henry the Eighth, intitled an Act for Barbers and Surgeons, it is among other things enacted that No manner of person after the feast of St. Michael then next ensuing [Sept. 29, 1540] should presume to keep any shop of Barbory or Shaving within the City of London, except he be a Freeman of your petitioners' Company, upon pain that every person who should offend against the said Clause should forfeit five pounds per month, one half to the King, and the other half to the Informer.

That Perukes not being in use at the time when your petitioners were incorporated by the said act, in the manner that they are now made, It has been doubted whether the making the same be a part of Barbory within the meaning of the said Act of Parliament.

And upon that presumption great numbers of persons

* i.e. Judgment, or opinion.

Foreigners, have of late years exercised the said Art of Peruke making within this City, privately in chambers, and without the freedom of your petitioners' Company, or indeed of this Honourable City, to the great prejudice and impoverishment of the several members of your petitioners' Corporation, who pay all public taxes and duties, and bear all offices in their respective Parishes, Companies and Wards, whereas these unfreemen neither do one nor the other, and this notwithstanding that the Art of Peruke making is an improvement from, if not a part of your Petitioners' trade of Barbary, and your Petitioners' own invention, and has always been exercised by them as a branch of the Barbers' trade.

Nor have such unfreemen any skill therein but what they have learned in their employment under your petitioners.

That your Lordship and Worship together with the Common Council of this Honourable City, have in order to redress grievances of this kind, been lately pleased to pass an Act, That no person not free of the City shall occupy any Art, Manual Occupation, or Handicraft, or keep any shop, room, or place inward or outward for sale of any wares or merchandises upon pain of Five Pounds for every time that he shall do contrary to the said Act.

That the said Law may have its due effect against such persons as exercise the respective Arts of Surgery and Peruke making, your petitioners are very willing to put the said late Act of Common Council in suit at their own expense against all such persons as use either of the said Arts without being Free of this Honourable City, by which means your petitioners do not doubt but to bring more advantage to the City from the said Act than most other Companies.

But that your petitioners may not fail of reaping the benefit thereof in some measure themselves, and for as much as Borders of Hair were made and worn, and were a part of Barbary and the Perukes at the time of passing your petitioners' incorporation Act of Parliament, whereby all Barbers are obliged to be of their Company, and that the laws of your petitioners' Company are best contrived for the government of the said Art, and a very few if any persons are now admitted into your petitioners' Company except Barbers and Surgeons, so that your petitioners do no waies interfere with the other Companies of this Honourable City.

Your petitioners do humbly pray That your Lordship and Worship will be pleased to order that from henceforward No Surgeon or Peruke maker shall be admitted into the freedom of this Honourable City by redemption, unless he has been first admitted into the freedom of your petitioners' Company of Barbers and Surgeons.

LOCALITY OF THE ABDUCTION OF MARY.

Miss Strickland, in following the Act of Parliament by which Bothwell was forfeited, has stated that the precise scene of the abduction of Mary, Queen of Scots, in April, 1567, was at Foulbriggs, now known as Fountainbridge, a western suburb of Edinburgh; considerable doubt has, however, recently arisen, and it is now contended from contemporary historians and the Privy seal record, that Miss Strickland's is an erroneous assertion, and that the real spot was at the two bridges across the Almond, on the borders of Edinburghshire and Linlithgowshire.

THE RAMBLER AND THE ADVENTURER.

The secret history of any popular work, periodicals more especially, as to who were the contributors, and in reference to the appropriation of the papers to their respective authors, has always been matter of interest and moment with the public. The Rambler, by Dr. Johnson, reinvigorated the taste for that species of reading, which had been dormant from the period of the Spectator, the Tatler, and the Guardian; but the Adventurer, as started by Dr. Hawkesworth, from its pleasing variety, became at once more popular than the Rambler; the sale in numbers was considerable, and four large editions were published in less than nine years. The elegance, indeed, of the composition, the charms of the narrative part, and its evident tendency to promote piety and virtue, are recommendations which, it is hoped, can never lose their effect.

To the Adventurer, Dr. Hawkesworth is chiefly indebted for his high literary character and fame. Among his early associates in this paper, the first number of which appeared on Tuesday, November 7, 1752, continued on Saturdays and Tuesdays, to the one hundred and fortieth number; was Bonnell Thornton, whose contributions are marked with the signature A, but his accustomed indolence occasioned irregularity in his communications, and we find but eight papers, nos. 3, 6, 9, 19, 23, 25, 35, and 43, bearing that signature; the last being dated April 3, 1753, refutes the assertion of Alexander Chalmers, that Thornton quitted the Adventurer to become a joint partner with Colman, in the Connoisseur, which did not appear till February, 1754. Hawkesworth has himself stated, the contributions from this channel "soon failed," and its causes have here been explained on good grounds.

The stipulated price which all the authors received from Payne, the publisher, was two guineas for each paper; this was advanced by the bookseller, who risked all expenses, and was soon amply remunerated by a more rapid and extensive sale than the Rambler ever obtained. Another of Hawkesworth's associates was Dr. Richard Bathurst, a physician of considerable skill, but without much practice, and a member of the Johnsonian Ivy-lane Club of Literati. He was the son of Colonel Bathurst, a West India planter, from whom Johnson received his black servant, Francis Barber. The colonel left his affairs on his death in absolute ruin, and the doctor's emolument arising from his contributions to these papers were, it is believed, of considerable service to him in a pecuniary view—his papers have no distinctive marks; those with the signature A are, in the late editions of the British Essayists, improperly appropriated to him—these were, indisputably, from style and subject, Thornton's; nor is there any memorandum extant by which those of Bathurst's can be separated from those given to Dr. Hawkesworth. Employment abroad in his profession being proffered him, Dr. Bathurst readily accepted it, and in the expedition against the Havannah, he fell a sacrifice to the climate. Dr. Johnson, by whom he was, by reason of his amiable manners, highly esteemed, in a letter to Bennet Langton, thus tenderly lamented his demise—"The Havannah is taken, a conquest too dearly obtained, for Bathurst died before it—

Vix Priamus tanti totaque Troja fuit."

Chalmers, quoting Boswell, says, "It cannot be known how much Dr. Bathurst actually contributed. We have, however, the express authority of Sir John Hawkins that Dr. Bathurst wrote the papers signed A; and without depending implicitly on this authority, which is certainly wrong, we may safely assert, that if Dr. Bathurst did not write these papers, he did not write any part of the work, for all the other papers are appropriated, upon undoubted authority, to Dr. Hawkesworth, Johnson, and Warton, with the exception of two or three, the authors of which were unknown to the Editor, are pointed out in this edition."

That Boswell blundered egregiously cannot be questioned, both in this matter and the part Dr. Johnson took in the Adventurer, when, by the loss of Bathurst, and the uncertainty of Thornton, Johnson and Joseph Warton became Hawkesworth's coadjutors. Boswell has said Johnson began to write in the Adventurer on April 10, 1753, but the thirty-fourth paper, printed on Saturday, March 3, was certainly the production of his pen; and an unpublished letter of Payne, the publisher, to Dr. Warton, furnishes data and facts connected with the progress of the Adventurer, which show that no certainty of appropriation of the papers to Hawkesworth previous to that junction can be established—at least as regards those which have no distinctive signature. Dr. Johnson asserted that the Hon. Hamilton Boyle wrote in the Adventurer; probably no. 33, that with the •, which in Chalmers' edition, is given to Hawkesworth, or one of the earlier papers which remain without assignment. Payne's letter is as follows:—

Rev. Sir,—As your paper [on what Arts the Moderns excel the Ancients] will not be printed till Tuesday se'nnight, I was willing to gratify your curiosity by sending The Connoisseur to night.† It is full of dull commonplace stuff, and is, I think, not worthy of Thornton. It is disgusting, I own, to give such imperfect translations of passages selected for the peculiar purposes of our papers, but the Spectator, etc., began it, the unlettered expect the continuance of it, and we must gratify that expectation. The translation of the passage from Dr. [usgrave?] which I sent you, is radically bad, and cannot be mended by alteration. We must take our chance for a translation from Mr. Johnson, which you must help me to procure, and which I will print after the contents of the volume in which it occurs. Last Saturday Mr. Hawkesworth got T. [Johnson] to supply his place; he has begged the same favour of him for Tuesday, on account of a violent pain in his face; but he does not mean that T. should lose his own turn; the state of our affairs, therefore, from last Tuesday se'nnight, stands thus:—

127 Z. 128 T. for H[awkesworth]. 129 Z. 130 H. Saturday, Feb. 2, these are published. 131 T. 132 H.

* British Essayists, 1817, duod. Vol. xxiii. p. 24.

† The first paper of the Connoisseur, written by Bonnell Thornton, published on Saturday, February 2, 1754.

133 Z. The paper I received yesterday. 134 H. 135 T. 136 H. 137 Z. 138 H. 139 T. 140 H.

By this disposition, which H. has given me, you will have room for your criticism on Othello, unless you can include it in one paper, which is hardly possible. It may therefore, be useful to wind up your papers of that kind on some general subject; for Johnson says each must wait his bottom, and not leave the world in ignorance of our sign till the last paper.

J. PAYNE

The words enclosed within a bracket [amending the whole] scored over by a pen in the letter, induces a supposition that Hawkesworth was faltering, and that Warton was confided the strict revision of the whole: certain it is, that to him, in the conduct of the Adventurer, the province of criticism and literature was assigned, and most ably has Warton taught us how the brow of criticism may be smoothed, and how she may be directed, notwithstanding her severity, to attract and to delight.

Johnson's letter to Dr. Warton, dated March 8, 1753, apprising him of the part in The Adventurer that would be assigned to him, if he would accept of it, states, "I have no part in the paper beyond now and then a motto—ques. what was meant by part? The thirty-fourth paper, with his signature, T., had been printed on the third of that month, and a conjecture arises that the paper, the thirty-ninth and the forty-first, were really Johnson's, but contributed by Dr. Bathurst, as Boswell, in explanation, asserts "Mrs. Williams told me that he had given those essays to Dr. Bathurst, who sold them at two guineas each, he never would own them; nay, he used to say he did not write them; but the fact was, he dictated them, while Bathurst wrote. I read to him Mrs. Williams's account; he smiled and said nothing." Payne's letter speaks but of the twenty-three Johnson had written under the signature T. for his own share; but there are twenty-eight papers with that distinctive mark, two having been written to assist Hawkesworth; Boswell was, therefore, possibly correct.

when he stated Johnson commenced with the forty-fifth number, on April 10th, for his own share; the three previous papers being sold to Payne for Dr. Bathurst's personal advantage, and possibly all the share the latter had in any way in the Adventurer.

Chalmers' assertion "Dr. Hawkesworth's share of the Adventurer amounts exactly to a half, or seventy papers," is, by this letter, proved to be a flourish upon fancy; it is not sufficiently clear what portion of the first thirty-eight were really from his pen, as by Payne's letter it appears of the remaining one hundred and two papers Hawkesworth wrote but thirty-nine. Nos. 77, 78, and 79, subscribed FIDELIA, and bearing the mark Y, were written by Miss Mulso, who, in 1760, became Mrs. Chapone. No. 90, printed Saturday, Sept. 15, 1753, with the signature & was contributed by Colman, subsequently the conductor of The Connoisseur; it displays an erudite knowledge of literary history and criticism; and was, in fact, no mean merit to have produced such a paper at the early age of twenty.

The arrangements spoken of by Payne as to the completion were ultimately otherwise, as Hawkesworth contributed Nos. 135 and 136; Johnson, Nos. 137 and 138; and Warton, in No. 139, undertook to explain the design of the critical papers in the Adventurer; Hawkesworth, in the last, giving an account of the general plan and conclusion of the work—in this he pathetically concludes—

Time, who is impatient to date my last paper, will shortly moulder the hand that is now writing it in the dust, and still the breast that now throbs at the reflection; but let not this be read as something that relates only to another; for a few years only can divide the eye that is now reading, from the hand that has written. This awful truth, however obvious, and however reiterated, is yet frequently forgotten; for, surely, if we did not lose our remembrance, or at least our sensibility, that view would always predominate in our lives, which alone can comfort us when we die.

SCHULTZ AB ASCHERADE.—Res sub Ævo gestas Memoriæ tradidit Carl Gust. Schultz ab Ascherade Hagæ Comitum apud P. F. Goffe, 1787; 8vo. pp. 295.

The volume printed on a thick paper, in Octavo, has the pages of type of a duodecimo size, with wide margin, and contains two portraits, one of Frederick II., King of Prussia, the other of William Pitt, Earl of Chatham. Some notice of the author C. G. Schultz ab Ascherade is particularly required, and most biographical and bibliographical Dictionaries, English and Foreign, have been consulted but in vain, with the exception of the Dictionary partially published by the Society for the Diffusion of Useful Knowledge, in which under Ascherade, reference is made to Schultz, but the seven volumes of that work only extended to the end of the letter A. Qu., What was the source from which the Editors derived their notes respecting this Schultz?

Ascherade is a town in Bavaria, six miles north of Carlstadt.

RESEARCHES IN FORFARSHIRE.

The hill of Laws, in Forfarshire, an isolated position, about two miles north of the point where the river Tay falls into the sea, has hitherto been considered a vitrified site; but the excavations now going on rather tend to overturn that idea, and here are found the remains of a loose stone work, gigantic in size, and so far as is known to the writer, unique in character. These excavations are being made by the proprietor, James Neish, Esq., solely for the purpose of clearly ascertaining the character of the work which covers the summit of the hill. The pin here shewn, was found among debris at a considerable depth, it is nearly four inches long, beautifully enamelled upon brass, and apparently by the same process as that now in use. It is submitted in the hope that some correspondent to Current Notes may throw some light upon the period and the people when these sort of articles were in use? Posterity will be indebted to the liberality of the proprietor in thus effecting a discovery of one of the most singular constructions yet exemplified in Scotland.

Deplore with me my Friends

My Wife she is dead,

The pride of my House it is gone,

On a pillow of turf she reposes her head;

And her bosom is bound with the green.

Those Lips were my own, where in kisses perfumed

Yield now a coldness to the worm

Soon in dust and decay

Must her charms be consumed

Her death Bed fresh flowers shall religiously grace

As each mornings Dews & Sunbeams return,

And the hand of affection shall tremblingly trace

This record one the best of her Urn.

Here rests a fine Woman who was sent from above

To teach graces and virtue to man,

But God when he saw her in bad hands

Took pity and recalled her to Heaven again.

SCOT AND LOT.—We read in some of the Cornish histories that the right of voting extended to all the inhabitants 'paying Scot and Lot.' I shall feel greatly obliged to any reader of Current Notes who will inform me what this term means?

Penzance, Feb. 16.

W.

Scot and Lot are words adopted from the Saxons by our ancestors, and incorporated by them into our vernacular tongue; the former from ſceat, a part or portion, the latter from lloſ, lot or chance. The term signified a customary contribution laid upon all subjects according to their ability. In the laws of William the Conqueror, ch. 125, it is directed—all Frenchmen, as well as English, should, according to the English law, observed in the reign of his predecessor King Edward, pay Scot and Lot. The words are there—Anhlote and Anscote. Again, Hoveden, under 1068, states—Rex omne injustum Scotum interdixit. Scot, at times in early records written Scotch, is also in the sense of a contributory payment to any particular object or tax, frequently so indicated by early foreign jurists and lawyers. The charter of William, Earl of Flanders, confirming the Customs of St. Omer, in 1127, enacts—Nullum Scot, nullum talliam, nullam pecunie sue petitionem, ab eis requiro.

Spelman derives the origin of the terms Scot and Lot as already stated, from William the Norman, nor are these old words grown obsolete, for whoever in like manner (though not by equal proportion) are assessed to any contribution, are generally said to pay Scot and Lot. See Statute 33 Henry VIII. cap. 9.

MEANING OF THE WORD STONEHENGE.

One never thinks it worth while to notice the innumerable etymologies with which we are so often favoured by gentlemen who con over their Welsh or Hebrew Dictionaries. They may be very clever and ingenious, but satisfactory only to the discoverer himself. When, however, a scholar like Mr. J. M. Kemble publishes his interpretation of a word, and that word Anglo-Saxon, it becomes a very different matter, and I dare say 999 people out of a thousand would receive the explanation without doubt or questioning. It seems, therefore, most desirable to have any errors, if errors there be, from such a source, at once set right; and for this reason I now trouble you with some remarks upon 'A Note about the word Stonehenge,' which will be found in a late number of your excellent contemporary, Notes and Queries.

In this 'Note,' Mr. Kemble says: 'Now, the proper form of word in Anglo-Saxon was Stānhengena, or possibly Stanhengen, in the first case being plural, in the second singular, therefore either the 'stone-gallows,' or the 'stone-gallows.' After a column of remarks, some true enough, but not much to the purpose, and others to the purpose, but more than doubtful, he concludes thus: 'I think it however quite possible that the Triliths may have served as gallowses on some grand occasion; and that after a defeat, some British leaders may have been sacrificed by tying them up to Woden on the same. But as long as the Anglo-Saxon language is Anglo-

Saxon, Stonehenge can mean nothing but the gallowses.'

The various accounts that have been given of the wonderous stones would fill a volume; but I question whether any, even an Antediluvian and Mammoth hypothesis, is as startling as Mr. Kemble's. As he quotes no authorities for any assertion that he makes, we must deal with his statements as we best can: and I think I can shew that there is no foundation for the strange opinion that the Triliths had been used as gallowses, seeing that his analysis of the name is not all to be depended on.

Stānhengen, if there ever was such a word, did not and could not, mean 'stone-gallows.' We find the word hengen occurring several times in the Anglo-Saxon Laws. In King Ethelred's (p. 142) hengen-witan is translated imprisonment, and in the Laws of Cnut (p. 170) a friendless man must submit to prison, ne abide there—pone gebuge he hengenne and peer gebat etc. In Mr. Thorpe's Glossary, Hengen is defined 'Ergastulum, a prison in which those confined were condemned to hard labour;' and Hengwite is the fine for letting an offender escape from prison, hengen. Stānhengen therefore means a stone prison, and can mean nothing but a stone-prison; but the real word is Stonehenge, and the form given in Henry of Huntingdon, 'apud Stanenges,' proves that hengen was not the latter part of it. Whether henge is adjective or substantive, or what its precise meaning was, there is no fear, no evidence to shew; but till we find this in an intelligible form, we may as well acknowledge our ignorance; bold assertions, assuredly, will not help us at all.

Lord Lyndhurst's expression which occasioned so much umbrage, that 'the Irish were aliens in blood and language, and religion,' appears to have a classical authority in Livy, XXIV., 3.

Mortuorum se, affirmabant Crotonienses, citius quam immixti Bruttiis in alienos ritus mores legesque ac mores linguam etiam verterentur.

ST. IVES' LOVING CUP.

When this town was first denominated a borough became a disputed question, but it was fully incorporated in 1639. The charter of Incorporation was procured by Sir Francis Basset, then member for St. Ives, who in honour of the event presented to the Corporation, a cup on which was engraved the following inscription:

If any discord 'twixt my friends arise,
Within the Borough of beloved St. Ives,
It is deysned that this my Cupp of Love,
To every one a peace-maker may prove:
Then I am blest to have given a legacie
So like my harte unto posteritie.

W. Thornbury, splendidly printed. WITH 12 VERY LARGE AND ELABORATE woodcuts, royal folio, hf. bd. and gilt, £1. 1s

Just published, 1857

These wonderful illustrations by Doré remind the spectator of the grand imaginings of WILLIAM BLAKE; but they are distinguished by even more daring conceptions, with rich humour, startling Rembrandt-like effects of light and shade, bold dealings with form, and true studies of the human figure. The plates are large, and crowded with incident. The woodcuts are singularly fine, shewing all the fine gradations of tint produced in metal engraving and in lithograph.

The great merit of this publication is the peculiar excellence of the line engravings which distinguishes all the plates—are entirely line engravings. There is no stippling, nor any sort of mixture of mezzotint, &c. employed. The whole engraved, and very admirably engraved, in line. This is the sort of work to be in request by print collectors, and to be specimens of a superior branch of the art for the portfolios of judges.”—TIMES.

JES'S (Owen) GRAMMAR of ORNAMENT, a series of 101 large and EXQUISITELY COLOURED plates executed in CHROMOLITHOGRAPHY, comprising THREE THOUSAND examples of the DECORATIONS of all ages and nations, with Descriptive Letter-press, illustrated with woodcuts, impl. folio, JUST PUBLISHED, complete in 25 parts, £12. 15s (pub. at £17. 10s) 1856

The aim of the author is to present the student with a TEXT BOOK of design selected from the best works of all styles, and what, by returning to the works of Nature for fresh inspiration, we may yet go forward, and whilst availing ourselves experience of all time, may be enabled to produce works in harmony with our own times, instead of blindly following footsteps of the past.

ready, Parts I. & II., each containing Three coloured Plates, and Letter-press Descriptions, imp. 4to. price 7s 6d per part.

AN'S COSTUMES of the CLANS of the SCOTTISH HIGHLANDS, a Series of Seventy-two large and beautifully coloured full-length Figures, displaying their Dress, Tartans, Arms, Armorial Insignia, and Social Occupations, from Original Sketches by R. R. M'Ian, Esq. With Descriptions and copious Historical Memoranda of Character, Mode of Life, &c. by James Logan, Esq. Dedicated by special permission to Her Majesty.

* W. & S. beg to announce that the above fine work, which is undoubtedly one of the most beautiful, original, and interesting national productions ever published, will be re-issued by them in Monthly Parts, each containing Three accurately engraved Plates, with full Descriptions, and will form 2 splendid vols. large 4to.

This work is one of the most valuable and interesting works of modern times. The portraits are painted by a veritable and man—an artist of the true stamp, who is familiar with his subjects. It is a work of no ordinary importance.” Art Union. The tartans given by Messrs. M'Ian and Logan we have ever considered, and we know they have been always received, veritable patterns.”—Morning Post.

RNER'S (FRANCIS, M.P.) MEMOIRS AND CORRESPONDENCE edited by his Brother, L. Horner, Esq. F.R.S. THE ENLARGED EDITION, portrait, 2 large vols. 8vo. new cloth, 10s 6d (pub. at £1. 10s) Murray, 1853

The last and by far the most valuable edition of this highly interesting publication, comprising upwards of one hundred more than the previous one.

Towers and Spires of the Cathedral Churches.

WICKES' (C. Architect) SPIRES AND TOWERS OF THE MIDDLE AGES OF ENGLAND, Illustrations of, with Observations on the Architecture of the Middle Ages, 52 fine large drawings on stone of the principal English Cathedrals and on tinted paper, 2 vols. impl. folio, new hf. morocco, £2. 18s (pub. at £7. 5s) Wicks

This fine work illustrates the most beautiful specimens of Spire, Tower, and Steeple Architecture in all our Kingdom. The plates are executed in a very accurate and elaborate manner, from drawings made expressly for the author himself.

OSBURN'S (W.) MONUMENTAL HISTORY OF EGYPT, as recorded in the Ruins of her Temples, Palaces, and Tombs, upwards of 1200 Hieroglyphics and other antiquities, some of which are coloured, 2 large and handsome volumes, 8vo. cloth, 16s (pub. at £2. 2s)

This valuable work embraces the period from the first Colonization of the Valley of the Nile, to the Exodus. The number of Hieroglyphics and other illustrations amounts to upwards of 1200 not one of which has been copied from any existing English work, many being taken from Sketches by the Author's own hand, whilst assistance has been given to the very costly and elaborate works issued by the Governments of France, Italy, and Germany, and which are almost all in England.

Just Ready, Vol. 14, price 5s.

THIERS' HISTORY OF THE CONSULATE AND THE EMPIRE OF FRANCE, UNDER NAPOLEON, the late Mr. Colburn's authorized library edition, in 8vo. in 14 vols.

NOTICE.—Messrs. Willis and Sotheran beg respectfully to announce that they have just purchased the entire Copyright of the authorized library edition of the above valuable work, which will be continued and completed as possible after the publication of the original in France. Vols. 1 to 14 are now ready, price 5s each; Vol. 15 is shortly, and the entire work will be completed in 17 vols. at the beginning of the next year. Those gentlemen who present possess the first 11 vols. as published by Mr. Colburn, can by giving their names to W. and S. as above, have the 12th and concluding volumes, be supplied with Vols. I. to XI. at half price, namely, for £1. 7s 6d, instead of the published price of £2. 16s.

SHAKSPERE'S PLAYS AND POEMS, Knight's National Library Edition, with Dissertations, numerous Notes, &c. printed in large type, illustrated by upwards of 1000 Woodcuts of Views, Old Buildings, Antiquities and Costume, Portraits, &c. 6 vols. in 12. Biography of Shakspeare, 1 vol.—Knight's Studies and Illustrations of the Writings of Shakspeare, and of his Life and Times, 1 vol.; together, 8 vols. 8vo. extra cloth, new, £2. 10s.—The Russian Edition, in 12 vols. in 6, £3. 3s

W. and S. having secured a few of the still remaining copies of this valuable edition, beg to call attention to the present low price. It includes the Notes and other matters of the eight volumes of the original Pictorial Edition (now out of print), thoroughly revised.—“One of the best editions of the works of the immortal dramatist ever published, the size is convenient, the type and paper are of the best, the illustrations, though not profuse, are excellent, and the notes, it is sufficient to say, are by Mr. Charles Knight.”—LEEDS TIMES.

NATIONAL CYCLOPÆDIA OF USEFUL KNOWLEDGE, published by

C. Knight, illustrated by numerous woodcuts, the complete work, 12 vols. 8vo. new cloth, (pub. at £3.)—The same, newly half bound in Russia, 12 vols. in 6, £2. 10s

This is one of the best Cyclopædias for general use ever published: embracing—Ancient and Modern History, Civil and Ecclesiastical; Chronology; Biography and Topography; Law and Government; Economy; Philosophy; Mathematics; Physical Science; Chemistry; Geology and Mineralogy; Zoology, Botany, Surgery, and Anatomy; Agriculture; Arts and Manufactures; Architecture; Painting and Engraving; Bookbinding.

SCOTT'S COMMENTARY ON THE HOLY BIBLE, a new and corrected copyright edition, and the only one containing the Author's final Additions and Emendations, embellished with 15 maps and 69 Illustrations of Scripture Incidents and Scenery, 6 vols. in 12, cloth, £3. 3s.—The same, newly bound, calf extra, £5. 15s

The present is a new Subscription edition of this valuable commentary, of which but a limited number of copies are for sale, at the remarkably low price of £3. 3s for the complete work in 6 vols. W. and S. having, as before, a small supply, beg to call attention to the fact that the present is the only opportunity of obtaining the work closed, and in a short time no more sets will be attainable. Those customers, therefore, who are desirous of the work, are respectfully requested to transmit their names to W. and S. without delay.

BARONIAL HALLS and Picturesque Edifices of England, from Drawings by

Harding, Cattermole, Prout, Allom, &c. 72 beautiful plates, and numerous fine woodcuts, with Descriptions by S. C. Hall, Esq. F.S.A. 2 large vols. roy. 4to. new half morocco, gilt leaves, £3. 10s (pub. at £7. 7s)—Another copy, LARGE PAPER, CHOICE PROOFS of the plates, 2 sumptuous vols. half morocco, gilt leaves, £6. 6s (pub. at £14. 14s)

A very beautiful and interesting work; containing views of some of the finest specimens of Castellated Architecture selected from nearly every county in England.

SIMPSON'S ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE WAR IN THE EAST, from the commencement to its close (COLNAGHI'S Authentic Series), consisting of 81 large Plates, in imperial folio, printed in the first style of art, in double tints, by DAY AND SON, with key-plates to each forming 2 volumes, in parts, £4. 4s (pub. at £12.)

Of this most beautiful work it is impossible to exaggerate the importance and peculiar interest. At the period of its publication it excited universal admiration, as presenting the most perfect Pictures of the incidents of War that Art has ever given to the world. As evidences of its merits, both artistically and historically, the following Testimonials from distinguished Crimean Heroes, and from eminent Artists, may be appropriately quoted:—

"I have great pleasure in bearing my testimony to their accuracy and correctness, and I cannot but hope that they will be kept together as a collection, and be bought by the Nation as a valuable memento of the present War in the East, and the memorable Siege of Sebastopol."—H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CAMBRIDGE.

"I have had great pleasure in looking at Mr. Simpson's Crimean Drawings, and I am much struck by the fidelity with which everything he saw is represented."—REAR-ADMIRAL LORD LYONS.

"The Drawings were, to Colonel Steele's knowledge, faithful representations of the events passing before Mr. Simpson's eyes; and, in carrying out his object, Mr. Simpson was continually exposed to the enemy's fire."—COLONEL STEELE.

"I have been much struck with the fidelity and spirit of Mr. Simpson's Sketches in the Crimea, and I am decidedly of opinion that their acquisition by the nation as a memorial of the great struggle in which we have been engaged would be highly desirable."—A. H. LAYARD, Esq., M.P.

The Beautiful Scenery throughout the Crimea.

BOSSOLI'S (CARLO) AUTHENTIC VIEWS WITHIN THE CITY AND HARBOUR OF SEBASTOPOL; also at Perekop, Eupatoria, Balaklava, Simferopol, Bakchi-Sarai, Kara-Su-Bazar, Kertch, Fort Arabat, &c., and on the Rivers Alma, Katcha, and Salghir, illustrating the Scenery and Customs throughout the Crimea, taken prior to the War, a series of 52 large and extremely beautiful lithographic drawings, in double tints, on 30 plates, imperial folio, in parts, £2. 12s 6d (pub. at £5. 5s)—or, coloured and mounted like original drawings, £5. 5s (pub. at £10. 10s)

The Artist, Carlo Bossoli, having lived for some time in the Crimea, in the suite of Prince Woronzoff, then Governor General of New Russia, Bessarabia, and the Crimea, enjoyed frequent opportunities of visiting every part of the Peninsula. He was thus enabled to make upon the spot a collection of Sketches of the Cities, Fortresses, Costumes, &c. of unusual excellence, for by no one could the beautiful and varied scenery of the country have been more worthily treated.

CONSTANTINOPLE AND THE MOSQUE OF AYA SOPHIA, as recently

Restored by the Sultan, in double tinted lithography, from the original Drawings by CHEVALIER FOSSATI; with Descriptions of the Plates, by Viscount DE BEAUMONT, being a series of Twenty-One Interior and Exterior Views of the Mosque of St. Sophia, and four Panoramic Views of Constantinople; together with an illuminated Title-page, by Owen Jones, impl. folio, half morocco, £1. 10s (pub. at £4. 4s)—or, coloured and mounted like original drawings, in portfolio, £4. 10s (pub. at £10. 10s)

Apart from the great interest attaching to the subject here illustrated, associated as it is with the events now passing in the East, this work recommends itself by its artistic merits—the lithography being of the highest class, and amongst the latest from the hands of Louis Haghe, Esq.

SAINT MONACELLA'S LAMBS.

Recently reading a volume of Popular Stories, I found hares are there designated 'Saint Monacella's Lambs;' but on referring to the list of Saints' days in Nicolas's Chronology of History, no such saint is there noticed. Can any reader of Current Notes kindly inform me who Saint Monacella was, and why hares are so particularly under her tutelage?

Hastings, March 10.

M. A. G.

The legend of St. Monacella relates that she was the daughter of an Irish Monarch, who had determined to marry her to a nobleman of his court. She had however vowed celibacy, fled from her father's dominions, and took refuge in Wales, where she lived fifteen years without seeing the face of man. At length, Brochwel Ysseythrog, Prince of Powis, one day hare-hunting, pursued his game till he came to a great thicket, when he was amazed to find a virgin of surprising beauty, engaged in deep devotion, with under her robe the hare he had been pursuing, boldly facing the dogs, who retired howling to a distance, notwithstanding all the efforts of the prince's followers to make them seize their prey. Even when the huntsman attempted to blow his horn, it stuck to his lips. The prince heard her story, and gave to God and to her a parcel of land, to be a sanctuary to all that fled there. He desired her to found an Abbey on the spot; she did so, and died Abbess thereof in a good old age. She was buried in the neighbouring church, called Pennant, distinguished from her burial there by the addition of Melangell.

Pennant, Tour in Wales, vol. ii. p. 347, notices—At about two miles distance from Llangynog, I turned up a small valley to the right, to pay my devotions to the shrine of St. Monacella, or as the Welsh style her, Melangell. Her hard bed is shewn in the cleft of a neighbouring rock; and her tomb was in a little chapel, or oratory adjoining to the church of Pennant Melangell, now used as a vestry-room. This room is still (1784) called Cell-y-bedd, or the Cell of the Grave; but her reliques, as well as her image, have long since been removed. The last is, I think, still to be seen in the churchyard, and the legend is perpetuated by some rude wooden carvings of the saint, with numbers of hares scuttling to her for protection. She properly became their patroness, and they were called Mwyn Melangell—St. Monacella's Lambs. The superstitious opinion so generally prevailed till the last century, that no person in the parish would kill a hare; and even later, when a hare was pursued by the dogs, it was as positively believed, that it was sure to escape, if any one said—God and Saint Monacella be with thee!

Saint Melange's day is noticed by Sir N. H. Nicolas as occurring on January 31.

The Fairs hitherto held at Easter and Whitsuntide at Greenwich, have this year been suppressed.

VOL. VII.

PROVINCIAL RHYMES.

Halliwell in his Nursery Rhymes, 1844, p. 47, notices some 'scholastic' lines—

In fir tar is, in oak none is.
In mud eel is, in clay none is.
Goat eat ivy, man eat oats.

and observes—'the joke consists in saying these lines so quick that it cannot be told whether it is English or gibberish. For the version now printed, more complete than the one given by Chambers, I am indebted to Professor De Morgan, who has heard it in Dorsetshire.' As a reference to their probable antiquity, he also states the words in the last line are quoted in a manuscript of the fifteenth century, Sloane Coll. 4; see Reliquæ Antiquæ, vol. i. p. 324.

In Buckinghamshire, there is a similar jocosery that has escaped him: the words are spoken so rapidly by most speakers, that few persons are able during the repetition to catch one word, or even the probable sense of what is there spoken.

As I was going up trictable tractable present,
There I spied unicle crunicle cronicle current;
I called my man Richard, a doctor of physio,
To bring out his fearige facarige fan,
To shoot unicle crunicle cronicle current,
That sat upon trictable tractable present.

Possibly other counties had their popular rhymes, now fast passing into desuetude, and in many instances to be irrecoverably forgotten, unless occasionally transmitted to the pages of your widely diffused Current Notes.

The following Charade, the production of an eminent Dignitary of the Church, has been handed to me for solution, which I have been unable to render; perhaps some of your readers may be more successful.

Oldbury, March 14.

J. LOWE.

I sit here on a rock whilst I'm raising the wind,
When the storm is abated I'm gentle and kind;
I have kings at my feet who await but my nod,
To kneel in the dust on the ground where I trod;
I am seen by the world, yet am known but to few;
The Gentiles detest me, I'm Pork to the Jew.
I never have passed but one night in the dark,
And that was with Noah alone in the ark;
My weight is three pounds, my length is a mile;
And when I'm discover'd you'll say with a smile—
My first and my last are the best in the Isle.

A solution in rhyme would be very acceptable. Ed.

TOUCHING FOR THE KING'S EVIL.

M. V.'s Enquiry in Current Notes for January last, induces me to forward the following paper, which was directed to the Company of Barbers and Surgeons, in the reign of Charles the Second, when it appears the Stuarts practised this with other deceptions, in accordance with their imbibed notions of the monarchical Right Divine. This mesmeric delusion was continued during the reign of Queen Anne, and the Evil Angels or Tokens were gold pieces; but those presented by the Old Pretender were silver. The original document, of which this is a transcript, is endorsed—'Proposals for Regulating the Healings, in King Charles the Second's Reign; but though designated Proposals, these instructions were delivered to the Officials of the Barbers and Surgeons, as a Mandate for their observance.

Lee Road, Blackheath.

J. J. H.

For the better regulating of the Healings, his Majestie is pleased to Order as followeth:—

That the Public Healings be limited to the months of March and Aprill for the Spring Season, and October and November for the Fall. The disease at those times being most apparent, and the weather then most temperate, both for his Majestie to touch, and the poore people to travell.

That a convenient House, Tent, or other Place be appointed for the viewing of the diseased—having one door to enter in, and another to goe forth at; and that at each door, two of his Majesties Guards be ordered to stand; and next to the first door, within shall stand the Serjeant Chyrurgeon in waiting with the rest of the Serjeant Chyrurgeons, and the Chyrurgeon in Ordinary to his Majesties Person, and at least, one of his Majesties Physitians in Ordinary to view the diseased people.

And that no Tickett be given but by the Serjeant Chyrurgeon in writing, and that in the presence and with the approbation of the rest before mentioned; and that the names and dwelling places of such as receive Ticketts be registered in a Booke by the Serjeants man.

That the Serjeant Chyrurgeon in waiting shall admit and passe any to be healed, who shall be sent to him from any of his Majesties Physitians in Ordinary, bringing a note signed under his hand.

That all such as present themselves to be healed shall bring a Certificate under the hands of the Minister and Churchwardens of the parish wherein they live, that they have never been touched by his Majestie.

That a command be sent to the Bishops of London, Winchester, and Rochester, that the Minister of each parish within the Citties of London and Westminster, and within ten miles distance round about be ordered by them to send their hands and seals in a small pice of parchment, to be kept always in readiness, to compare with their hands which they sett to Certificate; And that every Minister register what Certificate he gives to prevent the abuse of certifying more than once for one person, which hath been too frequently done.

That no person, be it his Majesties Servant, or other, upon paine of his Majesties displeasure, presume to bring into his Majesties presence any one to be touched for the Evil, who hath not been viewed and received a Token for the same.

That neither for viewing the sicke, registering their names, giving Tokens, or presenting them to his Majestie, the Serjeant Chyrurgeon, or his Servant, or any other assistant, presume to demand or to receive any Money Present whatsoever.

That none presume to wait at the Healing, but the Serjeant Chyrurgeon, and such other of his Majesties Chyrurgeons as are necessary; the Apothecary to his Majesties Person, and what other of his Majesties Servants shall be appointed, that so his Majestie may not be pressed on, and the Ceremony hindred by officious Waiters.

That whereas when there was but one Serjeant Chyrurgeon, the Chyrurgeon to the Person did officiate in his absence as Serjeant, since now there are by his Majesties favour three Serjeants,

That the Chyrurgeon to the Person may not be deprived of the Rights of his Place, and rendered useless by the Serjeants waiting one for another,

Be it ordered, That in the sickness or absence of any Serjeant, the Chyrurgeon to the Person wait in his room when there was but one Serjeant, and alsoe that he take his turns in Hunting and Journays with each Serjeant in the month as heretofore.

And that the rather, because his Majestie hath decreed by an Act of Council, that the Serjeants as they die shall be reduced to one as before.

ROY'S WIFE OF ALDIVALLOCH.

Mrs. Grant was certainly the authoress of Roy's Wife of Aldivalloch. In the additional Illustrations to Johnson's Scottish Musical Museum, Edinb. 1839, vol. iv., p. 368,* is an extract of a letter from George Thomson, the correspondent of Burns; concerning this letter the writer says, 'Mrs. Grant of Carron is the same lady who married Dr. Murray of Bath, but I know not her maiden name, nor whether she be alive or dead—don't probably, for she was well up in years, when she married the Doctor, whom I knew well, a warm hearted Irishman, and a very good flute-player. She was generally understood to be the writer of Roy's Wife, but I cannot help you to any written authority for the fact. You are quite right in suspecting traditional authorities in general—they are little to be relied on.'

Mr. David Laing, the erudite editor of the Museum, adds—'Through the obliging enquiries of J. P. Grant Esq., son of the late Mrs. Grant of Laggan; I have since learned the following particulars of this lady. Her maiden name was Grant, and she was born near Aberlour, on the banks of the river Spey, about the year 1745. She was twice married, first to her cousin Grant of Carron, near Elchies, on the river Spey, about 1763, and secondly to a Physician in Bath, whose name is stated to have been Dr. Brown, not Murray. She died at Bath, sometime about 1814, and is not known to have written any other song than Roy's Wife.'

I may, however, state, it is quite certain that the name of the lady's second husband was Murray, not Brown; and that I have in a manuscript collection attributed to her pen, several songs written by her. They are chiefly on local subjects.

HISTORICAL NOTICES OF LITERARY PERSONS.

The following extracts from the parish register of St. Giles's, Cripplegate, may possibly interest some readers of Current Notes.

Burrill in Aprile 1587.

John Fox, householder, preacher, the 20 day.

This entry, it is almost nugatory to observe, refers to the great Martyrologist.

Under those of Weddings in August, 1620, is notified the marriage of the Protector.

Oliver Crumwell and Elizabeth Bourchr. 22.

Among the Burials in November, 1674, is recorded the sepulture of the immortal author of Paradise Lost.

John Milton, Gentleman, Consumpscon, Chancell, 12.

Daniel de Foe was born in this parish in 1661; his literary career, memorable as it was, did not avail to secure him against penury and want at the close of life. He is believed to have died in insolvent circumstances, at an obscure lodging in this parish, and under 'burying in April,' 1731, occurs —

Daniel De Foe, Gentleman, to Tindalls, Lethargy, 26.

'To Tindall's' implied that the corpse was borne thence to Tindalls burying ground, more generally known by the appellation of Bunhill Fields.

EPITAPHS IN PERTH AND FORFARSHIRE.

Travel where you will, the eye of the observer will frequently discern among the memorials of the dead much to interest him, and arrest his attention, and although much that is quaint may be often too broadly expressed to correspond with the generally received notions of the solemnity of the scene, yet there these memorials are; our railing at them does not displace them, or alter the effect which their reality creates; we must comply with the fact to receive them with all their inconsistencies, and make them available either for the purposes of history, or of mental consideration. Embued with these feelings, in my journeys I have not passed the depositories of the departed without casting a longing, lingering look behind, and have noted many an epitaph which doubtless will conduce to the amusement, if not of the instruction, of the reader; and as Current Notes are read in situations far distant from the Metropolis, or the busy haunts of the artisan or the commercial man, your columns are often the vehicle of much to gratify the desultory as well as the studious reader, and believing that epitaphs are at all times acceptable, I enclose the following for your adoption.

In Grey Friars' churchyard, Perth, lie the remains of the Rev. William Wilson, who died in his fifty-first year, in 1741. He was originally a minister of the Middle Church, Perth, to which he was ordained in 1716; and being the first to join and support Ebenezer Erskine in his views against the laws of Church Patronage in the Church of Scotland, was by the General Assembly in 1740, with several other parish ministers, deposed from his official capacity. Thus deprived of his old church, and followed by the greater part of his congregation, he became the founder of the Secession Church in Perth. His epitaph thus pronounces his eulogium—

More brave than David's mighty men,
This Champion fought it fair
In Truth's defence, both by the pen,
The pulpit, and the chair.
He stood with his associates true
To Scotland's solemn oath;
And taught to render homage due
To God, and Cæsar both.
Earth, raging from his sacred post
Debarred the worthy sage;
Heaven frown'd and sent a furious host
To, venge the sacriledge.
Mourn Zion, your Elijah's gone
And wafted to the skies —
Mourn, till his fiery car bring down
A soul of equal size.

On a memorial in the Grey Friars, Perth, to Robert Vallance, Deacon of the Weavers, who died in 1781, aged 65, are these lines —

Muse, here assist me now, I surely must,
Relate brave Vallance character that's just.
Renowned, much justice will join his cause,
Of tradesmen, he in Perth, deserves applause —
Betrayed no trust was put into his hand,
Endeavouring allways by the truth to stand.
Ready he was, and that at any hour,
To make address [redress?], or to relieve the poor.
Vallance, whose virtuous actions shone so bright,
Always did stand up for the City's right;
Let monuments or some recorded verse
Loud unto Ages his bright fame rehearse.
All craftsmen who him knew will yet declare
None in the Country could with him compare.
Grief now, nor pain, no more his peace annoys;
Enter'd the Choir, he lives in perfect joys.

It will doubtless be observed this is composed as an acrostic.

In Dunfermline Abbey churchyard, on Elizabeth Meiklejohn, who died 1761, aged 27, we read—

Reader, see how death all down puls,
And nought remains but shanks and skulls;
For the greatest Champion ere drew breath,
Was all-wise conquered by Death.

In Forfarshire, I have noted the following distich in the old kirkyard of Kinnaird, Farnell, A.D. 1600.

HVE [WE]. DOE. THIS. FOR. NO. WTHER. END
BVT. THAT. OWR. BVRIAL. MAY. BE. KEND.

Within the old kirk of Nevay, the stone in a mutilated condition—

Heir lye the Tyries in Nevay
Honest men and brave follows.

In Strathmartin old burial ground, on James Anderson, 1690:

Among the earth beneath this stone
Doth his forefathers ly
And this has been ther burial place
Sine mans rememberie.

On another, in the same place, name illegible, 1754:

Heir lyes a godly honest man,
All men that knew him said,—
He was an elder of the church,
And weaver to his trade.

In the old kirkyard of Essie, on David Wighton, schoolmaster, who died in 1717, aged 75.

Below this Tomb there lyeth thus Ean David Wightoun in the Bush.
A Rabie Father was indeed
As you may see this tomb to read.
In English, and Arithmetie both,
He could both write and spell;
In Greek a great proficient;
In Hebrew did excell.

In Newgate churchyard, on Robert Small, who died 1771—

Here lies the dust of Robert Small,
Who, when in life was thick, not tall;
But what's of greater consequence,
He was endowed with good sense.

HERALDS' COLLEGE. Had the great Fire of London, 1666, any effect on the records of the Heralds' College?

Are there any other countries besides England and Ireland, who have now any Colleges or Office of Arms?

Rotheram, March 13.

F. W. H.

The Heralds' College was destroyed, but the records and books, with one or two exceptions, were, as the fire approached, moved to a room in the palace at Whitehall, near the Court of Requests, formerly called the Queen's Court. After the fire, notice was given in the Gazette, the Heralds' Office was held there.

Scotland has her Heralds' College, the chief officer being Lion King of Arms, Edinburgh.

An old newspaper, even in a moment of listlessness, has its charms. It puts one into something like the condition of a prescient being. Perusing the journals of the by-gone day, we see passions agitating, which are now extinct; reports affirmed, which we know to be false; alarms sounded, which we are sure had no foundation; and expectation all alive—upon projects which have ended in nothing.

ROGERS' MONUMENT.—In the chancel of the parish church of Hornsey, a mural memorial has been placed by the poet's nephews; it consists of a medallion head, by Behnes, and is deemed an admirable resemblance; below which is the following inscription:—

In Memory of

SAMUEL ROGERS,

Author of the 'Pleasures of Memory,'

Born at Newton Green, xxx July, MDCCCLXIII.

Died at St. James's Place, Westminster, xviii Dec., MDCCCLV.

His mortal remains are buried in this churchyard.

EARLY ENGLISH LOVE SONG.

Am I not in blessed case,
Treasure and Pleasure to possess;
I would not wishe no better place,
If I may still have weltheines:
And to enjoye in perfect peace
My Lady, Lady:
My pleasure pleasure shall encrease,
My deare Lady.

Helene may not compared be,
Nor Cressida that was so bright;
These cannot staine the shine of thee,
Nor yet Minerua of great might.
Thou passest Venus farre away,
Lady, Lady;
Loue thee I will both night and day,
My dere Lady.

My mouse, my nob, my cony sweete,
My hope and loye, my whole delight;
Dame Nature may fall at thy feete,
And yeelde to thee her crowne of righte.
I will thy body now embrace,
Lady, Lady;
And kiss thy swete and pleasaunt face,
My deare Lady.

Enterlude of the Triall of Treasure, 1567.

IRISH QUARTERS.—Looking over some old family letters, I find the following Epigram which has some point, and may afford some amusement.

More than Four Quarters in the year,
Could never yet be made appear;
Till Parli'ment omnipotently great,
Received a Bill creating Eight.

The bill introduced into the Irish Parliament, was for increasing the number of Quarter Sessions.

A special general meeting of the Royal Institute of British Architects was held on Monday, the 2nd inst. when it was resolved unanimously to humbly submit to Her Majesty's gracious consideration, the awarding of the Royal gold medal for the year 1856, to Mr. Owen Jones, Member of the Institute, author of The Albert, the Grammar of Ornament, and other works, all of which are entitled to much commendation, and are highly popular.

BLUE STOCKINGS. May I ask what was the origin of the blue stocking associations of which we read till within a few past years, and even now when some ladies generally of a certain age are in society, they are en-passant spoken of or alluded to, as quite 'blue stockings?' They seem as coteries to be of but a modern date.

Belgrave Square. W.

The origin of blue stocking coteries derived from an association of parties, partly chivalrous and partly festive, is of a much earlier date than generally supposed. The society de la Calza (of the Stocking), was instituted at Venice in the year 1400, in honour of the inauguration of Michael Steno, Procurator of Saint Mark, as Doge. The business of its members was conversation and festivity, and so attractive were their entertainments of music and dancing, that the gay spirits of other parts of Italy assiduously sought the honour of admission as members. Their statutes had solely reference to the ceremonies of their balls and general meetings for diversion, and the members, being resolved on their rigorous observance took an oath in a church to that tendency. They had banners and a seal as an authorised order of Knighthood, and their costume was displayed in all the elegance and splendour which the luxuriancy of Venetian taste could devise; but with the inconsistency of the whimsical custom of the Italians of bedizening or marking their academies and other intellectual associations by some external signs of caprice or folly, the members when they assembled for literary discussions were distinguished by the colours of their stockings. These colours were sometimes fantastically blended, and on others, only one colour, particularly the blue prevailed. The society de la Calza continued till 1590, when the foppery of Italian Literature assumed another symbol; the rejected title then crossed the Alps, and found a congenial reception in the flippancy and literary triflings of Parisian society, and particularly branded Female pedantry as the strongest feature in the character of French pretension. The name and something of its character diverged from France to England, and for a while marked the vanity of the worthless advances in literature which were so highly vaunted among our feminine coteries. The propriety of the appellation and its application are, at length, passing into desuetude, for it is apparent to all that in every circle, attainments in literature can and are accomplished by ladies with no deterioration of female importance or propriety: it is in England, more than in any other, that knowledge asserts her right of general dominion, and majestically maintains the position, that, if she be the sustaining energy of one sex, she also contributes to the lighter charm, the graceful adornment of the other.

The verse in the old nursery song, a portion of that commencing with One-ery, two-ery, Zicary zan—

Hinx Minx! now the witch winks,

The fat begins to fry;

There's nobody at home but jumping Joan,
And Father, and Mother, and I.

Has a classical parallel in Ovid, Fast. IV. 543.

Tota domus læta est, hoc est materque, paterque
Nataque; tres illi tota fuere domus.

Mox epulas ponunt, liquefacta coagula lacti.

PROPOSED INTERCHANGE OF DUPLICATE COINS.

I have good reason to know that Current Notes is in the hands of most Coin Collectors, therefore, I wish to make a proposition in its pages, if the Editor will lend his aid, which if put in practice will be a great boon to us of the Numismatic Fraternity. Coin Collectors of whatever class and extent their collections are, must frequently accumulate duplicates of which, from the circumstances of their position, that which is useless to one man is eagerly sought by another; thus, if Collectors knew each others' names, and to what class their attention was directed, Manuscript lists of their duplicate specimens might be circulated, and if the Editor would receive and publish a list of Collectors' Names, it would be very desirable.

The Editor's agency is at the service of L. A. W., or of any other collector.

I would feel greatly obliged if any of your numerous readers of Current Notes would give me an explanation of the following Medal.

NATIONAL GALLERY. The Krüger Collection of sixty-four early German paintings, formerly at Minden, were in 1854, purchased for the National Gallery, in no way authorised by the Trustees, for 2800*l.*, and the expenses of conveyance hither were 116*l.* 19*s.* 8*d.*, in all 2916*l.* 19*s.* 8*d.* The most tolerable of these, seventeen in number, after considerable repairs and redecoration, were in October in that year, placed in the room on the left, at the head of the staircase, and have created for it, the appellation of 'the Chamber of Horrors.' Ten of these pictures have been sent to Ireland, or elsewhere; and the remaining thirty-seven were sold, Feb. 14, by Messrs. Christie and Manson, for 249*l.* 8*s.*, at prices varying from twelve shillings to an extreme sum of twenty-two pounds. Deducting the cost of the repatriation to those now in the Gallery, and the charges of sale, the seventeen remaining, which advance nothing preceptory in art, cost severally the frightful sum of one hundred and sixty pounds.

KNIGHTS OF ST. JOHN OF JERUSALEM.

The military brotherhood or order of the Knights Hospitallers was founded by Gerard Tour, who was born at Martigues in Provence. After the capture of Jerusalem, he in 1099, established in that city a house of refuge, as an asylum to pilgrims coming from all parts of the Christian world to visit the Holy Places. Raymond Dupuy succeeded Gerard as Grand Master of the Order, and he decided that the brotherhood should in future become military as well as hospitaller, and that it should defend by arms the Christians against the infidels. The Order thenceforth assumed the title of Knights of St. John of Jerusalem, where they continued till Saladin, in 1188, obtaining possession of Palestine, the Knights quitted Jerusalem to establish themselves at Acre, and subsequently at Rhodes, till 1530, when on Charles the Fifth giving to them the island of Malta, they proceeded thither. The French nation having since the crusades constantly assumed to represent in the East the military spirit of the West, and to be in that country the most pious and most steadfast supporter of the interests of the Latin Church, the French Government has long coveted the possession of the ruins of the Knights' establishment at Jerusalem, a desire that has at length been gratified. The Sultan, who had already presented to the Emperor Napoleon the Church of the Nativity at Jerusalem, has in order to render the gift more complete and acceptable, also given to him the old palace of the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem, which is annexed to St. Peter's prison. The Greeks had also solicited for the same building, but the ruins have been surrendered to France in compliment to her considering herself as the representative of Catholic interests in the East.

GELIDUS THE PHILOSOPHER. Current Notes well maintains its archæological and literary character, and the paper in the last in reference to 'the Rambler' and 'the Adventurer' is replete with interest. I have long been an admirer of 'the Rambler,' in which, in No. 24, there is a character of Gelidus the Philosopher, a man of great penetration and deep researches; had Dr. Johnson any known person in view in the personation, or is it, as possibly it is, simply one of fiction?

Gloucester, March 3.

P. H.

Gelidus the Philosopher was a real character: the Rev. John Coulson; he took his degree of A. M., April 12, 1746, and was subsequently a senior Fellow of University College. In appearance and habit, he resembled Dr. Johnson, and was considered in his time as an Oxford character. Mr. and Mrs. Thrale, with Dr. Johnson, visited Oxford, Sept. 22, 1774, and the great lexicographer, in his journal, notices on the 23rd, the visit of Mr. Thrale and himself to Mr. Coulson; and that on the 24th, they both, with Mrs. Thrale, and her daughter then ten years old, afterward Lady Keith; dined with him. After this visit, Dr. Johnson told Mrs. Thrale, that Mr. Coulson was the man designated in the Rambler, under the name of Gelidus the Philosopher.

KIT-CAT CLUB.—In 1821, was published a folio volume, entitled Memoirs of the celebrated Persons composing the Kit-Cat Club, with forty-eight Portraits, engraved from the original Paintings of Sir Godfrey Kneller. I possess this book, and beg to refer to the just castigation it deserved in the Quarterly Review, March 1822, pp. 425-437, where it is denounced as 'one of the most blundering pieces of patch-work that the scissors of a hackney editor ever produced.' No hint is there given as to who was 'the anonymous personage who produced this astonishing work,' and though I have made many enquiries as to the name of the party, I have been unsuccessful, yet a query in Current Notes might I am told elicit an answer. May I ask if any reader can furnish me with the requisite information as to who was the editor, or compiler of the volume in question.

St. Ann's Street, Manchester.

H.

The editor, or compiler, which our Correspondent places, was James Caulfield. The production of the Kit-Cat Club was one of the many speculations of the late Mr. Charles Walker, for whom Caulfield also edited the Remarkable Characters, to which and to the six volume edition of Granger's Biographical History of England, the same critical severity may be fairly applied. To Caulfield's baneful attachment to gin may be attributed a long course of erratic conduct. To fix him to any literary labour, it was requisite to entrap him, and lock him up in a room, with the man essential, a pint or two of his beloved nectar, and books for his reference. Eventually, one night, returning somewhat in his usual besotted condition, while attempting to step from the road to the pavement, he fell, and the knee-joint coming in contact with the curb-stone, it was so miserably displaced, that he was taken in great pain to the Hospital, where he died.

NEW ANECDOTES OF PETER PINDAR.

The recently published Memoir of William Cookworthy, a minister among the 'drab-coloured Christians' written by his grandson, Mr. George Harrison, barrister, contains some amusing incidents relative to Dr. Wolcot, not hitherto known beyond the pale of the Quaker's family. Cookworthy was a druggist in Nut-street, Plymouth, who during the spring and summer months emancipated his family of grown up daughters from the confinement and dirt of 'a narrow street in a sea-port town,' by the enjoyment of a country lodging at Fleet, the family seat of the Bulteels, near Sequer's bridge, on the road from Plymouth to Modbury, abounding with charms of wild flowers, hedge-rows, and scenery, some of the loveliest, even in 'the lovely county of Devon.' Mr. Harrison relates—

On one occasion, the first of the family who went to Fleet for the season, were my aunt Hobson, then a widow; her daughter, and my mother. They took with them the maid servant, Molly King, and some cold provisions for a beginning; and were also accompanied by Wolcot. Having arrived at a rather early hour, they were bent on a ramble before dinner. Nothing, however, could persuade Wolcot to go with them, and after bantering him to no purpose on his laziness, they were forced to start without a squire, leaving the servant to unpack in their absence, and make ready against their return. After some hours pleasantly passed in the woods, they found, on reaching the house, all their food in confusion, scarcely fit to be eaten, and the servant in great dismay. She said Mr. Wolcot would pull it about, and eat, in spite of all her endeavours to prevent him,—that he had then gone away laughing, and had left a piece of paper for them. On this paper they found written—

Folks that are lean, may hop like fleas,
And travel whoso'er they please;
But I who am as big 's a tun,
Must find it hard to walk or run;
I therefore have composed this card,
To say, that I have labour'd hard
To eat the beef, and to devour
The pie, which was confounded sour;
And that I'm gone to 'scape a rattling
From Sukey and the widow Wadling.

In voice, in look, in person, and in similarity of character, John Wolcot was better qualified, perhaps, than any other man of his day to personate Falstaff. Many a time he has set my grandfather's table in a roar with his readings of Shakespeare's plays of Henry the Fourth, and the Merry Wives of Windsor. They were not lost upon his host; although, when Peter was sometimes pushing his jokes before the females a little too far, he would check himself on my grandfather's approach, with the exclamation—'Hullo! here comes Will Swedenborg.'

Peter's tale of the Pilgrim and the Peas, ending—

To walk a little more at ease,
I took the liberty to boil my peas, fared, like his other witticisms, which were sure to be retorted on him, whenever there was fair opportunity. He had presented to him a couple of ducks, and leading a sort of make-shift life, was at his wit's end how to secure the good eating at the least possible expense of cookery. He bethought him, at last, of sending them to the bake-house. This was enough for my aunt Hobson, who the next time she met him, accosted him with—'So, Mr. Jack, I hear you took the liberty to bake your ducks!'

People have been surprised that a man of Wolcot's coarse, indolent, and selfish habits should have ever found a seat at my grandfather's table; but, in the first place, he had been bred a medical man; and this was, probably, his passport to the Chemist and Druggist. He had besides a fund of humour, and was stored with diverting tales about the Cornish and Devonshire common folks, who were wont to call him 'Maister Ould Cat,' and gaped with delight and wonder at his account of a cherub, which he asserted to have caught, tamed, and retained in a cage in Jamaica, when after having been ordained by the Bishop of London, he went thither in the train of Sir Henry Trelawny, the newly appointed governor, in the double capacity of 'body-curer' and 'soul-curer.'

Wherever he visited, such tales found ready listeners, nor was William Cookworthy the man to form an exception. He was the exception, indeed, in the rule,

*Noscitur à socio, qui non dignoscitur ex se.

Like his Divine Master, he could be 'the friend of publicans and sinners,' not to be degraded to their level, but to raise in them a respect for virtue. He was, moreover, well able to give Peter a Rowland for his Oliver, and was to a certainty the person who furnished him with the original incident for Wolcot's tale of the Country Bumpkin and the Razor-seller, beginning—

A fellow in a market town,
Most musical, cried razors up and down.

Wolcot had also a taste for the fine arts, and was the first to notice Opie. He brought him to Nut-street, and set him to paint the portrait of my grandfather, which was admitted to be the best likeness of him. It was not his speaking likeness, which would have been all life and fire: it is his thinking likeness, which is very different; and yet when the rays of the setting sun shed their softened light over the features, as they do for several days, twice in the year, at a late and early period, where the portrait hangs in my drawing room, it is difficult to believe the countenance to be any but that of a living man in the calm repose of a mighty mind.

William Cookworthy died October 17, 1780.

BALLOON EXHIBITION BILL.

The following announcement appeared during the first week in August, 1786, and is interesting from the early attention then made to the direction of Balloons, which later experience has confirmed to be utterly futile.

Tuffnell Park Road. CHARLES GREEN, Aeronaut.

NEW FISH BALLOON AT THE PANTHEON.

READY for Ascension, and to be drawn in the Air by live Eagles. It is now universally admitted, that every Attempt to steer Balloons in the Air, by any Power of Mechanism, will always prove fruitless, as there is no Possibility of finding a Point d'Appui, or Point of Resistance. Mr. Uncles, thoroughly convinced of its Truth, is, nevertheless ambitious, as an Englishman, of meriting the Name of the FIRST AERIAL CHARIOTTEER. Instead, therefore, of making Use of ineffectual Sails, Oars, or Wings, he is determined to employ living Force to combat the Wind, and guide himself through the Regions of the Sky. With this Intention, he has just finished a vast Fish-formed Balloon, to which is suspended a splendid triumphal Car elegantly ornamented, with projecting Accommodations for four harnessed Eagles, perfectly tame, and capable of flying in every Direction, at their Master's Will. Mr. Uncles, who also flatters himself to render his Balloon stationary, intends to make his grand Ascension in it after Easter. Till then, this new and magnificent Spectacle will be exhibited in the grand Saloon of the Pantheon, every Day, Sundays excepted, from Ten to Six o'Clock.

Admittance One Shilling only.

ANCIENT SILVER DISH OR SALVER.

Amongst the church plate at Wallsend, in Northumberland, is an exquisitely wrought silver salver, now for protection fastened on a plate of iron. It is 10½ inches in diameter. In the centre of the salver which is sunk about half an inch there is no device, but round it is engraved a simple but elegant wreath of flowers and leaves tied at the top and bottom with knots of riband. On the other rim or border which is 2½ inches in diameter are four oblong medallions or compartments containing figures in basso relievo, representing the four Seasons, all so disposed as to be seen upright at one view without needing to turn the salver. The spaces between these compartments are filled with rich tracery of large flowers.

At the top of the salver, Spring is represented by the figure of a boy, crowned with roses, reclining, with the left hand resting on a basket of roses by his side, and holding in the right hand, which is crossed over his breast, a bunch of the same flowers. The back-ground is filled up with a landscape of trees, etc., beautifully executed but much worn.

Summer, on the right hand of the salver, is represented by the upright figure of a boy, crowned with ears of corn, sitting on a bank overshadowed by the boughs of a tree, having a sheaf of corn in his left arm, and a sickle in his right hand.

Winter, at the right hand side of the salver, is represented by the upright figure of a boy, with a curious old fashioned cap on his head, sitting and warming his hands at a fire, the flames of which ascend from the ground and curl up in front of him. Behind him are the boughs of a leafless tree.

At the top of the dish is the old silver mark, a three towered castle, and I.H. surmounted by a star.

DERBYSHIRE TRADESMEN'S TOKENS.

An interesting addition to the County History of Derbyshire, has this month emanated under the title of 'The Tradesmen's Tokens of the Seventeenth Century, of Derbyshire.' Mr. W. H. Brockett, of Gateshead upon Tyne, has most laudably drawn up this list from the Notices extant in the Collections of Thomas Bateman, Esq., of Loncherdale House, to whom the work is dedicated; Mr. William Boyne, F.S.A.; Mr. Llewellyn Jewett, F.S.A., and the Bodleian Library, Oxford. The rarity of many of these specimens is so great, that one only is known, hence the reference to so many depositories, to eke out anything like a continued series. The descriptive notes are highly illustrative of families and persons who issued them, and the more attractive are accompanied by wood-cuts of truthful effect.

HERO OF BUTLER'S HUDIBRAS.

The name of Sir Samuel Rolle of Heanton Satchville in the parish of Petrockstow, Devon; elder brother of Henry Rolle, Chief Justice of the Upper Bench in the Commonwealth, frequently occurs in the historical records of the period as an active promoter of the Parliament cause. The elder D'Israeli, in his Curiosities of Literature, second series, suggests that this was a knight, and not Sir Samuel Luke, as commonly supposed, was the original of Butler's Hudibras. The following are D'Israeli's words—When Butler wrote his Hudibras, one Colonel Rolle, a Devonshire man, lodged with him, and was exactly like his description of the Knight; whence it is highly probable, that it was this gentleman and not Sir Samuel Luke, whose portrait he had in his eye. The reason he gave for calling his poem, Hudibras, was, because the name of the old titular saint of Devonshire, was Hugh de Bras.

Is there any foundation for this passage, beyond what appears in the above extract? and was the titular saint of Devonshire ever known in that county?

LORD JOHN RUSSELL, A DRAMATIST.

The following letter addressed to R. W. Ellis when lessee of Drury Lane Theatre, will possibly be interesting to many readers of Current Notes, who may not be aware his Lordship has any claim to be considered as a dramatist. The autograph is now before me.

March 12.

Hastings, Nov. 4, 1822.

Sir,—You will have perceived by an advertisement in the papers, that I am going to publish a play called Don Carlos. Having no conception of the proper method of adapting a play for the stage, I did not offer it to the Theatres, but if upon perusal, it should appear to you fit for this purpose, I should naturally prefer that it should be performed by the admirable Company at Drury Lane, rather than any other. If you have any wish to see it, a copy shall be sent to you, as soon as it is printed off. If it were to be acted, it must be, with considerable curtailments, and I must profess to be from the published edition. Of course if you should judge it unfit for acting I should be neither surprised nor disappointed. You will have the goodness not to communicate this letter to any one.

I have the honour to be,

Your obed. servant,

J. RUSSELL.

Nothing but reading will teach spelling.

8. Communion and Occasional Offices

A MORE MAGNIFICENT SET OF BOOKS both as regards the typographical execution and the sumptuous style of the binding than the above is scarcely possible to meet with.

102 BOOK OF COMMON PRAYER, with the Psalms, etc. SPLENDID EDITION ON LARGE PAPER, printed in a large and handsome gothic type, by Charles Bill, folio, and sumptuously bound in blue morocco, super extra, by RIVIÈRE, AS AN EXHIBITION OF ELABORATE WORKMANSHIP IN THE ART OF BOOKBINDING, £7. 10s C. Bill, 1840

THIS EXCEEDINGLY ELEGANT VOLUME must be seen to be fully admired; it would form an acquisition to a library of costly bound volumes; the sides are covered with very elaborate and chaste gilt tooling mounted with large red crosses; the inside covers are likewise most elaborately tooled, and the edges of the leaves are embossed and gilt.

It is likewise an edition of great rarity, particularly on account of the above.

103 Book of Common Prayer, with the Psalms, etc. PICKERING'S SPLENDID EDITION, printed in large and handsome gothic type, in red and black, by C. Whittingham, thick folio, blue morocco, super extra, gilt leaves and sides, in RIVIÈRE'S best style, £3. 3s Pickering, 1840

A VERY CHOICE COPY of this valuable edition of the Prayer Book adapted to the present reign.

- 1032 WOOLNOUTH'S Canterbury Cathedral, graphical illustrations of, with History and Description, 20 highly finished engravings from drawings by Storer, fine impressions, &c. newly bound hf. morocco, gilt top, 18s 1841
- 1033 WORDSWORTH'S (W.) Poetical Works complete with Notes, &c. 6 vols. 16mo. calf extra, gilt leaves, clean pocket edition, £1. 10s 1804
- 1034 WOTTON'S (Sir H.) State of Christendom, or a most exact and curious Discovery of many Secret Passages and Hidden Mysteries of the Times, portrait, folio, newly bound, calf extra, gilt leaves, by Riviere, 18s 1657
First edition of this curious and rare work.
- 1035 Wyclyffe's New Testament, the first translation into English, and now for the first time printed from a contemporary MS. written about 1380, in the collection of Lea Wilson, F.S.A., sm. 4to. morocco extra, gilt head, in Riviere's best style, £2. 5s Pickering, 1852
The version hitherto known as Wyclyffe's is of later date than this and differs greatly from it. This edition is most beautifully printed in old English black letter type, by Whittingham, and is a fine specimen of the Chiswick Press.
- 1036 XENOPHONTIS Opera. Gr. Commentariis ad Romæ et Verborum intelligentium illustrata a Weiske, 6 vols. folio, neatly bound in 3, half white vellum, 18s Lips. 1798-1804
"A very critical and valuable edition."—DINW.
- 1037 YARRELL'S HISTORY OF BRITISH BIRDS, with 12 beautiful woodcuts, LARGE PAPER ILLUSTRATED COPY, &c. the fine set of BEWICK'S CELEBRATED WOODCUTS OF BIRDS, PROOFS printed on large blank paper, and arranged through the work, 3 large vols. roy. 8vo. cloth, scarce, £10. 10s VAN VOORST, 1845
A most valuable and interesting copy; only 50 copies of the work were printed, and pub. without the extra plates by Bewick at 9 guineas, and of those extra plates not more than 25 sets were taken in the superior manner. As specimens of the highest order of the art of wood engraving, the juxtaposition of the plates on the same subject by the different artists produces the best effect: a few coloured Drawings of the Foreign Birds by Bewick are likewise inserted.
- 1038 YONGE'S (C.) English-Greek Lexicon (a very comprehensive and useful work), sm. 4to. cloth, 14s (pub. 15s) Longmans, 1846
- 1039 ZIMMERMANN, on Solitude, its influence upon the Mind and Heart, translated from the German, front. hf. calf gilt, 2s 6d 1754

"The great merit of this publication is the peculiar excellence of the line engravings which distinguishes all the plates—we are entirely line engravings. There is no stippling, nor any sort of mixture of mezzotint, &c. employed. The whole engraved, and very admirably engraved, in line. This is the sort of work to be in request by print collectors, and to wish specimens of a superior branch of the art for the portfolios of judges."—TIMES.

JENEN'S (Owen) GRAMMAR OF ORNAMENT, a series of 101 large and EXQUISITELY COLOURED plates executed in CHROMOLITHOGRAPHY, comprising THREE THOUSAND examples of the DECORATIONS of all ages and nations, with Descriptive Letter-press, illustrated with woodcuts, impl. folio, JUST PUBLISHED, complete in 25 parts, £12. 15s (pub. at £17. 10s) 1856

The aim of the author is to present the student with a TEXT BOOK of design selected from the best works of all styles, and how that, by returning to the works of Nature for fresh inspiration, we may yet go forward, and whilst availing ourselves of the experience of all time, may be enabled to produce works in harmony with our own times, instead of blindly following the footsteps of the past.

ready, Parts I. & II., each containing Three coloured Plates, and Letter-press Descriptions, imp. 4to. price 7s 6d per part.

'JAN'S COSTUMES of the CLANS of the SCOTTISH HIGHLANDS, a Series of Seventy-two large and beautifully coloured full-length Figures, displaying their Dress, Tartans, Arms, Armorial Insignia, and Social Occupations, from Original Sketches by R. R. M'Ian, Esq. With Descriptions and copious Historical Memoranda of Character, Mode of Life, &c. by James Logan, Esq. Dedicated by special permission to Her Majesty.

W. & S. beg to announce that the above fine work, which is undoubtedly one of the most beautiful, original, and interesting national productions ever published, will be re-issued by them in Monthly Parts, each containing Three accurately coloured Plates, with full Descriptions, and will form 2 splendid vols. large 4to.

"This work is one of the most valuable and interesting works of modern times. The portraits are painted by a veritable Highlandman—an artist of the true stamp, who is familiar with his subjects. It is a work of no ordinary importance." Art Union.

"The tartans given by Messrs. M'Ian and Logan we have ever considered, and we know they have been always received, the veritable patterns."—Morning Post.

HORNER'S (FRANCIS, M.P.) MEMOIRS AND CORRESPONDENCE edited by his Brother, L. Horner, Esq. F.R.S. THE ENLARGED EDITION, portrait, 2 large vols. 8vo. new cloth, 10s 6d (pub. at £1. 10s) Murray, 1853

The last and by far the most valuable edition of this highly interesting publication, comprising upwards of one hundred copies more than the previous one.

Towers and Spires of the Cathedral Churches.

WICKES' (C. Architect) SPIRES AND TOWERS OF THE MEDIAEVAL CHURCHES OF ENGLAND, Illustrations of, with Observations on the Architecture of the Middle Ages, 52 fine large drawings on stone of the principal English Cathedrals and Churches on tinted paper, 2 vols. impl. folio, new hf. morocco, £2. 18s (pub. at £7. 7s) Weale, 1883

This fine work illustrates the most beautiful specimens of Spire, Tower, and Steeple Architecture in all parts of the Kingdom. The plates are executed in a very accurate and elaborate manner, from drawings made expressly for this work by the author himself.

OSBURN'S (W.) MONUMENTAL HISTORY OF EGYPT, as recorded in the Ruins of her Temples, Palaces, and Tombs, upwards of 1200 Hieroglyphics and other engravings some of which are coloured, 2 large and handsome volumes, 8vo. cloth, 16s (pub. at £2. 2s) 1883

This valuable work embraces the period from the first Colonization of the Valley of the Nile, to the Exodus 1314 B.C. The number of Hieroglyphics and other illustrations amounts to upwards of 1200 not one of which has been copied from any existing English work, many being taken from Sketches by the Author's own hand, whilst assistance has been sought in the very costly and elaborate works issued by the Governments of France, Italy, and Germany, and which are almost unknown in England.

THIERS' HISTORY OF THE CONSULATE AND THE EMPIRE OF FRANCE UNDER NAPOLEON, the late Mr. Colburn's authorized library edition, in 8vo. in large type

NOTICE.—Messrs. Willis and Sotheman beg respectfully to announce that they have just purchased the entire French Copyright of the authorized library edition of the above valuable work, which will be continued and completed as early as possible after the publication of the original in France. Vols. 1 to 14 are now ready, price 5s each; Vol. 15 will appear shortly, and the entire work will be completed in 17 vols. at the beginning of the next year. Those gentlemen who do not at present possess the first 11 vols. as published by Mr. Colburn, can by giving their names to W. and S. as subscribers to the 12th and concluding volumes, be supplied with Vols. I. to XI. at half price, namely, for £1. 7s 6d, instead of the published price of £2. 15s.

SHAKSPERE'S PLAYS AND POEMS, Knight's National Library Edition, with Dissertations, numerous Notes, &c. printed in large type, illustrated by upwards of 100 Woodcuts of Views, Old Buildings, Antiquities and Costume, Portraits, &c. 6 vols.—Russell's Biography of Shakspeare, 1 vol.—Knight's Studies and Illustrations of the Writings of Shakspeare and of his Life and Times, 1 vol.; together, 8 vols. 8vo. extra cloth, new, £2. 10s—The same, in russia, marbled leaves, new, £3. 3s

W. and S. having secured a few of the still remaining copies of this valuable edition, beg to call attention to the present low price. It includes the Notes and other matters of the eight volumes of the original Pictorial Edition (now out of print), thoroughly revised.—“One of the best editions of the works of the immortal dramatist ever published, and of a size is convenient, the type and paper are of the best, the illustrations, though not profuse, are excellent, and the notes, it is sufficient to say, are by Mr. Charles Knight.”—LEEDS TIMES.

NATIONAL CYCLOPÆDIA OF USEFUL KNOWLEDGE, published by C. Knight, illustrated by numerous woodcuts, the complete work, 12 vols. 8vo. new cloth, £3. (pub. at £3.)—The same, newly half bound in russia, 12 vols. in 6, £2. 10s

This is one of the best Cyclopædias for general use ever published: embracing—Ancient and Modern History; Civil and Ecclesiastical; Chronology; Biography; Geography and Topography; Law and Government; Economy; Philosophy; Mathematics; Physical Science; Chemistry; Geology and Mineralogy; Zoology, Botany; Surgery, and Anatomy; Agriculture; Arts and Manufactures; Architecture; Painting and Engraving; &c.

SCOTT'S COMMENTARY ON THE HOLY BIBLE, a new and copyright edition, and the only one containing the Author's final Additions and embellished with 15 maps and 69 Illustrations of Scripture Incidents and Scenery, 6 vols. cloth, £3. 3s—The same, newly bound, calf extra, £5. 15s

The present is a new Subscription edition of this valuable commentary, of which but a limited number for sale, at the remarkably low price of £3. 3s for the complete work in 6 vols. W. and S. having, as the supply is small, beg to call attention to the fact that the present is the only opportunity of obtaining the work, closed, and in a short time no more sets will be attainable. Those customers, therefore, who are desirous of the work, are respectfully requested to transmit their names to W. and S. without delay.

FENTON'S PHOTOGRAPHIC PICTURES of the SEAT of WAR in CRIMEA, a series of 337 separate subjects, all FRAMED and GLAZED, of Views, Groups and Portraits, taken on the spot by Mr. Fenton, during the spring and autumn of 1855, &c.

This is the identical and unrivalled set of Mr. Fenton's famous Photographs, which were exhibited before Her Majesty Prince Albert, the Emperor of the French, &c.

It consists of no less than 337 different Pictures, all neatly and uniformly framed and glazed, and forming what is ranged, one of the most remarkable, original, and interesting Picture Galleries of actual Events ever made. Nothing surpasses their correctness, and they illustrate most faithfully the Scenery of the Camps, and Views of every interesting spot in their neighbourhood, the prominent Incidents of Military Life, the Portraits of distinguished Officers and other persons both English and Foreign, &c.

The impressions have all been picked with the greatest care, and are remarkable for their brilliancy and beauty. The later impressions that have been offered for sale, are so inferior that they are scarcely worth possessing.

This series would be an invaluable acquisition to a Club, a Military, Naval or Literary Institution, or private Collector for independent of its Pictorial interest, it is the most faithful and enduring record of the Heroes of the Crimean Army and Navy, not one of any note being omitted. No similar series exists, and it would be impossible to form one.

THE SERIES CONSISTS OF THE FOLLOWING SUBJECTS.

SCENERY, VIEWS of the CAMP, &c. 50 plates.

INCIDENTS of CAMP LIFE, 60 plates.

HISTORICAL PORTRAIT GALLERY, 30 plates.

PANORAMA of the PLATEAU of SEBASTOPOL, 11 plates.

PANORAMA of the COUNTRY between INKERMANN and BALAKLAVA, 5 plates.

PANORAMA of INKERMANN, 5 plates.

MISCELLANEOUS SUBJECTS, consisting of PORTRAITS and GROUPS, 176 plates.

SIMPSON'S ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE WAR IN THE EAST, from the commencement to its close (COLNAGHI'S Authentic Series), consisting of 81 large Plates, in imperial folio, printed in the first style of art, in double tints, by DAY AND SON, with key-plates to each forming 2 volumes, in parts, £4. 4s (pub. at £12.)—Or, half bound in crimson morocco, gilt leaves in 1 vol. £5. 5s

Of this most beautiful work it is impossible to exaggerate the importance and peculiar interest. At the period of its publication it excited universal admiration, as presenting the most perfect Pictures of the incidents of War that Art has ever given to the world. As evidences of its merits, both artistically and historically, the following Testimonials from distinguished Crimean Heroes, and from eminent Artists, may be appropriately quoted:—

"I have great pleasure in bearing my testimony to their accuracy and correctness, and I cannot but hope that they will be kept together as a collection, and be bought by the Nation as a valuable memento of the present War in the East, and memorable Siege of Sebastopol."—H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CAMBRIDGE.

"I have had great pleasure in looking at Mr. Simpson's Crimean Drawings, and I am much struck by the fidelity with which everything he saw is represented."—REAR-ADMIRAL LORD LYONS.

"The Drawings were, to Colonel Steele's knowledge, faithful representations of the events passing before Mr. Simpson's eyes; and, in carrying out his object, Mr. Simpson was continually exposed to the enemy's fire."—COLONEL STEELE.

"I have been much struck with the fidelity and spirit of Mr. Simpson's Sketches in the Crimea, and I am decidedly of opinion that their acquisition by the nation as a memorial of the great struggle in which we have been engaged would be highly desirable."—A. H. LAYARD, Esq., M.P.

The Beautiful Scenery throughout the Crimea.

BOSSOLI'S AUTHENTIC VIEWS WITHIN THE CITY AND HARBOUR OF SEBASTOPOL; also at Perekop, Eupatoria, Balaklava, Simferopol, Bakchi-Sarai, Kara-Su-Bazar, Kerch, Fort Arabat, &c., and on the Rivers Alma, Katcha, and Salghir, illustrating the Scenery and Customs throughout the Crimea, taken prior to the War, a series of 52 large and extremely beautiful lithographic drawings, in double tints, on 30 plates, imperial folio, in parts, £2. 12s 6d (pub. at £5. 5s)—or, coloured and mounted like original drawings, £5. 5s (pub. at £10. 10s)

The Artist, Carlo Bossoli, having lived for some time in the Crimea, in the suite of Prince Woronzoff, then Governor General of New Russia, Bessarabia, and the Crimea, enjoyed frequent opportunities of visiting every part of the Peninsula. He was thus enabled to make upon the spot a collection of Sketches of the Cities, Fortresses, Costumes, &c. of unusual excellence, for by no one could the beautiful and varied scenery of the country have been more worthily treated.

XAVIER'S HYMN TRANSLATED BY POPE.

In the volume of Current Notes, 1853, p. 38, is an enquiry referring to Charles Butler's Historical Memoirs, vol. ii. p. 308, where it is asserted that 'Pope translated St. Francis Xavier's celebrated Hymn:

O God! I love thee not to gain
The joys of thy eternal reign.

This was related to the author by the late — Wheble, a member of the Society of Jesus, and a distinguished preacher, who received his information from Mr. Pigot, a member of the same Society, at whose desire the verses were made; followed by the request of a copy of Pope's translation. In reply to that enquiry I send you a transcript from the 7th volume of the American Museum, a periodical published in Philadelphia in 1790, with the letter which accompanied it, as it contained some personal history of Pope.

New York, March 27.

K.

Mr. Carey,—The perusal of a small book lately printed by you has revived an intention, which I have often formed, of communicating to the public an original composition of the celebrated Mr. Pope, with which I became acquainted near forty years ago. I was a student at that time in a foreign college, and had the happiness of often conversing with a most respectable clergyman of the name of Brown, who died some time after, aged about ninety. This venerable man, who had lived in England, as domestic chaplain in the family of the Mr. Caryl, to whom Pope inscribed the Rape of the Lock, in the beginning of that poem, and at whose house he spent much of his time in the early and gay part of his life. I was informed by Mr. Brown, that, seeing the poet often amuse the family with verses of gallantry, he took the liberty one day of requesting him to change the subject of his compositions, and to devote his talents to the translation of the Latin Hymn or Rhythmus which I find in the 227th page of the Collection of Prayers and Hymns lately printed by you. The Hymn begins with these words, 'O Deus ego amo te,' etc., and was composed by the famous missionary Francis Xavier, whose apostolical and successful labours in the East, united with his eminent sanctity of life, procured him the title of 'the Apostle of the Indies.'

Mr. Pope appeared to receive this proposition with indifference, but the next morning, when he came down to breakfast, he handed Mr. Brown a paper with the following lines, of which I took a copy, and have since retained them in my memory.

Many other students in the same college have long been in possession of them, as well as myself, and I have often been surprised to find that they had never found a place in any collection of that great poet's works.

Baltimore, January 16, 1790. SENEX.

TRANSLATION.

Thou art my God, sole object of my love,
Not for the hope of endless joys above;
Not for the fear of endless pain below,
Which they who love thee not, must undergo.

For me, and such as me, thou deign'd'st to bear,
An ignominious cross, the nails, the spear:
A thorny crown transpierced thy sacred brow,
While bloody sweats from every member flow.

For me in tortures thou resign'd'st thy breath,
Embrac'd* me on the cross, and sav'd me by thy death,
And can these suff'rings fail my heart to move?
What but thyself can now deserve my love?

Such as thou was, and is, thy love to me
Such is, and shall be still my love to thee;
To thee, Redeemer, mercy's sacred spring,
My God, my father, maker, and my king.

ADMONITORY LINES TO THE WAYFARER.

On the fly-leaf of a Bible in one of the bed-rooms of the George Hotel, Chepstow, are inscribed the following verses. I do not remember to have seen them before, but some of your Correspondents may possibly have met with them elsewhere? If original they are, I think, worth preservation in your Notes.

Chepstow, April 27.

ROBERT PAPE.

Traveller! where ere on life's dark sea,
Thine ever changing lot is cast;
Think, there's a haven waits for thee,
Secure from ev'ry storm or blast.

Safe and protected thou may'st ride,
Unmindful of the troubled wave;
Since He vouchsafes to be thy guide,
Whose power alone can help or save.

Oh! then in ev'ry hour of need,
Of trial, or of deep despair;
His sacred word of mercy read,
And learn his holy love to share.

Soon, here below thy life shall cease,
And earth behold thy form decay;
Oh! seek then for that lasting peace,
Nor earth, nor hell can take away.

* It was thus that I copied this line. The construction is inaccurate, but such inaccuracies frequently occurred in the best authors before the publishing of Lowth's Grammar, as may be seen in the Grammar itself.

NOTES RELATIVE TO THE HEBER FAMILY.

Your Correspondent, R. T., p. 27, has fallen into some inaccuracies. He states that Reginald Heber 'well known for his fondness for field sports and the turf, and described as 'living in Cold Bath Square, Clerkenwell, in 1751,' was the brother of Richard Heber, Esq., of Marton and Hodnet, who died in 1766. It is true, that Richard had a brother named Reginald, but he was certainly not a book and print-seller, and we may believe that he spent his life far more usefully than in publishing a Racing Calendar, or devoting himself to the Turf. He was Rector of Chelsea, afterward Co-Rector of Malpas, Cheshire, and succeeded on the death of his elder brother Richard, to the family estates. He was the father of Richard Heber, the Member for Oxford, and by a second wife of Reginald, Bishop of Calcutta; Thomas Cuthbert Heber, and a daughter, Mary, who married the Rev. Charles Cholmondeley.

Another member of the family, also named Reginald, Rector of Marton, died in February, 1799. In an earlier generation we find a Reginald Heber, who died aged 12, the son of Reginald Heber, of Marton, who died in 1715.

No one of these could have been the Reginald of sporting notoriety, but the pedigree contains a collateral branch, giving Reginald, the son of Thomas Heber, of Gargrave; the latter of whom was born, 1695. The son is merely recorded as having died unmarried. Was this last-named Reginald, the book and print-seller in question?

Some of your readers may remember an allusion to Heber's Racing Calendar, in Thomas Warton's Newmarket, published in 1751. The poet there addresses the 'Mimic Patriots,' who—

Neglect the counsels of a sinking land,
And know no rostrum, but Newmarket's stand.

Who lost to Albion's past and present views,
Heber, thy Chronicle alone peruse.

R. T. is mistaken in his belief that 'the name of Heber, of Marton and Hodnet is extinct.' It survives in the descendants of the excellent Bishop of Calcutta, the author of the poem entitled Palestine.

AN IRISHMAN ABROAD.

An Irishman, named Murphy, born in Down county, of gigantic stature, measuring seven feet, ten and a half inches high in his stockings, is now producing in Vienna probably the same effect on the persons who visit him as the Patagonians did on Magellan's sailors when they first saw them. A middle-sized man can stand with his hat on under the Irish Giant's extended arm.

On the day their Imperial Majesties proceeded to Pesth, an hour or two before they went on board the steamer, Murphy had the honour of being admitted to their presence. The Empress conversed with Murphy in English, and served as interpreter for the Emperor, who, it seems, understands but little of the language.

On the outside of a pew door in Madron Church, Cornwall, painted on a dark board in white letters, is the following quaint epitaph. Others somewhat similar will be found in Current Notes, Vol. VI. pp. 55 and 68.

Here lieth the body of Mary the daughter of Thomas Harvey, of this parish, died the 3rd of Feb. 1772. Aged 29.

Weep not for me my parents dear,
I am not dead but sleeping here;
Some time apart we must remain,
In future bliss to meet again.

DR. JORTIN'S EPITAPH ON HIS CAT.

Fessa annis morboque gravi, mitissima Felis
Inferno tandem cogor adire lacus:
Et mihi subridens Proserpina dixit, Habeto
Elysios soles, Elysiumque nemus:
Sed bene si merui, facilis Regina silentium,
Da mihi saltem unâ nocte redire domum,
Nocte redire domum, dominoque hæc discere in aure.
Te tua fida etiam trans Styga Felis amat.
Decessit Felis anno 1756:
Vixit annos 14, menses 11, dies 4.

IMITATED.

A Victim to the gradual lapse of age,
Tho' thy attentive hand was ever nigh,
Each want to help, and every pang assuage,
At length without an agony I die.
Believe that ev'n in death a wish remains,
Nor do I rest without a fond desire,
To tell thee, gentle soother of my pains,
All which true love and gratitude inspire.
Oh! let me as a dream at least appear,
'Revisiting the glimpses of the moon,'
And whisper grateful in my master's ear—
This wish obtain'd I ask no further boon.

BEWICK'S PORTRAIT BY NICHOLSON.

In one of the notes appended to the interesting letter of Bewick's published in last month's Current Notes, you have made Mr. Isaac Nicholson, Bewick's pupil, the painter of the portrait alluded to in the letter, p. 28. This is a mistake, the painter was Mr. William Nicholson, R.S.A., of Edinburgh. In addition to the portrait engraved by Ranson, Mr. Nicholson subsequently did one in water colours for Mr. Charnley of Newcastle, that has not been engraved; and also the portrait which forms the frontispiece to the volume of Select Fables published in 1820. This latter was drawn on the wood by Mr. Nicholson, and engraved by Charlotte Nesbit; both of these portraits are much better likenesses of Bewick than Ranson's engraving.

Newcastle-upon-Tyne, May 7. WILLIAM DODD.

Bewick in his letter states—'While we were at Chillingham, Mr. Nicholson painted another likeness of me, in water colours, of a smaller size, but for what purpose I know not.' This seems to be the portrait painted for Mr. Charnley, alluded to by our correspondent, and if so was executed in July, 1815.—ED.

RAMSAY'S PORTRAITS OF BEWICK.

I have been much interested with the letter of Thomas Bewick, which appeared in the last number of Current Notes. Of the portraits of that remarkable man, I am proud to possess one by Ramsay, which, after the decease of the latter, I purchased when his pictures were sold. It was highly estimated by the artist, and, from the testimony of Mr. Richard R. Wingate and others, who were on familiar terms of intimacy with the celebrated wood engraver, is allowed to be an admirably effective and most faithful likeness. Bewick appears to look more fully upon you from it, than from any other portrait I have seen of him, and the face is radiant with 'manly cheerfulness.' Indeed, at the first glance, its life-likeness so arrested my attention that I determined to secure it. The right hand is shewn grasping a stick with a hooked horn head, surmounted at the joining by a silver hoop. This stick is still preserved by the engraver's family.

Ramsay, from what I can learn, painted four portraits of Bewick. One, from which the engraving by Burnet was executed, and likewise a smaller one on wood engraved for Select Fables, 1820, is in the possession of the Misses Bewick. Another was painted for the late Mr. Armorer Donkin of this town: and I have the third, the artist's own, already described. The fourth is a miniature, full length, about six inches high, which at Mr. Ramsay's sale was purchased by William Jackson, Esq., an ardent admirer of the works of Thomas Bewick. From this miniature, while in Mr. Ramsay's possession, an engraving was made at the expense of Mr. Turner, bookseller here, who has, I believe, some fine impressions still for sale.

What renders these portraits so peculiarly valuable, is the fact that Bewick's features were extremely difficult to delineate upon canvas, for like those of many great men, they changed as emotion or humour passed over his mind; and one painter, if not more, on attempting to represent his likeness, desisted, and threw down the pencil in despair. Ramsay was aware of this, and with the utmost felicity seized the prevailing expression, fixing it at once before him with masterly skill.

The study of antiquities constantly reveals some adventitious feature in elucidation of the history of the past, and opening the way to an infinite number of diverging results frequently differing widely from the generally accredited opinion, but which only a patient and skilful pertinacity of research, can render successfully available.

POPE'S MANUSCRIPTS.—Is it known where are deposited Pope's Manuscripts, formerly in Lord Bolingbroke's possession? J. C.

SCOTT AND THE NEWCASTLE ANTIQUARIES.

The following unpublished correspondence will probably interest many readers of Current Notes, as referring to Scott's Border Minstrelsy, and his election as a member of the Antiquarian Society of Newcastle upon Tyne, instituted in January, 1813. The Society originated in the praiseworthy exertions of Mr. John Bell, bookseller, of the Quayside, who on its formation was appointed to be the Treasurer; the Rev. John Hodgson and Mr. John Adamson, being the Secretaries.

The first appears to be a reply to an application from Scott, for some Christmas Carols; a requisition which seems to have been most consonant with the bibliopolist's predilections, and to have found a ready concurrence. The superscriptions are to 'Walter Scott, Esq., Edinburgh;' and from him to 'Mr. John Bell, Jun., Quayside, Newcastle.'

Quayside, Newcastle,
Dec. 20, 1812.

Sir,—In answer to yours of the 11th inst., received yesterday, addressed to me, to the care of another bookseller here; you mention some Christmas Carols, which you had seen, printed by White of this Town. I have a copy of nearly all of the original ballads that were printed by him, and as you mention that sung by the Mummings, at Christmas, I herewith send it to you, with one or two things more, which I hope will be worth your acceptance.

The little publications of Ritson's I am enlarging with about four times as many more pieces, and intend one day or other, to publish them.

I am likewise in search of more local matter towards a second volume, or Collection of the Bards of Northumberland.

I feel obliged at your remarks on my work, and remain,
Your humble servant,
JNO. BELL.

Scott's immediate reply was thus couched:

Sir,—I am much obliged to you indeed for the very curious parcel of broadsides, which I have received by the Coach. I wish I had any thing suitable to send you in return for your second volume, but my stock of Minstrel Ballads has been long exhausted. As however there is a new edition of the Border ballads just published with some few additional illustrations respecting the battle of Otterburne, and other ballads connected with the North of England, I have directed Messrs. Ballantyne and Co. to send a set with their first parcel to Newcastle, of which I beg your acceptance, in case there should be any in it, which you may think interesting or which may afford illustrations for your second volume.

The Mumm'g Dialogue is curious and though greatly debased retains the appearance of having been an ancient Mystery. Some rhymes of the kind were current in Scotland during my boyhood, but though the custom of mumm'g, or guisarding as we call it, is still in some degree kept up, I suspect the rhymes are forgotten.

I am, Sir, very much, your obliged servant.
Edinb., 22 Dec. [1812.] WALTER SCOTT.

Some delay in Scott's promised boon occurred, but in the mean time, the Antiquarian Society of Newcastle had assumed a name if not a local habitation, and Scott was evidently one of those whom Mr. Bell considered as a fitting adjunct to the brotherhood, and accordingly solicited him to join them. The ensuing reply was addressed—'Mr. Bell, with a Copy of the Minstrelsy.'

Dear Sir,—I have been some time absent from Edinburgh, owing to which, and to my wishing to add a copy of Rokeby, in which you may possibly take some interest, as the scene lies in the North of England, I could not till now accomplish my promise of sending you the Border Minstrelsy. The new edition of Rokeby is I find not to be published for a fortnight, so I will not any longer delay my packet on that account.

The institution for a Northumbrian Society of Antiquaries is most laudable, and the County affords much subject for curious research. As I could not upon any occasion propose myself the pleasure of attending their meetings, and am already a Member of two Societies of that kind in Scotland, it would be useless in me to add my name to the highly respectable list of Ordinary Members; but I will at all times, and in any way be most happy should it be in my power to further the researches of the Society, or of any of its Members. In yours, Sir, I am bound by many marks of your friendly attention to take a particular interest, and am very much

Your obliged humble servant,
Edinburgh, 25 March, [1813.] WALTER SCOTT.

Quayside, Newcastle, March 31, 1813.

Dear Sir,—I return my acknowledgments for the copy of the Border Minstrelsy, which for your Politeness in sending, and the fascination of its pages, I shall appreciate to my latest day—both it, and Rokeby, which you mention, and which I have had a glance at, in the way of Trade; are truly interesting to a lover of his Native Country.

The pleasing notice you take of the Newcastle Antiquarian Society, is highly gratifying to me, and on Monday next I shall do myself the Honour of proposing you as an Honourary Member of the same; hoping you will not consider it as presumption, in

Your much obliged humble servant,
JNO. BELL.

P.S. I beg your acceptance of a volume of Ballads from my library.

Dear Sir,—I shall be very proud to have my name entered upon your Northumbrian Society of [Antiquaries, as a non-residing Member, if they will do me so much honour. I am truly ashamed at robbing your library of the curious collection of ballads, and make a very indifferent acknowledgement for such a compilation in sending you Rokeby, and an old metrical romance of Thomas the Rhymer, which I republished some years since, with copious notes. You may find something in it, which interests you as a Borderer.

I am, dear Sir, your obliged servant,
Edinb., 3 April, [1813.] WALTER SCOTT.

April 8, 1813.

Dear Sir,—I have the pleasure of informing you that you were yesterday elected an Honourary Member of the Newcastle upon Tyne Antiquarian Society, from my Proposition, seconded by two friends of mine, John Davidson and Thomas Davidson, esquires, of this place, on the other side.

I send a copy of the Statutes, with a list of the members, up to the time of printing, but which are now nearly double the number.

Permit me again to acknowledge the further Honour conferred upon me, by sending Rokeby and Sir Trestrian [Tristram] and until I find a return worthy such a present, accept of my warmest thanks and believe me,

Dear Sir, yours truly,
JNO. BELL

AMERICAN SONG YANKEE DOODLE.

In Current Notes, March 1855, p. 21, are printed all the then known verses of the American song, Yankee Doodle. The following are stray verses of the old and real Yankee Doodle, which have been obtained from the recitation of a very aged individual.

Morwenstow. R. S. HAWKER.

Now crosses over Jonathan,
Mother take the stools away,
'Twill make the room look wider.

Chorus. Yankee Doodle, Yankee Doodle,
Yankee Doodle Dandy.

Sister Sue is very sick,
We don't know what ails her;
She yesterday ate forty eggs,
And now her stomach fails her.

Chorus. Yankee Doodle, Yankee Doodle,
Yankee Doodle Dandy.

General Gage is very brave,
Very brave pertikular —
He gallop'd up a precipice,
And down a perpendicular.

Chorus. Yankee Doodle, Yankee Doodle,
Yankee Doodle Dandy.

COWLEY in his Davidicis, has, as Dr. Johnson observes, started a sudden question to the confusion of philosophy—

Ye learned heads, whom ivy garlands grace,
Why does that twining plant the oak embrace?
The Oak, for courtship most of all unfit,
And rough as are the winds that fight with it.

The poet's querie has never been solved.

An advertisement dated September 4, 1856, addressed to the descendants of Abraham Cowley, buried in St. Peter's church-yard, St. Albans, 1697, intimated that his ledger-stone having fallen into dis-repair, had been moved to the western door of the said church, for the better state of the churchyard, and the convenience of the church, but that if any were aggrieved by the removal of the said stone, it would be replaced on notice being given to the Vicar or Churchwardens of St. Peter's, St. Alban's, Herts.

Who was this Abraham Cowley? was he in any way related to the poet, who died in 1667?

ORDER TO ARM BARBERS AND SURGEONS.

The Order for furnishing of certain of the Company to be trained to shoot in Calivers, according to a precept directed unto the Masters and Governors, viz., John Field, John Hitchin, Christopher Swaldell, and Henry Rankin, the day and year hereunder mentioned in the same precept.

By the Mayor.

To the Wardens of the Company of Barbers Surgeons.

These shall be to will and require you, and in Her Majesty's name strictly to charge and command you, that with all convenient speed you appoint and provide the number of Twelve able and sufficient persons, being journeymen, apprentices, and others, which are Freemen of this City, and inhabiting within the same, being of agility and honest of behaviour, between the age of nineteen years and forty, which are fit to be trained for Harquebuss-shot; every one of them having a Murrion, a Sword and Dagger, and a Caliver, with sufficient furniture for the same; and one half-pound of powder, besides touch-powder; whereof, three of the same persons to be Householdiers, and Freemen of your said Company, and that you certify me, the said Mayor, the names and surnames of all your said number, where and with whom they dwell, of what Company they be Free, and what Captains or other skilful men that be of your said Company, or whom you know inhabiting within this City, fit to Train or lead the same men, of their names and dwelling places.

And that they be all in readiness, furnished as aforesaid, to muster, in their hose and doublets only, or doublets, hose, and jerkins, within Thirteen days next ensuing the date hereof; and for the levying of money, for the said furniture, and for the charge of powder, you shall collect such reasonable sums of money as you shall find meet for the same, by way of reasonable assessment, of every wealthy and able person of your Company, wherein we require you in any wise to spare the poorer sort of Freemen, although you somewhat more largely burthen the rich.

Given at the Guildhall of this City of London the fifteenth day of March, 1577. SEBRIGHT.

A subsequent entry in the Records of this Company specifies the amount of money collected for 'the furnishing of the Souldiers.'

Sum of all the money received of Freemen, Foreigners, Strangers, for the furnishing of Soldiers, doth amount unto xxij li. xvij s. xj d.

Lee Road, Blackheath.

Can any of your correspondents inform me from what author these lines are taken?

Their names shall nerve the patriot band
Upraised to save a sinking land,
And piety shall learn to mourn
With holier sorrow o'er their urn.

ANOMALY OF WEALTH.

James Brydges, Duke of Chandos, who had been Paymaster of the Forces during Queen Anne's wars, accumulated such a vast sum of money, that he determined to erect two more than royal edifices, and maintain them in a style of cost and magnificence far exceeding any of the then existing ducal nobility. The town house was in Cavendish Square; and his country house was at Canons, near Edgeware. The latter seemed built to be transmitted to ages of posterity; the walls were of a fabulous thickness, and the cost of the structure is said to have exceeded 250,000*l*. The Duke affected in all matters, the bearing, conduct, and hauteur of a Sovereign Prince, and the furniture at Canons was unexampled for its magnificence. Pope, in his 'Satire on False Taste,' thus sarcastically alludes to the extreme folly of its proprietor.

To Timon's villa let us pass a day,
Where all cry out, 'What sums are thrown away!'
So proud, so grand, of that stupendous air,
Soft and agreeable can come never there.

Who but must laugh, the master when he sees,
A puny insect shiv'ring in the breeze;
Lo! what huge heaps of littleness around!
The whole, a labour'd quarry above ground.

And now the chapel's silver bell you hear,
That summons you to all the pride of pray'r;
Light quirks of music, broken and uneven,
Make the soul dance upon a jig to heaven.

Another age shall see the golden ear,
Imbrown the slope, and nod on the parterre;
Deep harvest bury all his pride has planned,
And laughing Ceres re-assume the land.

The Duke died at Canons, August 9, 1744, and his heir finding the hereditary fortune of his family insignificant to the retaining of the mansion, the furniture, its decorations, and the materials of the buildings were sold by auction in 1747, at very inconsiderable sums; thus verifying Pope's prediction. The dealers even found their commodities purchased there remain on hand, and the following, a folio leaf, here reprinted, will doubtless afford the reader some gratification. It was issued by a broker who had effected these purchases, and was unable to dispose of them.

* Jean Baptiste Monoyer, a Dutch painter, memorable for his flower painting, in which he excelled in the boldness of his composition, the energy of his touch, and the force of his colouring. He died in Pall Mall, in 1699; his contemporaries generally designated him by name Baptiste.

HANDEL CENTENNIAL COMMEMORATION.

Handel died April 14, 1759, in his seventy-and year, and was buried in Westminster Abbey. It is proposed, on the occasion of the approaching centennial anniversary of his death, to raise a statue to his memory in Halle, his native town, and a Committee, having that object in view, was there constituted about a year since, and made such satisfactory progress in the all-important purport of collecting subscriptions, that Heidekel, the sculptor, at Berlin, has been directed to proceed in the elaboration of his colossal model of the great master. A smaller study, from two to three feet high, as a model for the larger work, has been finished, and has already obtained the highest approbation, more particularly of the two most accredited best judges of art in Germany, the King of Prussia and the Duke of Saxe-Coburg. It is stated there is a branch Committee in London for the advancement of the Commemoration and the Statue.

ROUBILLIAC MISREPRESENTED.

Roubiliac's onward course through life appears to have been impelled by his merit solely, although later it is stated to have arisen from a very different cause. Walpole, in reference to Roubiliac, observes, 'he became a formidable rival to Rysbrack, and, latterly, was more employed. He had little business till Sir Edwin Walpole recommended him to execute half the busts at Trinity College, Dublin, and by the same patron's interest he was employed on the monument of John Duke of Argyll, in Westminster Abbey. His statue of Handel, in the garden at Vauxhall, fixed Roubiliac's fame.' Roubiliac died in insolvent circumstances in St. Martin's Lane, January 11, 1762, and in May, 1765, first appeared the following statement: —

The following anecdote of the late famous Mr. Roubiliac deserves to be recorded. Some years since the above celebrated statuary found a parcel of bank notes in the churchyard of St. Martin's-in-the-Fields, to the amount of 7000*l.*, the property of a Yorkshire gentleman, who advertised a reward of 500*l.*, in consequence of which Mr. Roubiliac returned the notes, but generously refused to take the reward, though at that time he was greatly distressed for money; the gentleman, charmed with his behavior, made him a present of a fine set of plate, and left him 1000*l.* in his will, in case he survived him; but Mr. Roubiliac dying first rendered the gentleman's grateful intention of no effect.

A gentleman at Carlisle lately found a parcel of bank notes, to return which he directly advertised for the owner.

Mr. Roubiliac, the celebrated statuary, once found in the street a pocket-book, with notes in it for 4000*l.* The loser advertised for them a reward of 500*l.* Roubiliac instantly restored the notes, and to the last persisted in refusing the reward. Soon afterwards the person died and left to Mr. Roubiliac a legacy of 1200*l.*

Editors are, however, generally sad blundering fellows, Shakespeare Boaden being then the editor

'The Argus,' and that paper, on October 3, following, contained the following amendment:—

Mr. Editor,—The paragraph which appeared in your paper, last week, respecting Mr. Roubiliac was rather falsely represented; the sum found in the pocket-book amounted to 9000*l.* instead of 4000*l.* It was found in Lancaster-court, St. Martin's-lane.

Mr. Roubiliac dying some years before the gentleman who lost the book, the legacy, if mentioned in the will, of which I never received information, was never paid to any of the family. This I can assure you to be true, upon very good authority, and shall be obliged to you to insert it in your much admired paper.

I am, Sir, your humble servant, I—.

From this it will be seen a story loses nothing by telling, and Northcote, no great adept in the choice of his materials for the Memoirs of Sir Joshua Reynolds,* records:—

Of Roubiliac it is a pleasing circumstance to record, that his own goodness of heart first brought his excellent abilities into notice, and that his great success in life seems to have depended, in some degree, on his honest and liberal conduct soon after he came to England. He was at that time merely working as a journeyman for a person of the name of Carter; and the young artist having spent an evening at Vauxhall, on his return picked up a pocket-book, which he discovered, on examining it at his lodgings, to contain a considerable number of bank notes, together with some papers apparently of consequence to the owner. He immediately advertised the circumstance, and a claimant soon appeared, who was so pleased with the integrity of the youth, and so struck with his genius, of which he shewed several specimens, that he not only, being a man of rank and fortune, gave him a handsome remuneration, but also promised to patronise him through life, and faithfully performed that promise.

The Rev. James Dallaway, who received from Major fifty pounds per volume for editing the edition of Walpole's Anecdotes, 1827, has adopted Northcote's idle story,† and quoting the octavo edition of his Memoir of Reynolds, vol. 1, p. 49, thus renders it:

Sir Joshua Reynolds related an anecdote of Roubiliac, whom he knew well, extremely honourable, as an instance of moral feeling. Very soon after he arrived in England, and was then working as journeyman to Carter, a maker of monuments; having spent an evening at Vauxhall, on his return he picked up a pocket-book, which he found to inclose several bank notes of value. He immediately advertised the circumstance, and a gentleman of fashion (Sir Edward Walpole) claimed the pocket-book. Justly appreciating the integrity of the poor young man, and the specimens of his skill and talent which he exhibited, he promised to patronise him through life, and he faithfully performed that promise.

It is thus apparent the assertion of Roubiliac's finding the parcel of bank notes is an idle fiction, adds nothing to the sculptor's distinction or fame, and should find no place in any biography of him.

Z.

* Edition 1813, 4to. pp. 29, 30. Northcote further erroneously states he was employed by Carter. Cheers was Roubiliac's early employer, not Carter.

FREDERICK THE GREAT'S GREYHOUND.

The attachment of Frederick the Second, of Prussia, to dogs was a leading feature in his character, and he constantly expressed his great partiality to these faithful and good natured animals. He had generally in his cabinet a number of small leather balls for his favorites to divert themselves. If they were ill, he ordered that they should have every possible attention; and in his earliest campaigns one of them accompanied him every where. On one occasion, attended by a favorite greyhound named Biche, he ventured too far, and perceived at a distance, but advancing to where he was, a troop of Pandours. To avoid them was impossible, except by suddenly concealing himself under the arch of a bridge that had been thrown over a wide ditch. He did so, and in this rather unkingly situation was hidden from casual observance, and had nothing to apprehend for his safety, unless the barking of his greyhound should betray him to the Pandours while passing over him on the bridge; but the animal, as if conscious of her master's danger, pressed close to his person, without the least noise. The King soon after met General Ruthenburgh, or Ruthenburgh, to whom he smilingly presented little Biche, as one of his most faithful friends; but, as the adage goes, 'the best of friends must part,' it so happened, in the battle near Soor, the king's baggage, with little Biche, fell into the hands of the Austrians, and the companion of royalty was taken by the lady of General Nadasti, who, after many solicitations, and most unwillingly, was prevailed on to permit Biche's return to her rightful owner.

Biche was brought back to the palace, while the monarch was busily employed with his pen in his cabinet. General Ruthenburgh, unwilling to disturb him, opened the door gently, and Biche entering unperceived by the King, jumped upon the table, stood before her master, and laying her paws on his shoulders, in the fondest manner evinced her delight. Frederick was so much pleased that tears glistened in his eyes, and Biche was absolved from all future military forays.

In the palace of Sans Souci a little monument was raised to the memory of this faithful animal, and her progeny remained about the King's person when he died.

BYRON'S CHILDE ALABRIQUE.

The following inedited letter of Miss Jane Porter, authoress of Scottish Chiefs, Thaddeus of Warsaw, and other popular works, addressed to Sir S. E. Brydges, 'the poet of Wootton,' will, doubtless, be read with gratification, from the admirable sentiments it inculcates.

Long Ditton, August 26th, 1813.

I have just received Mr. Gillies' letter of the 21st, so kindly forwarded by you. I have yet to thank you, my dear Sir, for the one you sent to me before, and the hasty, but interesting letter from yourself, of the 11th. You there give me a glimpse of your early life, and of the cloud of adverse circumstances which obscured its brightness. I am well acquainted in the person of beings dear to me from my infancy, with the envy that menaces high talents, and with the trials which await the superior endowments of genius; but these trials, I am convinced, are given to prove, and to display the powers of those minds; to cause them to exercise their mental and moral strength, and to refine, confirm, and brighten their character, as we do gold in the furnace—as only the bravest spirits in an army are placed in the posts of extremest danger, which are also the posts of honour, so Providence selects the greatest souls to be examples of Fortitude, under suffering, and magnanimity under the oppressions of the world. It is a high commission, dear Sir, that such spirits are called upon to fulfil; and if at last, the whole is achieved so as to merit the approbation of the Almighty Dispenser of all our faculties how little must be the regret, that half the world were your enemies!

I warmly sympathise in your admiration of the Bard of Childe Alarique, but I cannot agree with you, that "the poet of Wooton," is at all inferior. There is a deep pathos, a sublime purity of sentiment in both, that I have nowhere seen excelled. When poetry breathes the inspiration of virtue, it is then, that we feel her celestial birth; it is then, that we reverence the poet as only next in dignity to the prophet.

Childe Alarique only requires to be known to make itself a thousand friends, and as far as my little power will operate towards that effect, it shall be exerted. I am acquainted with the Editor of the New Review, published by Valpy, and I will send him an analysis of the poem, which is the form in which that work reviews authors.

Mr. Gillies repeats having seen my brother, and mentions his having rather confidently promised to my Scottish friends, my visiting their country this autumn; Alas! my dear brother, is little aware how constantly the delicate state of my mother's health confines me to within a day's journey, at farthest, distant from her. I have hardly a hope of reaching Scotland at all; certainly not, unless she were well enough to accompany me.

When does your family return to town? I hope early in the spring, as then my brother will be settled in town, for the season, and I shall have frequent opportunities of enjoying the society of Lady Brydges and yourself.

Pray remember me with all kind wishes to her, and to your sweet daughters; and believe me, dear Sir, very much yours.

JANE PORTER.

HASWELL.—Can any of your Correspondents inform me in what part of Scotland the family of Haswell, or as it was formerly written, Hessewelle, or with other alterations more or less assimilated to the one way or other, was or is located? The original family belongs, I believe, to Co. Durham. I find records of them there from the 13th century, but cannot trace the Scotch family at all. Any light upon this subject would much oblige one of that name.

On the fly leaf of a copy of the Musæ Anglicanæ that some years since came under my notice, was the following inscription:

Sum
SEPTIMI COLLINSON,
Cujus quod sum mihi gratulor,
Illius quippe
Meas qui asperere possit elegantias
Omnigenasque veneres,
Jucunde non magis quam utilitur
Sibi et reipublicæ,
Quorum utriusque interest,
Ut optimum ingenium,
Gravioribus studiis exercitatum,
Pieris pulvis rescitur!
Noli, lector, adulatorem suspicari,
Namque invidus laudo.

Dr. Collinson, who was a length of time Provost of Queen's College, and Margaret Professor of Divinity in the University of Oxford, died in 1827.

PRE-EMINENCE OF SCIENCE.

A recent letter from Naples shews that Science, though for a time depressed, will bound beyond human control. Signor Gasparini, a distinguished Neapolitan botanist, held, in 1848, a situation in the University of his native country, but, although he took no part in politics, King Bomba, after his violation of the Constitution, deprived the Professor of his situation, and reduced him to extreme poverty. Several applications to be reinstated were made without producing effect on the Neapolitan Government. In the meantime, a learned botanist from Vienna visited Naples, and finding the low and melancholy condition to which Signor Gasparini was involved, promised to procure an appointment for him in the Lombardo-Venetian provinces, which proffered kindness he gratefully accepted. The Neapolitan Government, however, interfered, and declared that the King would see with displeasure one of his disgraced professors appointed to an official situation by a friendly Government. The affair appeared to have fallen altogether in abeyance, until the recent visit of the Emperor of Austria to his Italian dominions, when, by an Imperial Decree, dated March 13, Signor Gasparini was appointed Professor of Botany in the University of Pavia. Another extraordinary circumstance occurred connected with this affair which is deserving of especial notice. When Baron Martini, the Austrian Minister at Naples, announced to Signor Gasparini his appointment, he added, 'His Majesty sends you near the frontiers of Piedmont, for he is determined to compete with the King of that country in extending education, and protecting the arts and sciences in Italy.'

Vidocq, whose auto-biography, from his extraordinary notoriety as connected with the police of Paris, created no little attraction even in this metropolis, died recently at Paris, in his seventy-eighth year.

WILLIS and SOTHERAN beg to call the attention of their Customers to the three following Fine Works, for which they will be happy to receive Subscribers' Names.

On JULY 1st WILL BE PUBLISHED, PART I. of

A Magnificent Illustrated Chromo-Lithographic Work on

THE ART TREASURES OF THE UNITED KINGDOM;

CONSISTING OF EXAMPLES SELECTED FROM

THE MANCHESTER ART TREASURES EXHIBITION OF 1857.

The Series will embrace—SCULPTURE—The CERAMIC—METALLIC—VITREOUS—TEXTILE—and other DECORATIVE ARTS; and each Division of the Work will be accompanied by Historical and Descriptive Essays by Writers of the highest authority; thus—

SCULPTURE	will be described by	GEORGE SCHARF, jun.,	and will consist of about	17 Plates.
CERAMIC ART	"	J. C. ROBINSON.....	"	"
VITREOUS ART	"	"	"	"
METALLIC ART	"	DIGBY WYATT	"	"
TEXTILE ART	"	OWEN JONES	"	"
DECORATIVE ART	"	J. B. WARING, Archt.	"	"

Total 100 Plates.

The Letter-Press Description will be interspersed with at least Eighty Wood Engravings.

THE ENTIRE WORK WILL BE

PRODUCED UNDER THE DIRECTION OF J. B. WARING,

AND

EXECUTED IN CHROMO-LITHOGRAPHY BY F. BEDFORD.

It is intended that this Work shall be the most beautiful ever produced in colours; that it shall be a standard or rather series of standard works on the subjects treated of; a book for the antiquary, virtuoso, and all persons of taste; alike valuable to the artist and manufacturer, and a most attractive and elegant book for the drawing-room table. Moreover, it will be the ONLY ILLUSTRATED HISTORICAL WORK ON THE EXHIBITION.

It is intended that the entire series of One Hundred Plates shall be produced in the highest style of Chromo-lithography. The original drawings will be based upon Photographic copies of the subjects, thus insuring perfect accuracy of form, and all ornamental detail, whilst colour will give the exact appearance of the actual objects. As the selection will be made from the most choice and prominent subjects of the Art Treasures Exhibition, it is felt that whilst that collection consists of the chefs-d'œuvre of Art of the entire kingdom, this work will contain none but the most precious gems that can be chosen therefrom.

Most of the Plates will contain a group of objects arranged in a picturesque manner, but so as to give every prominence to the special beauties of each particular work: by this method a very large number of the best examples will be concentrated in the series.

Terms of Publication.

The work will consist of One Hundred highly-executed Chromo-lithographic Plates, with descriptive letterpress enriched with wood-engravings. The size will be 15½ by 11½; the issue will be in parts fortnightly, on the 1st and 15th of each month. Each Part will be in a wrapper, and will contain three, occasionally four, Plates, with the letterpress description at limited intervals. The price of the part will be 10s. 6d. There will be thirty-two Parts in all.

A Guarantee will be given that the Edition shall be limited to Seven Hundred Copies, and the Stones then Destroyed, so that No Cheaper or Inferior Issue can ever be produced. The VALUE of the Work will thus be maintained, and will GRADUALLY INCREASE. The copies will be delivered in the exact order of subscription, and with the last Part will be published a list of the Subscribers for the seven hundred copies.

EXHIBITION BUILDING, MANCHESTER, 1st May, 1857.

SIR,—The Executive Committee for conducting the Exhibition of Art Treasures of the United Kingdom have given the subject of your notes, of the 30th ult. and this day, their attentive consideration.

The Committee desire me to say that they quite approve of the appearance of the Work intended to be published by you, embracing as it does the Illustration of Sculpture, the Ceramic, Metallic, Vitreous, Textile, and other Decorative Arts, in all their varieties and modifications; and the Committee have no doubt that the work will be sent forth in such a manner as to add to your already extensive reputation, as well as to repay you for the heavy risk and responsibility attending its publication.

It is to be distinctly understood that written authority must be obtained by you from the Contributors to the Exhibition, and placed in the hands of the Committee, before Photographs or copies can be taken of the Works intrusted to their care.

In conclusion, I am directed to say that the Committee record their opinion that the proposed Work would be a most desirable and useful memorial of the General Museum of Arts to be opened to the public on the 5th of May.

I am, Sir,

Your obedient Servant,

(Signed)

THOS. HAMILTON, Secretary.

NOW PUBLISHING, A NEW EDITION OF LIBER STUDIORUM.

By J. M. W. TURNER, R.A.

The re-issue of this highly-prized and most valuable Work, after the original Drawings and Etchings of the late famous painter, J. M. Turner, will contain Seventy small folio Plates, and will be published in Fourteen Parts, each containing Five Plates, price 10s. 6d. each Part. Part I. is now ready.

Of the merits of this beautiful Work it is unnecessary to speak, for they are known to every lover of art. Copies of the former edition seldom occurred for sale, and when they did, they have brought high prices; indeed, recently a copy was sold by public auction for nearly One Hundred Pounds. An acceptable service has, therefore, been rendered to Art by the present edition, which is executed in the highest style of excellence, in perfect fac-simile of the original etchings by Mr. Turner. The style is that of the "Liber Veritatis" of Claude, engraved by Earlom.

Now Publishing in Monthly Parts, each containing Five Plates, in a Wrapper.

ARCHITECTURAL SKETCHES FROM THE CONTINENT,

A SERIES OF VIEWS AND DETAILS

FROM FRANCE, ITALY, AND GERMANY.

By RICHARD NORMAN SHAW, ARCHITECT.

AMONG the numerous works which have been published in England exemplifying the Architecture of the Middle Ages, comparatively few have been devoted to the fine specimens which are to be found thickly scattered over the Continent.

While every corner of the United Kingdom has been ransacked for fresh examples, and nearly every building of note has been more or less illustrated, many of the most beautiful works in France, Italy, and Germany remain entirely untouched, and very little known. This is, perhaps, chiefly remarkable in the case of France, the country of all others the most accessible, and undoubtedly the most richly stored with the triumphs of Medieval Genius.

This work can hardly pretend to be a detailed illustration of Continental Architecture. It simply aims at bringing into notice many views and details hitherto unknown, or so scattered among larger books as to be difficult of reference to inquirers. The Author hopes it may be the means of inspiring such of his countrymen as have not yet visited these scenes with a higher appreciation of the genius which has created works whose beauty is so endless in its variety.

The work, to be issued Monthly, will consist of Twenty Parts; each Part, price 3s. 6d., to contain Five Plates.

When completed, it will form one Volume of One Hundred Plates, with Title-page, Index, &c. Price £3. 10s. in Parts, or £3. 13s. 6d. in appropriate binding. Messrs. DAY AND SON have undertaken its publication, and the reputation which they enjoy is a sufficient guarantee that it will receive ample justice at their hands.

The following Testimonial in favour of the Work has been received by the Author.

"It is with much pleasure that we have examined the first Number of a new Work on the Medieval Architecture of the Continent, by Mr. R. N. Shaw.

"The Drawings from which this Work is to be executed have been prepared by Mr. Shaw, during a period of two years, whilst employed as Travelling Student to the Royal Academy; and, from a careful examination of his Sketches on his return, we have no hesitation in stating that the Work cannot fail to be highly interesting, not merely to the Architect, but to Artists and all taking any interest in the works of the Middle Ages.

"As the Plates are to be entirely Lithographed by Mr. Shaw, they will naturally retain all the character and spirit of the original Sketches.

(Signed)
